P R E F A C E .

The authorship of this genealogy of the Lyman family is to be ascribed to our deceased friend Miss Julia E. Lyman. It was the labor of her life, the completion of which she was not permitted to see. But by her tireless researches through life, she had collected materials from every quarter, and reduced them to such order in her admirable chart, that it was just practicable to take up the labors of her hands when they were palsied in death. This chart was the last labor of her life. The memory of it is saddened by the reflection that her assiduities in extreme debility from the advanced stages of disease may have hastened prematurely the fatal issue.

Had the pen dropped from her hand but a little earlier, before the completion of the chart, the labors of her life would have remained incomplete. The continuance of this work, begun only in reliance on the aid of the deceased, would have been dropped; and the work remained unpublished. But in an evil hour the undersigned, quite unconscious of the task he was assuming, resolved to carry on, according to his ability, the work suspended by the untimely decease of the principal agent and author. Under innumerable discouragements, embarrassments and difficulties resulting from the indifference and neglect of very many, the record of whose families was repeatedly sought in vain, and in the midst of accumulated domestic afflictions, the toilsome task has been pursued. New lineages of families totally unknown have been developed, often making up a record of several hundred names. The utmost diligence and care have been held in requisition to make the book a reliable and accurate record of the families whose register it may contain. But mistakes and errors without number may mar the record; for these we must bespeak a charitable indulgence. Notices of all errors and mistakes are particularly requested, that they may be entered in their proper place in an interleaved copy to be kept for that purpose for further reference.

Due acknowledgments have been made in another place for the invaluable contribution of the ancestral lineage of the Lemman, Lyman family in Great Britain by H. A. Lyman, Esq., of London, who has traced this back to the Norman conquest, and connected it with the Malcolms, kings of Scotland, A.D. 1000-1057. Grateful acknowledgments are also due for valuable and important contributions from the Rev. J. T. Dickinson, Middlefield, Conn.; Rev. P. W. Lyman, Belchertown, Mass.; Rev. H. Lyman, Marathon, N. Y.; G. H. Lyman, M.D., Boston; Geo. T. Lyman, Esq., Bellport, L. I.; A. S. Lyman, Esq., N. Y. City; Prof. C. S. Lyman, Yale College; Dea. Samuel Lyman, Southampton, Mass.; Dea. N. B. Lyman, Andover, Conn.; and Dea. C. W. Lyman, Columbia, Conn. Without these collateral aids, the work could never have been brought to its present degree of fullness and completeness, and probably would never have been published.

Thankful for all encouragement and aid, weary and worn by these protracted and fameless labors, too much depressed for exhilaration at the conclusion of them, the author quietly commits the book to the indulgent consideration of that great family, singularly unique and peculiar as being of one blood, offspring of one common ancestor, to whom this work is but their own family register. Scattered broadcast over all the land, may it be to them a bond of union to bind them together in firmer bonds of a common brotherhood. May it be an incentive to present and future generations to emulate the noble and sterling virtues of their venerable ancestors. May it invite them back, occasionally at least, to their New England homes around the dear old hearthstones, to study the outgrowth of their several families, to kindle anew that spirit of civil and religious liberty, which there, they or their forefathers first caught; and to carry back to their distant homes, those principles of intellectual and moral greatness from which our country's grandeur springs; "that makes her loved at home, revered abroad."

Long after we of the present, like former generations, shall have passed through life to our silent graves, some few may rise up, age after age, to bless the hearts and hands that formed and executed the purpose to collect the perishable materials, just passing into irrecoverable oblivion, of which the work of the genealogist is composed. The future historian may gather thence some shreds for the web he may then be weaving, and the historical painter may catch some lingering lineaments of the stern old Puritans for his group, on the canvas of other days, of those representative men who have left the grand, effaceless imprint of their character on succeeding generations. Whatever may be the result, the consciousness remains of having labored long and faithfully to perpetuate the memory of the worthy ancestry of a great, far-spreading family who have achieved an honorable position among many other families descended from Puritan ancestors in New England. Reposing in this quiet consciousness this work is commended to the attention of all of this family who would learn something of their ancestral history or cherish the memory of their honored ancestors.

SYNOPSIS OF THE GENERATIONS OF LYMANS.

The number of the several generations of this family, so far as the count has been carried, is found to be, as follows :

First Generation,.....	1
Second Generation,.....	9
Third Generation,.....	27
Fourth Generation,.....	64
Fifth Generation,.....	191
Sixth Generation,.....	381
Seventh Generation,.....	947

Of these generations the deceased are.....	486

Still living.....	4060
To these add of Seventh Gen. still living, say.....	40

The number of Lymans now living,..... 4100

Of the 5th and 6th generations 572, 26 were in the Revolutionary war ; allowing  $\frac{1}{5} = 114$  to be able to bear arms,  $\frac{2}{114}$  or more than  $\frac{1}{5}$  of the able bodied men were in the army battling for our independence.

Bearing the name of Lyman 100 were in the war of the late rebellion. The 8th and 9th generations equal 4002 ;  $\frac{1}{5}$  fighting men equal 800, of whom 100 or  $\frac{1}{5}$  were in the war of the rebellion. Of these many died in the rebel states of disease or on the field of battle, some by the slow torture of starvation in Andersonville or the Libby prison, but, of all these no accurate count has been made.

From 10 colleges 93 Lymans have graduated, but the number graduating from all the colleges in the country has not been ascertained. Our intention was to ascertain the entire number of Lymans and descendants from Lyman mothers, together with the number in each of the learned professions, but having neither leisure nor health for the further prosecution of these inquiries we remit them to the inquisitive reader who has the data at hand in the book for these and similar researches. A large proportion have filled the office of the ministry, and a much larger number have held office in the church as deacons and elders.

1. Descendants of Richard <sup>3</sup> , son of Richard <sup>2</sup> ,.....	2735

The materials for a suitable obituary notice of Dr. Lyman came to hand too late for insertion in its appropriate place. The following extracts from his last sermon on the "Hidden Life of the Christian," are given as a beautiful illustration of his own Christian life and character:

Ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. COL. III: 3.

Our physical life, mysterious and subtle though it be, is exposed to the malice of its enemies, and liable at any moment to be destroyed. It is hidden in ourselves, and held by a feeble tenure. Disease may poison it, accident may crush it, the assassin may stab it, and it dies. It is ever in the road of death. Not so our spiritual life. It is hidden away in God, where disease cannot reach it, where the poison of the world cannot infect it, and where no enemy can assail it. God is its fountain. It has its spring in Him, and the strong arms of the Almighty protect it, and eyes that never sleep keep ceaseless guard over it. No foe which is not stronger than God can ever storm its citadel or penetrate its hidden home. So not only is its fountain protected, but all its channels are covered and guarded. Human wisdom, and not even Satanic cunning, can explore them or seek out their hiding place. As the stream which has its head on some bald, ice-bound, inaccessible mountain top, and whose channel is buried and concealed in its rocky bosom, until it bursts forth from the earth at your feet, so is the Christian's life, in its fountain and all its channels, protected, and hidden in the bosom of God. Here and there you see a Christian life, on the earth and among men, and yet so manifestly not of the earth or of the spirit of men, that it seems like some rare and beautiful exotic. By any earth born theory it cannot be accounted for. You see it in its peace and beauty, in its daily outgivings of blessing, and it fills you with wonder and admiration. You call it a miracle and so it is—one of Christ's silent miracles—the miracle of a Christly life.

But there is yet another sense in which, to-day, this life in Christ is to us a hidden life. It is the eternal life, the Christian life only in its early beginnings, dimmed and obscured by the weaknesses and frailties of the flesh, and darkened and overshadowed by its mortal and carnal surroundings. Its glory doth not yet appear. It is hidden in the rubbish of the earthly and the sensual. "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." But this is not always so to be. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him," "for we shall see him as he is." Great honor is yet to be rendered to the Son of God, before all the universe, for the Christly work of human redemption. Peerless is to be the glory of man's Redeemer. Now, he, who is our life, is hidden from mortal vision. Though present, he is yet concealed. But in the fullness of time he is to be made manifest. He shall come in the glory of the Father and with him all the holy angels. Not a part simply of the heavenly host, but all the mighty army of the skies shall form his retinue. Beyond all human conception of glory, shall be the greatness and the splendor of that day. He comes to meet, and recognize, and gather home his redeemed children on earth, and every eye shall see him. And then, in that glorious hour, "when he who is our life, shall appear, shall we also appear with him in glory," if we are his children. And then, in the presence of the intelligent universe, shall Christ welcome his elected bride, his blood bought Church to her home in the mansions of the Father, and with her sit down to the marriage supper of the Lamb. Who can conceive the glory of that hour?

Other eloquent sentences, belonging to this discourse, fell from the lips of the lamented author, but the opportunity of recalling them is gone forever. It escaped with the breath that gave them utterance. He was wonderfully gifted in the power of extemporaneous speech, and many of his written sermons were doubly effective by reason of these interjected, or closing sentences, inspired by the occasion. The members of the Second Presbyterian Church will never forget the foregoing sermon, preached on the day of their communion Sabbath, January 14, 1872, only five days before he fell asleep in Jesus.

We cannot better close our allusion to the pastor of the Euclid Avenue Presbyterian Church, than by reprinting these lines of Bonar, so frequently quoted by Dr. Lyman, and so beautifully characteristic of his short but blessed ministry:

"My name, and my place, and my tomb all forgotten,
 The brief race of time well and patiently run.
 So let me pass away, peacefully, silently,
 Only remembered by what I have done.
 Gladly away from this toil would I hasten,
 Up to the crown that for me has been won;
 Unthought of by man in rewards or in praises,

Mr. B. S. Lyman of Philadelphia, who was lately in the service of the British government in India as a mining engineer, boring for rock oil in the Punjab, has published two brief but valuable memoirs on the Punjab oil region (lying in the corner between Cashmere and Cabul, between latitudes 32° 31' and 33° 47'), which is also a region of historical interest, being near the supposed cradle of the Aryan or Indo-European races. It is within a few miles of Attok, where Alexander the Great crossed the Indus, and of Taxila, where he was hospitably entertained by King Taxiles; the "fabulous Hydaspes," now the Jhelum river, flows across one corner of this oil region, and near by is the traditional site of one of the compassionate miracles of Buddha, who once traversed this nook of the world. The first of Mr. Lyman's memoirs was his "General Report of the Punjab Oil Lands," printed by Lord Mayo's government at Lahore in 1870, an official folio of 50 pages with a set of maps attached; but this is not generally accessible. The second is a briefer paper on the Topography of the Punjab Oil Region read before the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, last January, and printed in Vol. xv of its Transactions. It is also published separately by the author, making 14 large quarto pages, and with a geological and topographical sketch-map of the region added. It is an interesting paper, speaking briefly of the main features of the region described, its geological character and mineral products, and communicating much information that is at once new and valuable. Although several English geologists have spoken of this tract in the Punjab, none have studied it so minutely as Mr. Lyman, who was also the first American geologist to visit it.

PART I.

The Lymans in Great Britain.

I. THE LYMAN NAME.

The origin and significancy of modern English names, involved in inexplicable mystery, opens a boundless range for theories and fanciful speculations quite foreign to our taste and purpose. In Anglo-Saxon, Leoman, (lion-man?) appears as the name of an Anglo-Saxon land holder prior to the Norman conquest. Léoman, rolling swiftly from the tongue in familiar conversation, might easily become Leman. Whether this is the true origin and meaning of the name — deus aliqui viderit — some theorist of keener insight may determine. In authentic history the original name was LEMAN.

Like most of the English surnames, this has passed through many changes in settling down to the present orthography. It has been written Lehman, Leyman, Lyeman, Lemman, Lemon, Leman and de Le Man. The French, supposing the name to be derived from l'aiman, have written it L'aiman. In America the name has taken the form, Liman, Limen, Limon, Limmon, Lemon, Leamond and Lemond. In the records both of the town and of the church in Northampton, for the first fifty years or more, the name is generally written Liman; early in the last century it took the fixed and settled form of the present appropriate orthography, LYMAN.

The pedigree of the Lymans in England, the orthography of the name and identity of the Lymans and the Lemans have been the subject of a protracted and exhaustive investigation by H. A. Lyman, Esq., of London, to whom we are indebted for the following summary of the pedigree of the family in England. Every English record likely to throw light upon the subject has been searched, particularly the De Banco, Coram Rege, Subsidy and Quo Warranto Rolls, extending from the 5th Richard I Rolls. From all these the conclusion is irresistible that the names Leman and Lyman are one and the same. That they were recognized as the same appears from the fact that Sir John Leman, lord mayor of London, 1616, had a correspondence with the widow of Henry Lyman, brother of Richard, respecting her return to England; and that the father of Sir John held part and parcel of the same estate which came into the possession of the Lymans by the marriage of Thomas Lyman, of Navistoke, with Elizabeth Lambert. The name Lyman, in this orthography, appears in the parish records of High Ongar as far back as 1521.

The change of the vowels e and i to y is in entire accordance with the analogies of our language in its primitive forms; "i exchanges with y in writing and sometimes with ea, miht, myht, meaht, might, y is i-umlaut of u and ea. It was a favorite letter with the penmen, and is often found for i and sometimes for e, ae: cyning, king, eald, yldest, old, oldest, lyden, leden, Latin." March's Anglo-Saxon Grammar p. 12, § 23.

The following illustrations are also given by the same author: "Latin, in the Anglo-Saxon, Leden, is often written Lyden. In the preface to the Heptateuch of Ælfric, the fourth line, has of Ledene, from Latin; line 20, Lyden understandon, to understand Latin; the ending nes, Gothic is very often nys, § 228. Thus in Math., 5:6, righteousness is rightwisnesse in one manuscript; nysse in another, and so other words in ness; nêten is often written nyten, neat cattle; Ps., 135:8, hel, hell, is written hyl, Cadman, p. 307, line 27 and elsewhere hlehhan, hlahian, laugh is found hlyhhan, in Ædelstan, 47, Judith, 23, and examples without number might be enumerated."

The substitution of y for i is too frequent and familiar to require illustration. Flynt, Lynd, Lyndsay, Van Syckle, etc. The German pronunciation of Lyman, is precisely the same as ours of Leman. The two forms of orthography are only different methods of representing by symbols the same sound, and the names Leman, Liman and Lyman are doubtless one and the same.

The careless and variable orthography of this family name in ancient records is apparent in the following references: In the Subsidy Rolls for Kent, 1st Ed., iii, the name is written Ljeman, and in the subsequent rolls for the same place Lemman and Leman. In a pedigree of the family, John, the grandfather of Sir John, Lord Mayor, is called "John de Le Mans," but Sir John's name is uniformly Leman. In a pedigree from "The Visitation of London, 1663-4," the father and brothers of Sir John are written "Lemman," while Sir John is entered "Lemon." The eldest son of Sir John's brother is entered "Lemon," and his youngest son "Leman."

Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, has the names Lemon, Leamond, Lemond, Leman and Lyman. Through all these intermediate changes the conclusion is easy, natural and irresistible, that the ancient Leman has changed to the modern Lyman — both one and the same.

II. THE FRONTISPIECE AND ARMS OF THE FAMILY.

The Lyman family have, at different times, borne five separate armorial bearings or emblems, of which two only are worthy of particular notice. The arms that form the frontispiece seem to have been adopted long before any official grant of arms was made. They are the oldest and apparently the original family bearings. They appear in an old manuscript roll of arms, under the name of Lyman. They are now recorded as used by "Lemon, Lemmon, Lee-man and Leman." The same arms are found in Burke's Armory where they are entered as the arms of "Lyman or Leman."

We are indebted to Mr. H. A. Lyman, of London, for the following extracts from the best authorities relating to English heraldry, which give, in a concise form, the substance of many hundreds of books which, from time to time, have been printed on this subject:

"In the beginning of the 16th century, owing to the multiplicity of abuses and irregularities which had crept into all matters appertaining to the descent of arms, commissions were issued under the great seal empowering the heralds to visit their different provinces or districts, as often as they deemed it necessary, and to convene before them all those who bore or assumed to bear arms, and to cause them to produce and to show by what authority and right they challenged the said use of arms. These circuits were called visitations. The earliest of these visitations was held in 1528-1529. These were regularly made every twenty-five or thirty years, until the close of the 17th century. The records or register book of these visitations are of the highest importance. Unfortunately, many of the books are now lost, and those that remain are scattered among the private and public libraries of the kingdom."

"Nothing is absolutely known concerning it beyond the fact that the middle of the 12th century is the earliest period to which the bearing of heraldic devices properly so-called can be traced; and the commencement of the 13th, the time about which they became hereditary.

"The earliest roll of arms of which we have any notice is of the reign of Henry III (1216), and the reign of Edward I presents us with the earliest heraldic document extant.

"The oldest writer on heraldry was Nicholas Upton, whose treatise was composed in the reign of Henry V, (1413). His definitions and explanations can only be looked upon as assertions made nearly three hundred years after the origin of the practice, and, consequently, to be believed, or not, according to the discretion of the reader.

× "College of Arms was founded reign of Richard III, (1483)."

In the frontispiece the central figure, within and under the crest of the helmet and the rampant bull, is divided into four parts representing three coats of arms. The first and fourth is that of the Lymans repeated in the fourth division to make up the quarterly. In the Lyman arms the significant figure is the annulet or ring within the triangle. This very ancient and frequent emblem in heraldry is differently interpreted. It is said to be an emblem of eternity, having neither beginning nor end. In Webster's Dictionary it is described as "formerly reputed to be a mark of nobility and jurisdiction. It is also a mark of distinctive form by the fifth brother of a family in his coat of arms."

The second figure in the quarterly is the arms of Elizabeth Lambert, the heiress, who by her marriage about 1488, with Thomas Lyman, of Navistoke, near High Ongar, brought large estates into the family.

The coat of arms most frequently adopted by the Lymans, in which dolphins play a conspicuous part, is that of Sir John Lyman lord mayor of London, a few years before the first immigration to this country. Sir John was largely interested in the Fishmongers Company, and the dolphins, it is suggested, may have some reference to this interest. The crest is surmounted by a pelican in her nest feeding her young. The significancy of these emblems and the origin of these armorial bearings is given by Burke: In the 12th year of the reign of King James the first, Jan. 25, 1615, a coat of arms was granted to Sir John Leman, viz: "Azure, a chevron embowed, three dolphins Naiaant, Argent." These dolphins are said to be "symbols of social love." The crest has a pelican with a bloody crest feeding her young — also an emblem of love.

III. PEDIGREE OF THE LYMANS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

The old records of England throw but little light upon the origin, or early history of this ancient Saxon family; and although inheritors of estates at the time of the conquest of England, often derived their surnames from the place of their abode, our investigations do not enable us to determine what the connection of home or inheritance was, if any ever existed, between the Leman family, and the little ancient place called Lymen, that was once a hamlet in the county of Kent. Our first knowledge of this family name is obtained from the register or survey of the lands of England, framed by the order of King William the Conqueror, and known as Doomsday Book. The translation from this record of eight hundred years ago (vol. 1, p. 38a), is as follows:

"HAMPSHIRE. The King's land. Bosmere Hundred. The King himself holds  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hides<sup>1</sup> in Hayling Island.

LEMAN held them in parcenary<sup>2</sup> of King Edward, Harold deprived him of them when he usurped the kingdom, and converted them into a royal manor, and they so remain. They were then assessed at  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hides, now at nothing. There are  $1\frac{1}{2}$  ploughland,<sup>3</sup> one in demesne,<sup>4</sup> with one villein,<sup>5</sup> and eight cottagers,<sup>6</sup> with half a ploughland. There is also  $1\frac{1}{2}$  acres of meadow. In the time of King Edward ' was worth forty shillings, afterwards twenty shillings, now seventy shillings."

"MEONSTOKE Hundred. The King holds SOBERTON. LIMAN held it of Earl Godwin. Harold, when he reigned, took it from him, and made it a royal manor, and it so remains. Leman himself could not remove where he wished. It is said that he held lands in Finchdean Hundred, in parcenary. It was then assessed at 4 hides, now at nothing. It contains 2 ploughlands, half a ploughland in demesne. There are six villeins and three cottagers, with two ploughlands, and two mills, which pay fifteen shillings, and one acre of meadow. Its value was and is, three pounds."

There can be little doubt but that this Saxon Leman continued the tenancy of the lands described, until his death, and that he was succeeded in the tenancy by his son OSBERT described as "OSBERT FIL LEMAN," and who in the time of Henry I, was a witness to a charter touching the grant of certain lands to the Abbot of Battle. This Osbert was succeeded by his two sons, JOHN and RICHARD, both paying taxes upon their lands during the reign of King Stephen, and Henry II, the former holding in the island of Hayling, and the latter in the counties Southampton, Norfolk, and Kent. This first Richard Leman, had issue, JOHN, who held lands in the county Southampton, time Henry II, and Richard I, and from the receipts for the Exchequer we find he was one of the contractors for the supply of timber for the repairing and enlarging of the fortifications of the castle of Rochester, Kent. He was succeeded by his eldest son ELDRED, who continued in the possession of the lands in county Southampton, and also held lands in Luthyngland, county Suffolk, conjointly with his brother ROBERT, which said lands they held of the king in capeti, time of King John. This Robert, the brother of Eldred, married and had issue. Eldred had issue: two sons, ALAN and ROBERT, the latter settled in St. Edigie, county Cambridge.

ALAN held lands at Stane and Wilburham, county Cambridge, of the Knights Templar, time of Henry III.

I. THOMAS Lyman, alias Leman, held divers land, county Wiltes, during his father's lifetime, reign of Henry III. In 3d Edward I, A. D. 1275, he was fined twenty pence by Walter de Sterteslegh, sheriff of Wiltes, for default in attending a certain inquisition to which he been summoned. He also held land of the abbot of St. Edward, of Oxford.

II. RICHARD Leman held lands of the Knights Templar, County Bedford, time Edward I.

WILLIAM Leman, tenant to Sir John de Grey, county Bedford, 10th Edward I, A. D. 1282.

III. ALISALON Lyeman purchased lands in the Hundred of Beawisberg, now called Beaksbourne, county Kent, time of Edward I. Had possession of these lands during the reign of Edward II, A. D. 1307 to 1327, and was living 1st Edward III, at the collection of the 20th, being the tax then levied, as appears by the Subsidy Roll for that year, for the said Hundred.

JOHN Leyman of Colchester, county Essex, taxation of his effects from 24th Edward I, to 2d Edward II, A. D. 1309.

IV. ESPILON Lyman, alias Lemman, succeeded his father in the possession of the estate at Beawisberg, county Kent, upon which he was taxed until the 2d Ed. III, A. D. 1349.

JOHN Leman and NICHOLAS Leman held during the life time of their father under Thos. de Sugterton, returned Knight of the shire Norfolk, 1 Ed. II, A. D. 1307.

V. SALOMAN Lyman, eldest son and heir, became possessed of the estate at Beawisberg upon the death of his father and was succeeded by his son.

WILLIAM, about the 13th Richard II, A. D. 1380, who from the Subsidy and De Banco Rolls must have held this estate for a period of 22 years. This Salomon mentioned had also issue JOHN and ROBERT, and it is believed, one Richard, defendant in a plea of debt, time Henry IV, about A. D. 1405.

ROBERT of Norfolk.

✓ VI. ROBERT Lyman of Beawisberg, defendant in a plea of debt, 5th Henry V, A. D. 1418, and 8th Henry VI, A. D. 1430.

✓ JOHN Leman, alias Lyman, citizen and merchant of London, A. D. 1314 to 1322, time Henry V, afterwards purchased lands at Navistoke, Wethersfield, and Norton Munderville, county Essex. In the 10th Henry VI, A. D. 1432, he was bound in the Kings Chancery in the sum of one hundred pounds, to answer for one Master Thomas Mireton, a Scotchman, who, coming into England with letters from the king of Scotland to the council at Westminster, was taken prisoner by Sir William Iver, Kat., married JOHANNA, daughter and heiress of Roger TRETHERY of Southampton.

VII. THOMAS Lyman, of Navistoke, county of Essex, gentleman, succeeded his father in the possession of the estate at Navistoke and Wethersfield. In the 3d Henry VII, A. D. 1488, this Thomas Lyman and Elizabeth his wife, lately called "Elizabeth Lambert, Gentlewoman," brought suit in the Court of Kings Bench against one Cecilie Barantyn, executrix to a will, for unjustly detaining a sum of money, m. ELIZABETH, daughter and heiress of Henry Lambert of High Ongar, county Essex.

ROBERT Lyman, possessed of divers lands at Southwelde, Brentwood, county Essex, defendant in a plea of trespass, brought by Sir Thos. Ferrers, Knt., 38th Henry VI, A.D. 1460.

ROBERT Lyman, of Southwelde, eldest son and heir, also held lands at Noke Hill, county Essex, 3d Henry VII, A. D. 1488.

ROBERT Lyman, of Noke Hill, county Essex, living 14th Henry VIII, A.D. 1523.

JOHN Lyman, of Ingestre, county Essex, living 15th Henry VII, A.D. 1500.

JOHN Lyman, of Noke Hill.

JULIAN Lyman of Noke Hill, living 37th Henry VIII, A.D. 1546.

ROBERT Lyman, of Noke Hill, living 37th Henry VIII, A.D. 1548.

ROBERT Lyman, of Borham, county Essex, ob. Nov., 1605.

JOHN Lyman, second son.

SIMON Lyman, of High Ongar.

ROBERT Lyman took proceedings in chancery against Robert, his uncle, 18 June, 1630, to recover estates in Essex, of which his father had been deprived.

VIII. HENRY Lyman, of Navistoke and High Ongar, county Essex, "gentleman," had possession of the estates at Navistoke and Wethersfield. 2d Henry VII, A.D. 1487, living 8th Henry VIII, A.D. 1517, m. ALICIA, daughter of Simon Hyde, of Wethersfield, county Essex.

THOMAS Lyman removed to, and purchased lands at Heyton and Alscombe, county Devon, 20th Henry VIII, A.D. 1529.

IX. JOHN Lyman of Navistoke and High Ongar, county Essex, "gentleman," eldest son and heir, also possessed lands at Ovyngton, Asshe, and Beauchamp St. Paul, county Essex, and at Clare and Chylton, county Suffolk, which he sold, 14th Henry VIII, A.D. 1523, living 37th Henry VIII,

A. D. 1546, having possession at that time of the Navistoke and Ongar estates. He was a contributor towards the carrying on of the war; m. MARGARET, daughter and heiress of William Gerard, of Beauchamp, county Essex.

X. ROBERT Leman, alias Lyman, second son, m. MARY, daughter of John Green of High Ongar, first wife, ob. without issue, 1570 m. HENRY Lyman, alias Leman, succeeded his father in the possession of the estates at Navistoke and High Ongar, Essex county, living at High Ongar in the year 1598, died about 1609, m. PHILLIS, daughter of John Scot of Navistoke, county Essex, living, a widow, 1629. Second wife, m. Ralph Green, of High Ongar, second husband, ob. before 1st Charles I, before 1625.

JOHN Leman of High Ongar, Essex, and Gillingham, county Norfolk, living 37th Elizabeth, A. D. 1595, m. MARY, daughter of John Alston, of Farenham, Bedfordshire.

XI. HENRY Lyman, of Navistoke, county Essex (baptized 7 June, 1591), and Elizabeth, his wife, and Phillis Green, widow, in the year 1629, sold to Anna Heywood, widow, one messuage, four cottages and divers lands arable; also a meadow and pasture, all at Navistoke. The Phillis Green mentioned was the mother of Richard and Henry, and had dower in said lands. This sale being effected, Henry with his wife, emigrated to New England with his brother Richard, in the year 1631, and died soon after his arrival in that country, without issue.

ELIZABETH emigrated to America with her husband, 1631, and upon his death, in the same year held a correspondence with her cousin, Sir John Leman, Knt., concerning her return to England. It is supposed she remained in America, and died soon after her husband.

SIR JOHN Leman, 5th baronet in succession from Sir William Leman, Bart., of Northaw. Bapt. 28 Aug. 1781; m. 28 April, 1800. Died, without issue, 5 June, 1839. The following obituary is from the Nottingham Journal and Morning Herald, of July 1st, 1839: "The deceased was not long since an humble frame work knitter in Nottingham. He had succeeded in making good his claim to the title, but had not obtained possession of the estate. His indefatigable labor of mind and body in a just cause has shortened his days. He has for the last six months been sinking under the great anxiety of mind which his case naturally produced; and though he was attended by three eminent physicians from Wakefield and Leeds, he gradually sank and died at the very time when his labors were being crowned with success, his case having passed through the House of Lords, the Herald's College, and received the signature and seal of the queen, and he had only to go to London to 'suffer recovery,' but which his failing strength would not permit. His next heir, Edward Godfrey Leman, will have comparatively nothing to do in order to obtain possession of this immense property. Sir John's dying request was, that every person who had lent him money should be speedily paid, which request his executors will see punctually complied with as soon as possible. He was interred on Monday last, in a manner suitable to his rank, at Sandall, near Wakefield."

The Leman Family English Estates.

Sir John Leman, knight, citizen, sheriff and alderman, lord mayor of London, 1616, member of the Fishmongers' Company, was born 1544, died 1632, left by his will dated 8 July, 1631, the manor of Barnes (alias Goodman's Fields), in St. Bottolph's, White Chapel and Stepney, London, To the use of his nephews Robert, Thomas, Philip and William Leman, and their heirs male, in succession, and in default to his niece, Ann Barber, and her heirs male and in default to his own right heirs for ever. Likewise the manors of Wardeboys, in Huntingdonshire, and Rampton, in Cambridgeshire, did he will to his youngest nephew William.

William Leman, nephew and heir of Sir John Leman, and son of William Leman, of London, came into possession of the said estates and to the possession of the manor of Northow, county Hertford, by purchase, as follows: Upon the death of the Countess of Wanouk, William Lord Russell came into possession of the estate at Northaw, and after having granted part of the common, amounting to 268 acres, 3 rods, 17 perches, by two grants, in the years 1618, and 1622, to the king, James I, for the enlargement of his park (Theobald's), sold this manor, estate, and rectory to William Leman, Esq., in the year 1632.

This William Leman was created a baronet under a patent granted by King Charles 1st, and bearing date 3 March, 1665.

He was treasurer of war, and represented the county of Hertford in parliament. Upon his death in the year 1667, his eldest son William was his successor in title and estates, holding the same under indenture by his father Sir William Leman, bearing date 14th and 15th June, 1655. To trustees in trust to the heirs male of his body, the eldest always to take before the youngest, and in failure of issue male, the estates were to go to his own right heirs. This Sir William, 2d Bart., was sheriff of Hertfordshire, 1676, and was elected to represent the borough of Hertford in parliament in the 2d year of the reign of King William and Mary. He died possessed of the estates, 18 July, 1701, and was buried in the chapel at Northaw, 28 July, 1701. Mansel Leman, eldest son of Sir William, 2d Bart., having died in the lifetime of his father, his son William, and grandson of Sir William, 2d Bart., was the successor in title and estates. Under the will of Sir William Leman, 2d Bart., dated 17 November, 1692, he appointed his brothers, John Leman, Edward Leman, and Tanfield Leman, trustees to his estates, in trust for this grandson William, and they were to receive the rents of the manor of Barnes (alias Goodman's Fields) in order to pay his daughters' portions and other legacies. This trust he directed should be performed for one hundred years, and in failure of male issue of his grandson William, the estates in Huntingdonshire, Cambridgeshire, Hertfordshire, Middlesex, and London, were to go to his own right heirs for ever. Edward Leman, one of the trustees, died in 1700, and Tanfield Leman died in 1704, leaving John Leman the only trustee, who died in 1729. This John Leman had a son John, who was absent at the death of his father. Sir William Leman, 3d Bart., died possessed of the estates, but without issue, on 22 December, 1741, and was buried in the chapel at Northaw, 2 January, 1742. To fully show the manner and disposition of his estates, the following is a true copy of his will, dated 1 November, 1712, as extracted from the registry of the prerogative court of Canterbury:

“In the name of God, amen. I, Sir William Leman, Baronet, of Northaw, in the county of Hertford, having my sound and perfect reason (praised be God), do make this my last will and testament. First, unto thy hands, O Lord, I commit my soul, trusting in the goodness of Thy mercy for the pardon of all my sins, and in the merits of my blessed Saviour and Redeemer, Jesus Christ, and waiting for a joyful resurrection at the last day. My body I leave to the earth, and desire it may be interred in the vault of my family in Northaw Church. I desire that 10 pounds may be distributed to the poor of Northaw, on the day of my burial. I desire that all my debts and funeral charges be paid and discharged by my executrix; I mean those only of my own contracting, and not those heavier debts of my family which are charged upon the Manor of Goodman's Fields. Whereas, upon the death of my grandmother, Dame Mary Leman, the Manor of Northaw, in Hertfordshire, with all its rights, members, and appurtenances, is to devolve upon my mother Lucy Leman, and the Manor of Wardboys, in Huntingdonshire (at present in possession of my said mother), with all its rights, members, and appurtenances is to devolve upon me and my heirs; I therefore give and bequeath (viz., after the decease of my aforesaid grandmother), the said Manor of Wardboys, in Huntingdonshire, with all its rights, members, and appurtenances, to my dear mother Lucy Leman, for her to have, hold and enjoy the same for and during her natural life, subject to the condition of paying the annuities I shall charge upon the said estates. Item—I give and bequeath to my dear mother, Lucy Leman, all that my Manor of Rampton, in Cambridgeshire, with all the Lands, Tenements, Heredits thereunto belonging, both freehold and copyhold, as also every part and parcel thereof or appertaining to it whither situate, lying and being in the Parish of Rampton, aforesaid, or in the Parishes of Co. Henham or Willingham adjoining thereunto, to have and to hold and enjoy the Manor of Rampton, aforesaid, with all rights, members, and appurtenances for and during her natural life. Item—I give and bequeath to my cousin, Richard Alie, of Mincing Lane, London, all those my Manors of Northaw, in Hertfordshire, of Wardboys, in Huntingdonshire, and of Rampton in Cambridgeshire (viz., after the decease of my dear mother, Lucy Leman), with all rights, members, and appurtenances. To have and to hold and enjoy the aforesaid manors of Northaw, in Hertfordshire, of Wardboys in Huntingdonshire, and Rampton in Cambridgeshire, to him and his Heirs Male lawfully begotten; but upon default of such heirs male of the said Richard Alie's body lawfully begotten, after the said Richard Alie's decease, I give and bequeath the said Manors of Northaw, in Hertfordshire, of Wardboys, in Huntingdonshire, and of Rampton in Cambridgeshire, with all their rights, members, and appurtenances, to the person who shall have in him the right of succession to the Leman Family. Whenever all or any of my aforesaid estates, shall come into the possession of my said cousin, Richard Alie, I charge the said estates or estate with £3000 to be immediately paid by the said Richard Alie, to his sister Lucy Alie, spinster, for her fortune. I will and desire the said Richard Alie, immediately upon the possession of any or all of my estates, to take upon him the surname of Leman. I give and bequeath an annuity of £100 per ann., to my cousin Hickford Leman, during the term of his natural life. I give and bequeath an annuity of £40 per ann., to his brother, Robert Leman, for his natural life. Item — (orig<sup>d</sup> 50). The aforesaid annuities to be paid out of the Manor of Wardboys in Huntingdonshire immediately upon the first person possor of the said Manor of Wardboys in my right. I give and bequeath to Brian Fairfax, Esq., of Westminster, £100, and desire he would buy a ring with it in remembrance of me. Item—That whoever is in possession of Wardboys when the living becomes vacant, to give the said living, gratis, to my cousin Robert Leman, but when in possession of the said living the annuity shall cease and become void. I give and bequeath to Richard Lockwood, Esq., £20 to buy a mourning ring. All my personal estate, goods, and chattels whatsoever, I give and bequeath to my dear mother, Lucy Leman, desiring she would pay all my just debts very exactly. And I hereby declare my said mother Lucy Leman, my full and sole executrix of this my will and testament; and I hereby revoke and make void all former wills by me heretofore made.

“In witness whereof, I have to this my will, containing one side, and this part set my hand to the first side, and my hand and seal to this my part, this first day of November, in the year of our Lord 1712.

WM. LEMAN.

“Witnesses.

ARTHUR INGRAM.”

“The 2d day of April, 1742, app<sup>d</sup> personally Richard Alie, of Northaw, in the county of Hertfordshire, Esquire, and made oath that he the depont, some short time after the death of Sir William Leman, late of Northaw, in the county of Herts., in searching in the Deced<sup>t</sup>s Bureau, found the last will and testament in the Deceased hand writing annexed, which at the time of finding thereof, was obliterated in the manner it now appears.

the 2d April, 1742.”

“The said Richard Alie, was sworn to the truth hereof before me.
ROBERT CHAPMAN, Surrogate, on the 2d April, 1742.”

“A power was granted to the said Richard Alie, the cousin of Sir William Leman, of Northaw, in the county of Hertfordshire, baronet, deceased, to administer the Goods and Chattels and Credits of the said deceased, according to the tenor of said Will, for that Lucy Leman, widow, the Mother, sole Executrix, and rev<sup>t</sup> Legatee, renounced the Exorship, of the said Will, and also the admsn. with the said will annexed, being sworn duly to administer. Dame Anna Margaretta Leman, widow, the relict of the said deceased, also renouncing the letters of admon. with the said Will annexed.

Signed,

CHARLES DYNELY,
JOHN INGRAM,
CHARLES BROPIN.—

By the death of Lucy Leman, sister of Sir William, 3d Bart., in the year 1745, all the issue of Mansel Leman, son of the 2d Sir William and father of the last Sir William, became extinct, and the estates passed into the possession of Richard Alie, who thereupon took the surname and arms of Leman. He died in 1749, without issue, and by his will, bearing date 6 November, 1745, and proved 19 July, 1749, he gave the estates to his sister Lucy Alie. She died, and was buried in the chapel at Northaw, 8 October, 1753, leaving the estates to one John Grainger, who thereupon took the surname and arms of Leman. This John Leman, alias Grainger, died without issue, at Bath, 29 September, 1781, and was buried at Wardboys, in Huntingdonshire, on the 11th October, 1781. He left the estates to his wife, with a reversionary interest to William Strode, Esquire. The widow, Dame Leman, alias Grainger, afterwards married this William Strode, and died without issue at Bath, 15 December, 1790, and was buried with her first husband, at Wardboys, on the 29th day of the same month, and William Strode, esquire, died on the 21st July, 1809. The estate of Northaw was, pursuant to a decree of the Court of Chancery, bearing date 17 August, 1810, sold by auction on the 24th and 25th days of October in that year, and was purchased, together with the living or donative of Northaw, by Patrick Thompson, Esquire, of Turnham Green, in the county of Middlesex, who was the possessor in 1821. The value of these immense estates, now in Chancery, and including the manor of Northaw, with the properties in the funds, that are awaiting the rightful heirs, is estimated at four million pounds sterling (twenty millions dollars).

In consideration of this famous marriage of Thomas Lyman of Navistoke, county of Essex, time, Henry VI, with Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Henry Lambert of High Ongar, and of the large estates which thus came into the family, the pedigree of this Elizabeth Lambert is subjoined with that of Johanna Umfreville, wife of Sir William Lambert.

XV. Elizabeth Lambert, dau. of Henry, m. Thomas Lyman, Esq., of Navistoke, county of Essex—time Henry VII—ancestor of Richard, the patriarch of all the families of Lyman in the United States and British provinces in America.

Pedigree of Johanna Umfreville, wife of Sir William Lambert XII.

I. Sir Robert Umfreville, knight, Lord of Tours and Vian in Normandy, commonly called "Robert with a beard," kinsman to William the Conqueror, with whom he came into England, and who in the 10th year of his reign gave him the forest of Riddesdale with all the castles, manors, lands and woods, pastures, waters and pools which were formerly possessed by Mildred the son of Akman, lord of Riddesdale, and which came to the king upon his conquest of England, to hold the same by the service of defending that part of the country from thieves and wolves with the sword which king William had by his side when he entered Northumberland.

By that grant he had also authority for hearing, determining, and judging all pleas of the crown as well as others happening within the precincts of Riddesdale by any proper officer for the time being according to the laws and customs of the realms.

II. Gilbert de Umfreville who, in the time of Henry I, gave a rent-charge of twenty-two solidos per annum unto the monks of Tewksbury for the soul of his wife.

III. Sir Robert de Umfreville, knight, Lord Baron of Prudhoe, and Lord of Riddesdale, county Northumberland, living 31st Henry I, 5th Stephen and 1st Henry II.

IV. Sir Odowell de Umfreville, knight, who on the collection of the scutage, 8th, and 18th Henry II, paid 40 solidos upon the assignment of the scutage on those who sent not in their certificates of the fees they held of this Odowell, a monk of Tynemouth, grievously complained about that time for his exactions upon his neighbors to repair the roof of his castle Prudhoe, which he presumed to do because he was the chief person in that county and partly through the interest he had at court by a great man having married his daughter. In the 20th Henry II, his castle of Harbotell was taken by the Scots, and his castle of Prudhoe besieged, but Robert de Stuteville, then sheriff of York, with the help of some northern barons timely relieved it.

In 23d Henry II, he was one of the witnesses to the king's arbitration between the king of Castile and Sancho, king of Navarre.

V. Robert de Umfreville, only son and heir, died in the lifetime of his father 29th Henry II.

VI. Sir Richard de Umfreville, knight, who in the 6th Richard I, gave £100 to the king for remitting that fine which he had made with the bishop of Durham, when the county of Northumberland was on the bishop's hands and that he might enjoy the king's favor though he did not go into Ireland in that expedition then made thither. In 7th Richard I, he stood indebted to Aaron, the Jew, in the sum of £23 6 8 for which his land in Turnay was engaged. In 5th John he had a grant of divers lands in Riddesdale. In the 14th John, the times being then turbulent, he delivered up his four sons in hostage with his castle of Prudhoe to secure his fidelity, so that in case he should thenceforth transgress, all to be forfeited, and his body to be disposed of as a traitor's, nevertheless so little did he regard this his great obligation, he joined the barons in arms, 17th John, for which his lands were seized and given to Hugh de Balliol; but soon after Henry III began to reign, and the times becoming more calm and quiet, he had restoration of his castle of Prudhoe notwithstanding the king had no confidence in him or regard. He, the king, discovered that he forfeited his castle of Prudhoe, and thereupon, in the 6th of his reign directed his precept to the sheriff of Northumberland to impanel a jury of twelve knights of that county to view, and having done so to destroy whatever had been added thereto in point of fortification since the war. He held the baronetcy of Prudhoe of the king by his service of two knights' fees and a half, as all his ancestors had done from the time of Henry I. Ob. 2d Henry III.

He m. Matilda de Torrington, cousin and co-heir to Mathew Lord, of Torrington.

VII. Gilbert de Umfreville. Lord Umfreville, of Prudhoe, doing his homage, and £100 for his relief, and livings of his lands 2d Henry III, and in 13th Henry III, he was one of the northern barons appointed by the king to be at Berwick-upon-Tweed, on Sunday, before mid-lent, thence to attend Alexander, king of Scotland, to York, where King Henry met him. In 17th Henry III, doing his homage, also had livery of the lands of his cousin, Matthew de Torrington, who died without issue. In 24th Henry III, he gives a fine of 100 marks over and above his scutage to be freed from attending the king in Gascoigne. Died in Passion week. 29th Henry III, he gives a fee. He was called the famous baron, the flower and keeper of the northern parts of England.

VIII. Gilbert de Umfreville<sup>2</sup>, Earl of Angus, Lord Umfreville, baron of Prudhoe, lord of Riddesdale, being an infant at the death of his father, 29th Henry III, his wardship was committed to Simon de Montford, earl of Leicester, he paying 10,000 marks to the king for the same. In 43d Henry III, being then of age, upon the collection of the scutage of Wales, he paid £11 12 0 for five knights' fees, and a half and a fourth and the twentieth part of the fees of Matthew de Torrington. He held the manor of Prudhoe, likewise Riddesdale by the royal power. In the 49th Henry III, being then in arms with the barons, for awhile he did no mischief, but in 3d Ed. I, Walter de Swethorpe came to the king and made a sad complaint against him, setting forth that after the end of the troubles, and peace being proclaimed and published by the king, Henry III, this Earl Gilbert did seize upon him and keep him in prison in the castle of Harbottel, until he had given him 100 marks. The king, therefore, directed his precept to two persons to hear and determine this injury. He was onstituted governor of the castles of Dundee and Forfar, and of the whole territory of Angus, in Scotland. In 23d Ed. I, he was summoned to parliament as lord Umfreville, and 25th Ed. I, he was summoned as earl of Angus. Died 1st Ed. II, 1307.

The wife of this Gilbert<sup>2</sup> was Matilda, Countess of Angus, a lineal descendant from Malcolm III, king of Scotland, slain at Alnwick castle, co. Northumberland, A. D. 1093.

Three of his sons succeeded to the throne. I. Edward, d. 1097, s. p. (i. e., without issue). II. Alexander, d. 1124, s. p. III. David, d. 1153, m. Maud, dau. of the earl of Northumberland. His son Henry, m. Adama, dau. of William Earle, of Warren, d. 1152.

Children :

1. William the Lion, king of Scotland, d. 1214. II. David, earl of Huntingdon. III. Ada m. Gilchrist, 3d earl of Angus, who performed many glorious exploits in king William's wars: Issue: Duncan, 4th earl of Angus.

2. Issue: Malcolm, 5th earl of Angus, m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir Humphrey Berkeley, knight, living 1225.

3. Issue: Matilda, countess of Angus in her own right, who m. Gilbert de Umfreville.

IX. Gilbert de Umfreville<sup>3</sup>, died in the lifetime of his father, 31st Edward I.

Robert, Lord Umfreville, 2d son of Gilbert<sup>3</sup>, 2d earl of Angus, had livery of his lands. 1st Ed. II, in which year he was one of the king's lieutenants of Scotland, and one of the governors of Scotland, and of the Scottish marshes. He was summoned to parliament from the 2d year of Ed. II, until the 18th Ed. II, when he died.

Gilbert de Umfreville<sup>4</sup>, son of Robert, 3d earl of Angus, lord de Umfreville, in 5th Ed. III, favoring the title of Edward Baliol to the crown of Scotland, and having afterwards accompanied him into Scotland, obtained a great victory over David de Brus, king of Scotland. In 9th Ed. III, he was again in the wars of Scotland. In the 19th Ed. III, he was in the French wars, and in 20th Ed. III, he was commander-in-chief of the English army at the battle of Durham. He was summoned to parliament, from the 6th Ed. III, to 4 Richard II, when he died, Jan. 7, 4th Richard.

X. Sir Thomas de Umfreville<sup>1</sup>, son of Gilbert, heir to his brother Sir Robert, who d., s. p., in the lifetime of his father, had living of the castle of Harbottel. He m. Joan, dau. of Lord Rodam, county of Northumberland.

XI. Sir Thomas de Umfreville<sup>2</sup>, knight, Lord de Rid desdale and Lord Kyme, 2d son and heir to his brother Sir Robert, living, time King Henry IV.

Children:

1. Gilbert de Umfreville<sup>3</sup>, Earl of Kyme, a famous soldier in the French wars, in the time of Henry IV, and V, slain with Thomas Duke of Clarence and others, 1421, s. p.
2. Johanna, sister and co-heir of Gilbert<sup>3</sup>, earl of Kyme. She m. Sir William Lambert, knight of Owlton, 9th Henry V — XII in the pedigree of Elizabeth Lambert, wife of Thomas Lyman.

Thus the ancient and honorable lines of Lambert and Umfreville unite in the marriage of Sir William Lambert and Johanna de Umfreville, and they become the ancestors of the Lyman family, by the marriage of their great-granddaughter with Thomas Lyman, Esq., of Navistoke, county of Essex in England, in the time of Henry VII, who died A. D. 1509.

This Thomas Lyman becomes the great-grandfather of Richard, the original immigrant to America, the succession being Thomas, Henry, John, Henry, Richard.

According to another record the second wife of Henry was Phillis Scott, who had issue as follows:

Children of Henry and Phillis Scott:

1. RICHARD, bapt. 1580, paid taxes 1610, 1627, 1629. In this year he sold all his land and in 1631, sailed for America.

Both records agree in the essential facts relating to Richard our ancestor, and the reader is left to his own conclusions.

Richard Lyman, the patriarch of all the Lymans recorded in this volume, and all of English descent in America, born in High Ongar, Essex Co., in England, about 25 miles east by south from London, was baptized, Oct. 30, 1580. The date of his birth is not given. He married, date unknown, Sarah Osborne, daughter of Roger Osborne, of Halstead, in Kent. She went to America with her husband Richard and all their children, in 1631, and died in Hartford, Conn., about the year 1640, soon after the death of her husband.

Five of the children denoted by an asterisk*, came to New England with their parents, and all born and bapt. at High Ongar.

PART II.

Richard and his Family in America.

At what time Richard began to institute measures for his removal to America does not appear; but in the 5th Charles I, A.D. 1629, he sold to one John Gower two messuages, a garden, orchard and divers lands arable; also a meadow and pasture, all at Norton Mandeville, in the parish of Ongar, county of Essex, and about the middle of August, 1631, embarked with his wife and children in the ship Lion, William Pierce, master, for New England, taking their departure from the port of Bristol. We are informed, that there went in the same ship, Martha Winthrop, the third wife of John Winthrop, at that time governor of New England, the governor's eldest son and his wife and their children; also Eliot, the celebrated apostle of the Massachusetts Indians; and that the ship's passengers consisted of about sixty persons all told, and, after being ten weeks at sea, arrived at Natascot, having lost none of their company but two children; and that as the wind was contrary, the ship stayed at Long Island, but the governor's son went on shore, and that night the governor went on board the ship, and remained on board over night. The next morning, November 2d, the wind being fair, the ship made anchor before Boston, and on the 4th of November all the passengers landed, the ship giving them a salute from six or seven cannon.

What sought they thus afar?
 Bright jewels of the mine?
 The wealth of seas? the spoils of war?
 They sought a faith's pure shrine.

Aye, call it holy ground,
 The soil where first they trod;
 They have left unstained what there they found,
 Freedom to worship God.

On landing, the captain, with his companion in arms, entertained them with a guard, and gave them welcome by salute of many guns; and the greater portion of the people of the near plantations went to receive them and brought or sent for many days a great store of provisions, such as fat hogs, kids, venison, poultry, geese, partridges, etc.; and we are further told that such joy and manifestations of love had never before been seen in New England; and it was a great marvel that so many people and such an abundance of provisions could be gathered together in so few hours notice. On the 11th day of November, a day of thanksgiving was held in Boston in commemoration of the event.

Richard Lyman first became a settler in Charlestown, Mass., and with his wife united with the church in what is now called Roxbury, under the pastoral care of Eliot, the apostle to the Indians; he became a freeman at the General court, 11th June, 1635, and on the 15th of October, 1635, he took his departure with his family from Charlestown, joining a party of about one hundred persons, who went through the wilderness from Massachusetts into Connecticut, the object being to form settlements at Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield. He was one of the first settlers at Hartford. "The journey from Massachusetts was made in about fourteen days time, the distance being more than one hundred miles and through a trackless wilderness. They had no guide but their compass, and made their way over mountains, through swamps, thickets and rivers, which were not passable but with the greatest difficulty. They had no cover but the heavens, nor any lodgings but those which simple nature afforded them. They drove with them one hundred and sixty head of cattle, and, by the way, subsisted in a great measure on the milk of their cows. Mrs. Hooker was borne through the wilderness on the shoulders of the men. The people carried their packs, arms, and some utensils. They were nearly a fortnight on their journey. This adventure was the more remarkable, as many of this company were persons of figure, who had lived in England in honor, affluence and delicacy, and were entire strangers to fatigue and danger.—Trumbull's Colonial Records.

The party first struck the Connectiquot, the Quinnitukut, the long river in East Windsor near the Scantic river, and began their first settlement, on the west bank of the Connecticut in Windsor called by the Indians, Manutineang.

Richard Lyman, on this journey, suffered greatly in the loss of cattle. He was one of the original proprietors of Hartford, and there is little doubt that he and his wife Sarah formed a connection with the first church in Hartford, of which the Rev. Thomas Hooker was pastor. His will of 22d of April, 1640, is the first in the valuable collection of Trumbull, and stands, Record, I, 442 and 443, and followed by an inventory of his estate. All the children are named in his will, and his daughter Phillis is called the wife of William Hills. He died in August, 1640, and his name is inscribed on a stone column in the rear of the Centre Church of Hartford, erected in memory of the first settlers of the city. His widow, Sarah, died soon afterwards.

Richard is reported to have begun life in the New World as a man of "considerable estate, keeping two servants." In an account in the Massachusetts Historical Collections, of the moneys paid out of the common treasury of the colony, is found the following item: "Paid to Goodman Lyman for a fat hog for to victual the pinnace sent for the taking of David Bull £3 10s. 0. Goodman was the common title of the age for gentleman or Mister. This was doubtless Richard Lyman who victualed thus the pinnace.

The following extract is copied from the record of Eliot, the apostle, in his own hand writing: "Richard Lyman — he came to New England in the 9th month, 1631. He brought children, Phillis, Richard, Sarah, John. He was an ancient Christian, but weake, yet, after some time of tryal and quickening he joyned the church; w—n the great removal was made to Connecticut, he also went, and underwent much affliction; for, going toward winter, his cattle were lost in driving, and never were found again; and, the winter being cold and he ill-provided, he was sick and melancholly; yet after, he had some reviving through God's mercy, and dyed in the year 1640."

Richard Lyman's name is on the list of the original proprietors of Hartford in 1636. His relative portion of the land obtained from the Indians was a fair average of that of the other proprietors. Of the purchase, he received thirty parts, one or two on the list receiving two hundred parts. The land of the seproprietors extended westward to Farmington. The house lot on which Richard, settled as appears on the ancient chart of Hartford for 1640, was on the south side of what is now Buckingham street, between Main and Washington streets, the fifth lot from Main street west of the South Church and bounded apparently on Wadsworth street either on the east or the west.

The following extract is taken from the public records of the Colony of Connecticut by J. H. Trumbull: "At a meeting of the General Court Sept. 5, 1639, Richard Lyman complaineth against Sequassen for burning upp his hedge which, before Mr. Governor, formerly he promised to satisfy for, but yett hath not done it. Saquassen appeared and promised to pay within four days, or else an attachment to be granted."

The will of Richard Lyman, the first on record at Hartford, is dated 22 April, 1640. The inventory of his personal property was made 6 of Sept., 1640. In the interval between these dates, he must have d. at the age of 60 years. Sarah, his wife d. before the presenting of the will at court, Jan., 1642.

His will and the inventory are as follows :

HARTFORD, CONN.

The last Will and Testament of RICHARD LYMAN, being in p<sup>r</sup>fect memory, I giue unto my wife all my houseing & lands dureing her life, and one-third p<sup>r</sup>te of my lands to dispose at her death amongst my children as shee pleaseth, and I giue to her all my moueable goods, as Cattell and household stuffe, and all other impliments or mouables. And the other two p<sup>r</sup>ts of my land I giue to my elder sonne Richard, and to his heires forever, and if he dy without an heir, then I giue yt to my sonne Robert, and to his heires forever. For my son Richard my mynd is that the Cattell I have formerly giuen him that he shall enjoy. - To my daughter Sarah, besids the Cattell I formerly haue giuen her, my will is that my wife shall pay her twenty pounds to yeres after my death. To my sonne John Lyman I giue him thirty pownds, to be paid him by my wife, att two & twenty yeres of age, and the hoggs that I formerly haue giuen him, I giue unto my wife, and if he contends wth her and will not be content my wife should enjoy the hoggs, then yt is my will that shee should not pay him the thirty pownds. To my sonne Robert, I giue twenty fower pownds, to be paid him at twenty-two yeres of age; and to my daughter Fillis, the wife of Willia Hills, I giue tenne shillings; and I make my wife sole executrix to this my will.

Dated the 22d of April, 1640.

The two p<sup>r</sup>ts of my land and howse I giue to Richard Lyman my sonne; the reson of writeing this is because the word howse was not formerly expressed.

RICHARD AND HIS FAMILY IN AME

"Probate Court this 27th of Jan. 1642.

"The will and inventory of Richard Lyman deceased, is brought into court. John Moody makes oath that it is the last will of said Richard; and also the noate then brought in is the noate of the widow Lyman deceased. The several parties present at the presenting of said will agree that John Lyman if he live, will be 22 years in Sept. 16, 1645; Robert Lyman 22 in Sept., 1651."

From the death of their father until their settlement in Northampton, little is known respecting the sons of Richard<sup>1</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, John and Robert. They were taxed A.D. 1655, in Hartford, in a rate assessed to build a mill. They probably removed the same year to Northampton, where, in December of this year, Richard was chosen one of the selectmen. He sold his father's household at Hartford in 1660. He and his brother, John, were m. before their removal to Northampton.

Richard<sup>2</sup> m. Hepzibah, daughter of Thomas Ford of Windsor. She was sister of the wife of Elder John Strong of Dorchester, Windsor and Northampton, the patriarch of the Strongs, whose genealogy has recently been published in two large volumes. Her 2d husband was John Marsh of Hadley, Mass. Richard resided some time in Windsor, owned land there, and occupied some of the land of his father Ford "in East Windsor near the Hartford line." He appears to have been a man of decided character and influence. Immediately on his removal to Northampton he was appointed one of the first selectmen chosen in that place, and through his short life was engaged in public business. He died June 3d, 1662.

28. Dea. Caleb Lyman<sup>s</sup>, Esq., son of John, and grandson of Richard,<sup>1</sup> was born at Northampton, Sept. 2d, or 3d, 1678, and resided in Boston. He was one of thirteen from the Old North Church who organized the New North Church of that city and was one of the first deacons of the New Church. This enterprise was begun in 1712. Its original families were "substantial mechanics" who built a church of small dimensions as the record is "without the assistance of the more wealthy part of the community, excepting what they derived from their prayers and their good wishes." The church was dedicated May 5, 1714. It was a custom of the churches of New England then publicly to ordain both ruling elders and deacons. The New England version of the Psalms was continued in use in this church until It was then changed for Tate and Brady's version; no after this the practice of reading and singing the p line by line, alternately, was abolished or discont These facts, given in Drake's History of Boston, are pre as a part of the record of those scenes in which our venerable ancestor was a prominent actor.

Deacon Lyman died at Weston, Mass., Nov. 17, 1742, in the 65th year of his age after an illness of twelve weeks. A sermon was preached on the occasion by the Rev. William Williams of that place, a distinguished preacher, whose praise was in all the churches in the eastern part of the state. Of this sermon a copy is still extant from which the following extracts are taken. After characterizing him as "a kind, tender and most loving husband, of a sweet, pleasant and cheerful temper, and an amiable pattern of the virtues of the married state — good and useful in all the relations which he sustained both in church and state," the preacher proceeds :

"Having used the Office of a Deacon well, he was, many Years since with other pious and worthy Brethren, chosen to assist the Pastors of that Church in their watching over and regulating the Flock, in which Service I am well informed he was greatly assisting, by his prudent Care, Inspection and Vigilance, his kind visiting the sick and afflicted, warning and rebuking the unruly and disorderly. He was a very ministerial Man, honoring and befriending upon all Occasions, his spiritual Guides, who greatly loved him and heartily bewailed the Breach, made upon them.

"In his military Capacity he was a Man of firm Courage and Resolution, of which he gave early Proofs; of steady Loyalty, a Lover of good Order and military Accomplishments.

"As a Justice of the Peace, he was concerned and studious to suppress Vice and Profaneness, and to promote Order, Righteousness and Peace.

"He was a kind, courteous and loving Neighbor, a faithful and obliging Friend, a prudent Peace-Maker, a Hater of Strife and Division.

"As through his Industry, Frugality and honest Dealing he had acquired a considerable outward Estate, so he was ready to improve it for the Good of others, willing to distribute, ready to communicate, very courteous and hospitable in his House where many, especially Ministers of Christ, have been often entertained and refreshed."

"In his lingering Illness his usual Reply to Inquiries of his Health was 'Waiting upon God;' 'As God wills.' A short time before his Death, when his Wife wished him a good Night, he replied, I wish you a comfortable Repose, and when you wake may your Thoughts be of God and Christ and Heaven, may your Heart be filled with the Love of God, and the Joys of refreshing Rest, and may God bring you to his heavenly Kingdom. Amen:" He died childless and his lineage became extinct at his decease.

He left a legacy of 500 pounds for the use of the pastors of the church and their widows.

Robert, Lyman youngest son of Richard<sup>1</sup>, is reputed to have been a sportsman, devoting much time to fishing, hunting, trapping, etc. Roberts' Hill and Roberts' Meadow in Northampton are said to have taken their names from him as being his favorite place of resort. From public records it appears that he discovered the lead mines of West-hampton.

He was one of the original purchasers and proprietors of the tract of land now occupied by the city of Newark, N. J., as is indicated by the following extracts from the early records of that place, kindly furnished by S. H. Congar, Esq., a distinguished antiquary of Newark.

On June 24, 1667, forty-one of the then present inhabitants, among whom was Robert Lyman, subscribed "with their own hand unto the two fundamental agreements, together with twenty-three of the party from Branford. On the principles of these agreements, our town on Pesayak river was to be governed." The settlers of 1666, 1667, thus uniting, proceeded to make "a sure list" of every man's estate. Robert Lyman was set down at £285, or with a deduction of one-third made to every man £190. May 7, 1668, the common fence was proportioned to every man's estate and lands within the same. Robert Limon has 44 rods.—Jan. 1, 1669, '70, Robert Limon in the division of salt meadow lot, drew No. 26.—Feb. 21, 1670-1, at a second division of salt meadow he drew No. 29.—May 26, 1673, "after due preparation and solemnization for it," the town agreed to draw their lots in a second division of upland, Robert Limon had lot 31. Feb. 6, 1677-8, another proportioning of the fence was made and one rod of fence was required for two acres, one rood, and twenty poles of land. Robert Limen of this fence had 3 rods and 3 feet. In Oct., 1681, another division of the fence was made, but in this his name does not appear. In 1684, from a deed on record in the office of the secretary of state at Trenton, it appears that Robert Lymon of Massachusetts sold lands in Newark to Jasper Crane. In August, 1675, 107½ acres were surveyed for Robert Lymon, in seven parcels, home lot, upland, and meadow, as described in the record of surveys, for Newark, and on these acres at a half-penny per acre there is now due, if unpaid to the lords proprietors or their heirs, a sum they will never get.

“Robert was also a proprietor of Orange, and the heights of the Watchung mountain, then a rich champagne country peopled with deer, elk and bears, and other creatures with many a fair rising, and prospects all green and verdant.” A city of beautiful and princely villas. This investment of Robert could not have been large, for the whole tract was received July 11, 1667, in exchange for “a few handfuls of gunpowder, and some lead, axes, breeches, blankets, guns, kettles, etc. Subsequently the whole slope of the Watchung on the Orange side was purchased for “2 guns, 3 coats and 13 cans of rum.”

Milford, Guilford, Brandford and New Haven, in Connecticut, contributed their portion of the people who were to go into this land of “many fair rising forests and meadows,” and “be of one heart and consent with God’s blessing in endeavoring to carry on other spiritual concerns, as well as their civil and town affairs according to God and godly government.”

None of the Connecticut emigrants were allowed to vote or hold office in the new colony, unless they were “members of some or other of the Congregational churches,” and it was many years before this sectarian restriction was removed. But then, these people and their descendants have made a good record. Wherever the page of American history is brightest — there the names of these sturdy people reappear. This little group that nestled so harmoniously down in the Orange valley, and whose log huts dotted the romantic slope of Watchung mountain has sent out scores and hundreds to fill the highest places in the various departments of science and art, at the bar, in the pulpit, in the medical profession, in literature, in the senate, in colleges; they have been the pioneers of trade, merchant princes, builders of cities, the defenders of their country through every war, stern patriots — the very “vim” of the nation.

Those who took up land on the mountain were Robert Lyman, Samuel Swayne and John Baldwin, 1675; Thomas Johnson, John Ward, Anthony Oliff, Joseph Harrison, 1679. Matthew Williams at the time occupied a tract on the mountain, and afterwards exchanged some Newark property with the heirs of George Day for the tract on which he fixed his residence, and which now bears the name of Williamsville.

In May 20, 1684, Robert Lyman and Hepzibah his wife, of Northampton, Mass., sold to Jasper Crane for £8 14s. 3d. 44 acres bounded on the north-west of the mountain. The original document is still extant by which Robert appoints Sarah Davis, the widow of "his cousin John Ward," to settle his affairs in Newark, he being in Northampton; and that she accomplished the business satisfactorily.

The signature of Robert is associated with others of Northampton, in an effort to restrain and suppress intemperance by preventing the introduction of ardent spirits and cider into the town. In the latter part of life he became reduced in property, and appears to have been subject to some mental aberrations which subjected his family to peculiar trials. In March, 1691, representations of the state of his family were made to the county court, in which he is described as being under some "distemperature," and unable to manage his affairs. Similar representations were repeatedly made, and the family committed to the care of the selectmen of the town. There is no authentic record of Robert's death. The tradition in Northampton is that he became a victim to his roving, sporting habits, and was found in the forest frozen where he had fallen in pursuit of his game. He m. Hepzibah Bascom.

The settlement of Northampton commenced in 1654.

In May 6, 1653, a number of persons petitioned the General Court of Massachusetts to grant them liberty to possess, plant and inhabit this place on the Connecticut river, called Nonotuck, as their own inheritance; representing that it was a place "suitable to erect a town for the furtherance of the public weal and the propagation of the gospel." Twenty-five families manifested a desire to settle there, "many of whom were of considerable quality for estates, and fit matter for a church." "Townsmen," selectmen, were chosen 1656. In March 18, 1657, the people voted to employ an agent to obtain a minister, and to devise means to prevent the excess of liquors used.

Nonotuck the Indian name for Northampton, including the four Hamptons, was purchased in 1653, by John Pynchon, Esq., for the original planters, 20 in number, from Wawhillowa, Nenessehalant, Nassicohee, and four others styled "the chief and proper owners, who all bargained for themselves and the other owners, by their consent." The consideration for the purchase was, "one hundred fathoms of wampum by tale, and ten coats, besides some small gifts in hand paid to the sachems and owners; and also for ploughing up 16 acres of land on the east side of Quonnecticut river the ensuing summer." Sept. 28, 1658, the sachem Umpauchila complained to the commissioners that he had not received so much as he expected. He was accordingly paid an additional sum, and he, by a new deed, released his title to the township.

The inhabitants lived in peace with the Indians 22 years until the famous war with Philip.

The original purchase extended 10 miles on the river and 10 westward, equal to 100 square miles, and included the 4 Hamptons.

This included ground now occupied by the Shop Row, on the south side of Main street. It appears to have included the homestead owned and occupied by Dr. Hunt a half century since, and the Shop Row, eastward, with the grounds of Gov. Caleb Strong.

The original homestead of Richard became the property of his 2d son John, of his son Benjamin, of his son Joseph, of his son Elisha and of his son Theodore, who sold it in 1827, after it had been in the possession of the far 172 years, through six generations.

The first Moses, grandson of Richard<sup>1</sup> and son of John, bought one-half of the Mather farm, and his son, Capt. Moses, bought the other half. The whole became the property of Seth, the 9th child of Capt. Moses. He was unfortunate in business and sold in several parcels the old homestead for the payment of his debts, some time before 1790, and after it had been in possession of the family about 100 years. This farm in 1842, had upon it three dwelling houses, besides the stores and shops in Shop Row, 15 or 20-rods in extent.

The property of Judge Hinckley and of the Hon. Theodore Strong, is said to have been a part of this farm.

Northampton being from the beginning the home of the Lyman family, the cradle from which they have arisen to overrun the whole land, some early notices of them are inserted from the records of the town, illustrative at once of their influence and of the customs of these olden times :

In May, 1654 — was the petition for the laying out of Nonatuck — and yet as early as “ Feb. 19, 1660, seven persons were appointed to transcribe the old records.” Among these was Richard Lyman.

▷ At a town meeting in 1657 — “ It was then voted and agreed that William Holton is desired to solicit the general court & to act and propound several cases that concern the town.” — 1 — 2 — & 3 to “ desire advice what course to take about the preventing of excess in liquors in coming to our town, & of cider ; all those present at the making this note, did promise to consent to it, in case the major part of the inhabitants of the town do consent to it.” 25 names were given, & among them that of Robert Lyman.

1658, Jan. 4 — “ 80 acres of land laid out for the ministry.” A committee of 5 to do it, Richard Lyman was second. Jan. 10 — Richard Lyman was one of the three select men, and in March, appointed as “ Commissioner to end small causes.”

1660, May 15 — Mistake about land upon the “ pine plain ” — which was drawn for Robert Lyman, also Richard Lyman’s portion helped to make up the mistake.

Other commissions include the names of Richard and John Lyman.

1666 — John first mentioned as Ensign Lyman.

1669 — Ensign John Lyman chosen surveyor.

1669, April 24 — Ensign J. L., appointed Com<sup>o</sup> to take general list, and carry to Springfield — also on other committees.

1671, Dec. 10th — Satisfaction of Richard Lyman's heirs for damages done by digging trench.

1675 — John Lyman, selectman.

1669, July 27 — vote, "that Robert Lyman and any other of the inhabitants of this town, and having common rights in the town, shall have liberty to try to open any place within our bounds, and to make use of any sort of mines or minerals, provided they attend law — and it was a full and clear affirmative vote." Oct<sup>r</sup> 16th, A town meeting about the "lead mine which Robert Lyman found out," vote — The town gave up all their right. The mine described as "lying about 6 miles off on the w. side of the town."

1681 — Grant to the Mine Company — "to their heirs or assigns" — no further mention of Robert Lyman. On a motion of Richard and Thomas Lyman and others a "liberty to set up Saw mill."

1682 — "John Lyman son of Richard," mentioned fence regulations.

The sumptuary laws enacted to restrain extravagance in dress are an institution illustrative of the spirit of the times. These laws ordered "that persons whose estates did not exceed 200 pounds, and those dependent upon them, should not wear gold or silver lace, gold or silver buttons, bone lace above 2s. per yard, or silk hoods or scarfs, upon penalty of 10s. for each offense." "At the March court 1676, the jury presented 68 persons from 5 towns in Hampshire, 35 wives and maids, and 30 young men, some for wearing silk and that in a flaunting manner, and others, for long hair, and other extravagances to the offense of sober people."

One of these was Hannah Lyman, of Northampton, 16 years of age, dau. of Richard<sup>2</sup>, deceased. The record shows that this young girl possessed an independent, determined will, so characteristic of the Lyman family, flaunting her silks before the court, when arraigned for this very offense. She was prosecuted for wearing silk in a flaunting manner, in an offensive way and garb, not only before, but when she stood presented, not only in ordinary, but in extraordinary times; she was fined 10s.

The following racy original phillipic forcibly illustrates the spirit of the times :

"I honour the woman that can honour herselfe with her attire a good Text alwayes deserves a fair margent; I am not much offended if I see a trimme far trimmer than shee that wears it; in a word, whatever Christianity or civility, will allow, I can afford with London Measure; but when I heare a nugiperous gentle dame inquire what dresse the Queen is in this week; what the nudiustertian fashion of the court; I mean the very newest; with egge to be in it in all haste, whatever it be; I look at her as the very gizzard of a trifle, the product of a quarter of a cipher, the epitome of nothing, fitter to be kickt, if shee were of a kickable substance, than either honour'd or humour'd. To speak moderately, I truly confesse, it is beyond the ken of my understanding to conceive how those women should have any true grace, or valuable vertue, that have so little wit, as to disfigure themselves with such exotick garbes, as not only dismantles their native lovely lustre, but transclouts them into gant bar-gesse, illshapen, shotten-shell-fish, Egyptian Hieroglyphicks, or at the best, into French flurts of the pastery, which a proper English woman should scorn with her heels; it is no marvel they weare drailes on the hinder part of their heads, having nothing as it seems in the forepart, but a few Squirrils' brains to help them frisk from one ill favored fashion to another."—Simple Cobler of Agawam, pp 26-27. Palfrey's Hist.

It may give a clearer insight into the social and domestic life, in these primitive days to note the current prices of some of the staple articles of sale collected chiefly from the History of Hadley: Butter, 6 cents per lb.; beef, 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ ; Mutton, 2; flour, \$3.50 per bbl.; wheat, 2s. 6d.; Peas, 2s; Corn, 1s. 6d.; oats, 1s. 6d.; Shad, in 1733, 1 penny; in 1737 "good fat shad," 2 pence each; 1767, 100 shad were sold in Hadley, at 1 penny each; for salmon in Hartford, 1700, 1 penny a pound; in Northampton 1740, at the same price;

Horses, 1675 to 1700, 15 to 25 dollars; 1750 to 1775, 7 to 32 dollars. The most valuable horse in the county in 1754, was prized at \$66 $\frac{2}{3}$ ; working oxen, 1680 to 1715, 17 to 28 dollars a yoke; cows, 1700, 6.50 to 9 dollars; 1775, 7 to 11 dollars; fowls, 4 to 6 pence each; eggs, 3 pence a dozen; wild turkeys, 1717; in Northampton, 1s. 4d. each; pigeons from 3 to 6 pence a dozen; venison, 2 to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  pence per lb. Choice land, \$1.00 an acre, out lots, 25 cents; the salaries of clergymen ranged from 60 to 80 pounds — 150 and 200 dollars, generally paid in produce, at an advanced price; marriage fee, 3 shillings — 1692, 25 years later, 4 shillings.

Two of the sons of Richard<sup>1</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, and John<sup>2</sup>, had each three sons who had issue of several sons; and from these six grandsons of Richard<sup>1</sup> have descended a numerous posterity which have overspread the land. The three grandsons, sons of Richard<sup>2</sup>, are Richard<sup>3</sup>, Thomas<sup>3</sup> and John<sup>3</sup>. The three sons of John<sup>2</sup> are John<sup>3</sup>, Moses<sup>3</sup> and Benjamin<sup>3</sup>. Richard<sup>3</sup> represents the Lymans in Lebanon, Conn. Thomas<sup>3</sup>, the Lymans in Durham, in the same state; the two Johns<sup>2</sup> had their habitat chiefly in Northampton, South Farms and Hockanum, Moses is represented by the Lymans in Goshen and Salisbury, Conn., and in Southampton and Boston, Mass. East and West Hampton were the primary centres of emigration for the descendants of Benjamin<sup>3</sup>, the sixth and last grandson. The descendants of each of these six grandsons will be represented under as many subdivisions or parts in the order of seniority, each constituting one part in the general divisions of this work.

PART III.

Richard,<sup>3</sup> the eldest son of Richard<sup>2</sup>, b. in Windsor, Ct., in 1647, m. in Northampton, May 26, 1675, Elizabeth, daughter of John Coles, of Hatfield, Mass., and resided in Northampton until 1696, when he removed to Lebanon, Ct., where some of his descendants have continued to reside until the present time; but others have gone out over all the land. They early emigrated to Vermont: from that state some passed into Canada; others westward took their course; and onward still, as new territories and states have arisen, quite to the Pacific ocean.

Richard was not an original proprietor in the Five Mile purchase in Lebanon, which was the beginning of the settlement, but an allotment was deeded to him, which he subdivided to his children, some of whom settled in the town and some in the Crank, now Columbia. Here the father himself lived, and died Nov. 4, 1708. No monument marks his resting place.

Children, Fourth Generation :

- 1 1 Samuel, b. April, 1676.
- 2 2 Richard, b. April, 1678; d. 1745.
- 3 3 John, b. July 6, 1680.
- 4 4 Isaac, b. Feb. 20, 1682, probably.
- 5 5 Lieut. Jonathan, b. Jan. 1, 1684; d. Aug. 11, 1753. — 1765
- 6 6 Elizabeth, b. March 25, 1685; m. .... Smith.
- 7 7 David, b. Nov. 28, 1688; childless.
- 8 8 Josiah, b. Feb. 6, 1690, d. 1760, aged 70 years; left a son, Josiah; d. in his 27th year, without issue.
- 9 9 Anne, no date; no record whatever is given of this child. She was born in Lebanon, the others in Northampton. The homestead of Richard<sup>2</sup> was sold by his son on his removal to Lebanon, to Preserved Clapp of Northampton.

Children, Fifth Generation :

- 11 1 Samuel, b. May 22, 1700.
- 12 2 Jabez, b. Oct. 10, 1702.

- 13 3 Daniel, b. Feb. 18, 1704-5.
 14 4 Hannah, b. June 27, 1707; d. young.
 15 5 One d. in infancy nameless.

11 SAMUEL<sup>5</sup>, m. in Suffield, Ct., Jan. 13, 1723, Elizabeth Smith, who d. Feb. 28, 1751. Samuel d. Feb. 4, 1754. Lebanon.

According to another tradition, or record, the wife of Samuel<sup>5</sup> was Elizabeth Fowler, but the improbability that the names of the wives of both father and son were the same, casts suspicion on the supposition, and the records of Suffield justify us in ascribing to the son Elizabeth Smith as his wife. Lebanon, Ct.

Children, Sixth Generation:

- 16 1 Samuel, b. Nov. 8, 1723; resided in Coventry.
 17 2 Ichabod, b. 1724; resided in West Hartford.

104 2 Cornelius Mortimer, b. Jan. 28, 1842; m. Sept., 1863; druggist and chemist, doing a successful business; fell into irregular habits, lost his business, then by the energies of an indomitable spirit, restored himself and retrieved his loss of means and character.

105 3 Carleton, M.D., b. Jan. 21, 1849. When a schoolboy he was very much criticised for ungrammatical speech and the subject of ridicule; but only saying "We shall see," he persevered, and at the age of 21 was admitted to the bar. Taking "Life with an aim," as his motto, the day is not distant when his scoffers will envy him in that eminence to which they will never attain.

106 4 Mary Josephine, b. Nov. 10, 1852, } twin daughters, beloved 107 5 Marion Justine, " " } by all who knew them.

Marion d. Feb. 24, 1868; a beautiful child. Amidst all the endearments of life, and in the bloom of youth, touched with the blight of disease and death, she received, with sweet submission, the summons of the pale messenger as her Saviour's gracious call to a nobler life in the spirit world.

100 BURKE<sup>9</sup>, m. Margaret Williams, Oct. 8, 1844.

Children, Tenth Generation :

108 1 Livingston J., b. July 2, 1850; resides in Buffalo.

| 140 10 Abigail. | 143 13 A daughter, name unknown. |

Of these six children nothing is known.

Children, Ninth Generation:

144 1 Andrew, d. 6 June, 1826.

145 2 George L., b. Dec. 29, 1827.

146 3 John, b. March 4, 1831.

Children, Eighth Generation:

149 1 Sarah, b. April 29, 1758; no record.

150 2 Samuel, b. Nov. 28, 1759.

151 3 Isaac, b. May 30, 1762; no record.

152 4 Ruth, b. Jan. 1, 1765; no record.

153 5 Joel, b. June 21, 1769; Dr. Joel of Wilbraham, Mass.

154 6 Irene, b. April 19, 1773; no record.

Children, Eighth Generation:

155 1 Samuel, b. Oct., 1772; lived and died at Vernon, 1850.

156 2 Jerusha, d. in Vernon; unmarried.

157 3 Gad, lived in Middlebury, Vt.; no further record.

159 5 William, b. Oct. 12, 1781; resided in Malone, N. Y.

160 6 Eliphalet, b. 1787; resided in Vernon.

Another record states that he had "four sons, Chester, John, Samuel, Gad and Lemuel." Perhaps these statements may be reconciled by supposing that he had sons, Chester and John in addition to the five specified above.

thrilling stories of the chase; and none more thrilling or romantic than true. He was a natural mechanic, and truly termed "Jack of all trades." Though young, he served some months in the war of 1812 and received his military warrant therefor. His wife was a genuine helpmeet, and, as was the custom in those days in that country, spun and wove the flax and wool of their own growing, and by the labor of her own hands kept her large family warmly clothed. Enoch Lyman maintained an exemplary reputation as a citizen, and, at the time of his death, Dec. 8, 1853, aged 58 years, was a member of the old school Baptist Religious Society, in Turin.

395 LORENZO BRANCH, the second son of Enoch and Margaret Lyman, m. Mary E. Hawkins, at Waukesha, Wisconsin, Sept. 19, 1858. Being naturally studious in his youth, acquired a liberal academical education, and at the age of nineteen commenced the study of law under the tuition of a prominent lawyer, W. S. Hawkins, at his office in Waukesha, Wis. After pursuing a thorough course of law reading and obtaining a practical acquaintance with the forms of practice in the courts, he was admitted to the bar as an attorney at law in all the state courts of record and United State courts. Under the excitement of the then recent gold discoveries in California, he went to that country "overland" in 1849, and there delved for the precious metal with various fortunes for some eight years, sometimes panning out of his ore one hundred dollars of the dust to the pan and often pocketing a handsome nugget; then for a change and possessing his father's great love for the chase, would go out among the almost countless variety of wild game with which the country abounded — pitch his tent under a live oak and follow a hunter's life and partake of a hunter's fare for months together. At the end of nine years he returned to Wisconsin, married Mary E. Hawkins, the only daughter of his former law tutor, and, as his law partner, resumed the practice of law. He there held many offices of public trust and honor, and was a staunch republican from the birth of that party forward. In 1864 he removed with his family, and settled in the Gallatin valley in Montana Territory, engaged in farming, stock raising and the practice of law, and greatly prospered therein. In 1869 he was appointed by President Grant, register of public lands for that territory.

Children, Tenth Generation :

- 409 1 A son, b. Jan. 8, 1864; d. in a few weeks.
 410 2 Sylvie Rozeffie, b. April 28, 1865, in the Rocky Mountains; by reason of her rosy cheeks, called the Rocky Mountain Rose Bud.
 411 3 Herschell Hawkins, b. July 29, 1869.

Mrs. Lyman, d. at Helena City, March 3, 1869. "She was a lady of more than ordinary intelligence, of rare womanly sensibilities, and of qualities of head and heart that endeared her to a large circle of friends and acquaintances, respected and loved by all. Her unexpected and sudden death will be generally lamented, and the widowed husband and orphaned children, in their great bereavement, have the sympathy and condolence of the entire community."

I STILL LIVE.

O, Thou, whose love is changeless,
Both now and evermore :
Source of all conscious being :
Thy goodness I adore.
Lord, I would ever praise Thee
For all Thy love can give ;
But most of all, O, Father !
I thank Thee that I live.

I live ! O ye who loved me !
Your faith was not in vain ;
Back through the shadowy valley
I come to you again.
Safe in the love that guides me,
With fearless feet I tread —
My home is with the angels —
O, say not I am dead.

Not dead ! O, no, but lifted
Above all earthly strife ;
Now first I know the meaning,
And feel the power of life —
The power to rise unnumbered
By woe, or want, or care ;
To breathe fresh inspiration
From pure, celestial air ;

To feel that all the tempests
Of human life have passed,
And that my ark, in safety, rests
On the mount at last.
To send my soul's great longings,
Like Noah's, dove abroad,
And find them swift returning,
With a sign of peace from God ;

To soar in fearless freedom
Through broad, blue, boundless skies
And catch the radiant gleaming
Of love-lit angel eyes ;
To feel the Father's presence
Around me, near or far,
And see His radiant glory
Stretch onwards, star by star ;

To feel those grand upliftings
That know not space nor time,
To hear all discords ending
In harmony sublime ;
To know that sin and error
Are dimly understood,
And that which man calls Evil
Is undeveloped good ;

To stand in spell-bound rapture
On some celestial height,
And see God's glorious sunshine
Dispel the shades of night ;
To feel that all creation
With love and joy is rife : —
This, O my earthly loved ones,
This is Eternal Life !

There, eyes that closed in darkness
Shall open to the morn ;
And those whom death had stricken,
Shall find themselves new-born ;
The lame shall leap with gladness,
The blind rejoice to see ;
The slave shall know no master,
And the prisoner shall be free.

There, the worn and heavy-laden
Their burdens shall lay down ;
There, crosses, borne in meekness,
At length shall win the crown ;
And lonely hearts that famished
For sympathy and love,
Shall find a free affection
In the angel-home above.

O, children of our father !
Weep not for those who pass,
Like rose leaves gently scattered,
Like dew-drops from the grass.
Ay, look not down in sadness,
But fix your gaze on high ;
They only dropped their mantles,
Their souls can never die.

They live ; and still unbroken
Is that magnetic chain,
Which, in your tearful blindness,
You thought was rent in twain.
That chain of love was fashioned
By more than human art,
And every link is welded
So firm it cannot part.

They live ! but O, not idly
To fold their hands to rest,
For they who love God truly,
Are they who serve Him best ;
Love lightens all their labor,
And makes all duty sweet ;
Their hands are never weary,
Nor way-worn are their feet.

Thus by that world of beauty,
And by that life of love,
And by the holy angels
Who listen now above,
I pledge my soul's endeavor,
To do what'er I can
To bless my sister woman,
And aid my brother man.

O, Thou, whose love is changeless,
Both now and evermore,
Source of all conscious being !
Thy goodness I adore.
Lord, I would ever praise Thee
For all Thy love can give ;
But most of all, O, Father,
I thank Thee that I live.

- 41 6 Thomas, b. Jan. 12, 1770, supposed to have removed with his brother Jeremiah to Ohio.

patriot warrior, is entitled to the grateful remembrance of his kindred and his countrymen. At the decease of his father in early childhood he was apprenticed to an uncle to learn the trade of tanner and shoemaker. At the age of 16, the earliest period at which he could be enrolled in the Revolutionary army, he enlisted as a private and served under Gen. Washington to the close of the war. He was one of the prison guard when Major André was led out to execution.

After retiring from the army he returned to his native place and industrial pursuits, and m. Mrs. Jerusha Hunt, of Lebanon, who d. Nov. 17, 1838. Of his ten children the first four daughters were b. in Lebanon. He then removed to Vermont, and became a resident of Vergennes, after some two years at Monkton. His occupation through life was that of tanner and currier.

He was a large, well proportioned man, about six feet in height, of lofty, commanding presence. Few men in the army made so noble an appearance in a military dress. His stately person was but an appropriate representation of his lofty patriotism. "Great in soul, he stood unmoved amid the fluctuations of parties and the strife of demagogues; with true independence his manly spirit soared above the meanness of duplicity and the baseness of dishonor. He was sober in his habits, humane of heart and peaceable in life, a kind husband and father, and a useful citizen. His unblemished character defies the invidious attack of envy, malice and detraction."

He was never plaintiff or defendant in any case in court. His character was unimpeachable enough to remain unscathed even in the political campaign of the war of 1812, when partizan zeal ran mad. The only impeachment of his character was that he allowed his business to drive him instead of maintaining the mastery of it himself.

After some months service in the war of 1812, Major Lyman returned to his home, but when the enemy invaded the state of New York he volunteered in the service of his country and continued in that service at Plattsburg, until the retreat of Provost. While at Plattsburg, by fatigue and exposure to the severity of the weather by night and by day, he lost his health and returned home, and after a short time, expired at the age of fifty-three years, at his own house, 14 days after his engagement in the battle of Plattsburg.

He left but a small property, having a large family without funds requisite for a large business. He had five sons and five daughters of whom three of each sex are still living, the most of whom are residents in the western states.

13 DEA. MILTON LYMAN<sup>8</sup>, 1st son of Daniel<sup>7</sup>, grandson of Dea Joseph<sup>6</sup>, Marshall, Oneida Co., New York; b. Manchester, Hartford Co., Conn., Nov. 15, 1795; m. Jan. 24, 1819, Rachel Carpenter also of Manchester, Conn. His wife Rachel, d. at Marshall, N. Y., March 21, 1820. He m. for his 2d wife Nov. 15, 1820, Olive Parker, of Marshall, Oneida Co., N. Y. He d. Oct. 16, 1870, at Marshall—wagon maker.

He was 35 years a member of the Congregational Church in Hanover, in the town of Marshall, and for many years one of its deacons.

He could always be relied upon. As a church member and church officer he was sure to be found promptly on all occasions in his place, and both ready and anxious to do whatever he could for the cause of Christ which he loved with his whole heart. In storm and shine he was always the same resolved, consistent, active servant of his master.

When the cause of anti-slavery and of temperance was in ill odor with the great mass of the community around him he stood forth at once as their advocate.

He was also generous in his habits of giving, and sometimes even as it seemed to some of his best friends, beyond his ability.

His habits of body and mind were active and fresh to the last, and he was dismissed from earth without any of the slow decay of age, spending one sabbath joyfully on earth and the next more joyfully in heaven, greatly missed by the little band of church members that worship now without him in the same sanctuary.

While his death is precious in the sight of the Lord, the memory of his life of piety and religious fervor will be ever precious to them.

He had never tasted liquors or tobacco or even tea or coffee, in all his life.

She was b. Feb. 1, 1784, and d. May 20, 1866. He settled at "the Green" in Manchester, half a mile west of his father's, on the Hartford and Providence Turnpike. He was a man of humble piety, of great firmness and simplicity of character, of sound judgment, and strong common sense. He often represented the town in the state legislature, and filled other positions of public trust. Owing to his proverbial candor and practical wisdom, he was constantly consulted as a referee in cases of difficulty in the community, and his decisions were always regarded as eminently judicious and fair. He was extremely modest and retiring, and a man of few words, but these, weighty and to the point. He was universally respected, and not known to have had an enemy. He gathered by his industry and enterprise a handsome property. Manchester, Conn.

32 Dea. BENJAMIN LYMAN<sup>6</sup>, twin brother of Dea. Joseph<sup>5</sup>, a tanner by trade in Columbia, formerly Lebanon Crank, m. Elizabeth Collins of the same place, b. 1748; d. Feb. 4, 1826, aged 80. He was an example of the strictest integrity, benevolence and piety. In middle life he became the subject of insanity, a constitutional tendency peculiar to several branches of the Lyman family. His derangement took the form of brooding melancholy, in which for many months he uttered no audible word. In this state of mind he was induced by much persuasion to attend a regimental review in Lebanon. From this he returned apparently a sane man. He conversed freely, returned to the duties of life and for 18 years enjoyed usual health. He returned from a journey in feeble health, became again deranged, and d. Nov. 16, 1804, aged 60.

These twin brothers resembled each other in form and features so nearly that they were with difficulty distinguished the one from the other. In their mental characteristics and mutual affection they manifested the same beautiful identity and unity.

We now resume the genealogy of BENJAMIN<sup>6</sup>, twin brother of Dea. Joseph.

In early life, Benjamin m. Elizabeth Collins, of Lebanon Crank, a woman of exemplary piety, who d. Feb. 4, 1828, in the 80th year of her age.

173 Betsey, b. Nov. 15, 1771; m. Ebenezer Rogers; removed, about 1800, to Washington, Mass., and soon became insane and unable to take care of her family, making frequent attempts to commit suicide. Late in the afternoon of Friday she walked six or seven miles in a thunder storm to a friend's house, but remained in a shed by night, then secreted herself in a swamp where she remained without food until Wednesday, when in extreme exhaustion she crept to a friend's house, and by careful nursing was restored to health both of body and mind. For many years she continued in good health; removed in 1828 to the state of New York; became again insane and so continued until her death, Aug. 28, 1849.

174 Hannah, b. Dec. 22, 1773; d. Dec. 2, 1846. Of a reserved, retiring disposition, she lived 17 years by herself in hereditary apartments in her father's house; in Oct., 1845, she went to reside with her brother Benjamin; became insane and so continued until her death.

175 Artemas, b. Aug. 15, 1776; m. Abigail Barston, March, 1802. In 1811 removed to Onondaga, thence to Sweden, N. Y.; there he became a raving maniac on the subject of religion. Conceiving himself to be a messenger of the Lord, when not chained to his cell he would go from house to house, in the dead of night, calling upon the sleepers to awake and flee from the wrath to come. His children, consisting of two sons and two daughters, removed with him to Michigan where he d. in the autumn of 1843. In periods of his sanity he officiated as deacon of the church where he resided. The history of his children is unknown.

176 Benjamin, b. Oct. 30, 1781; m. June 9, 1803, Lydia Barston, and lived through life, almost 70 years, in the same house, within a few rods of the place of his birth. Mrs. L. d. April 15, 1863, a model wife and mother. As her children, nine in number, gathered around the coffin to take the last look of the deceased, and wept, the voice of the venerable and bereaved husband was heard in clear accents, saying: "Suppress your tears! It is the Lord's will. He gave, He hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord." The eldest son responded:

"A shade of gloom is o'er us cast:
A silent voice to us has spoken;
The silver cord is loosed at last,
The pitcher at the fountain broken.
And all seems sad."

Benjamin, d. Oct. 12, 1871, aged 90 years, less 18 days. His nine children were all present at his funeral—all but one over 50 and three over 60 years of age.

Benjamin Lyman was a kind and affectionate husband and father, revered and beloved by all his children. Such was his moral and religious influence in the training of his household, that none of them have departed from the Christian faith of their father, and all, in a high degree, have maintained blameless lives before the world, verifying the words of the wise man: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." He possessed a good constitution, a strong intellect, a retentive memory, and a kind and benevolent heart. In manners he was modest, dignified, and gentlemanly. His religion was of the Puritan stamp, not spasmodic, but even in its course, every day alike. He was consistent and liberal in his views, and yet firm, in what he believed to be right, and in contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. He was a sweet singer, and his presence and help were often solicited from abroad in times of religious revivals. In 1820, he assisted the Rev. Alfred Wright, missionary to the Choctaws, in forming the Sunday school in Columbia; was chosen its first superintendent, and held the office some 14 or 15 years in succession. After his resignation of that office, he became the teacher of a large adult Bible class, and held it until the infirmities of age rendered it proper for him reluctantly to retire from his charge. He was an efficient helper to his pastor, and in his absence, visited at the bedside of the sick and dying, sometimes attending funerals, and conducted, with ability, religious meetings in the conference room. When destitute of a pastor he led the exercises at the church on the sabbath. He possessed a strong, clear, and sonorous voice, and the old people loved to hear Dea. Lyman read and pray, as well as sing the songs of Zion. One lady more than 80 years of age, in looking upon his form after death, placed her hand upon his brow and exclaimed "O, how many earnest prayers I have heard from that good man's lips." He was chosen deacon of the church at 32 years of age, and officiated in that capacity until disabled through the infirmities of age. He had but a little education from the schools, but was naturally a student, and improved every opportunity to gain knowledge from books and from observation. In the prime of life he was an efficient member of the committee for visiting schools. Poor in this world's goods, but rich in the endowments of nature's God, he served his day and generation well. He retained his faculties nearly unimpaired, until almost four score years of age, after which his mind gradually decaying, he returned to second childhood, and at last to partial insanity.

181 ORVILLE BARSTON LYMAN<sup>3</sup>, son of Dea. Benjamin<sup>7</sup>, of Columbia, Ct., b. March 14, 1804; m. Hannah Taber, of Woodstock, Ct., b. in Westport, Mass., June 5, 1810; d. Nov. 22, 1831. O. B. Lyman united with the church in Columbia in 1831. He became a scholar in the Sunday school at the time of its first organization, in June, 1820. With the exception of attending the common district school, such as they were 50 years ago, about four months in the winter season, until he was eighteen years of age, he was wholly self-educated. His occupation until he was more than 30 years of age, was farming in the summer and teaching school in the winter. His tastes not according fully with farming, he decided, even at this late hour of his life, to change his occupation, and chose the practice of medicine for his future livelihood. He commenced the study of medicine in 1855 by himself; read and examined the works of the different schools, so far as he could obtain them, and finally adopted the theory and practice of the then so-called Thomsonian system, known now as the Eclectic practice, and entered upon its duties Dec., 1837, in the city of Norwich, Ct. At 30 years of age he had no library, with the exception of a few school books. Since then he has gathered a well assorted library of nearly 150 volumes. His practice has been a living one, and he has been blest with more than an average success. He removed from Norwich to Willimantic, Dec., 1852, and followed his profession there with success until April, 1866, when he removed to the city of Hartford, where he still remains in a successful practice. He was superintendent of the Congregational Sunday school in Willimantic, 10 successive years, and also an active member of the church during his stay there.

The following lines, occasioned by her death, were written by her father :

I cannot make it seem that she is dead,
 Profusely though my stricken heart has bled.
 I cannot make it seem her face is hid,
 No more to smile, beneath the coffin's lid,
 Or, that her voice, so sweetly tuned, is hushed
 And all her hopes of longer life are crushed;
 Or, that her form lies now below the sod,
 While upward soared the spirit has to God.
 From memory's urn a thought oft steals away,
 Through numerous years, back to the eventful day
 When first I looked at her, my first-born child;
 With gladness almost passionate and wild —
 Back to the time when she encradled lay,
 And fell disease was wasting her away.
 But it was staid, and she was left to grow
 To riper years, and more of life to know.
 With pain and anguish marked were all her years,
 And watered often were with flowing tears;

And yet I cannot make it seem that death has come,
 And called her hence to yonder spirit home.
 Oft as I tread the room she called her own,
 Now drear and silent, and so very lone,
 Where all is seen just as when in her care,
 I think I'll see her — but she is not there.
 So when I bend over her sacred mound,
 Where dust with dust is mingling under ground,
 Some still, small voice, seems whispering in my ear:
 "Look upward, now, for lo, she is not here!"
 As day recedes with coming shades of even,
 And as I turn my wandering thoughts to heaven,
 And bend the knee and upward look in prayer,
 'Tis good to think my daughter's home is there.

Before he was two years old his parents removed to Brookfield, Vt. He engaged for a time in teaching school. Then he and his brother Abel bought their father's tannery and spent some time in the leather business. He m. Roxana Fisk of Brookfield in 1808. She was also engaged in teaching school, was b. Dec. 22, 1788, and d. June 7, 1829. In 1810 he sold his interest in the tannery to his brother Abel and moved to Potsdam, St. Lawrence Co. N. Y., where he built the 5th dwelling house in the village and also another tannery. In 1812 St. Lawrence Academy was started and he was one of the trustees, which office he held till he moved to Illinois. In 1820 he was appointed deacon of the Presbyterian church and superintendent of the sabbath school. In 1829-31 he superintended 3 sabbath schools, to do which he was obliged to travel 18 miles every sabbath. In 1830 he m. his second wife, Mary P. Bates of Potsdam. In 1832 he and his brother John with their horses and carriage went on an exploring expedition to the "far west," and drove to the Mississippi where the city of Alton now stands. In Sept. 1, 1833, with 10 other families he started for Illinois. (For account of journey see above in record of John). Soon after they arrived, they organized a Presbyterian church and he was appointed one of the elders. They also organized a Temperance Society and he was chosen its first president. In 1835 he spent several months selling Bibles and distributing tracts. In 1836 he was employed by the Illinois Sunday School Union. His field of labor comprised 35 counties in the southern part of the state. He continued in this work 3 years, organized a great many Sunday schools and started anew many that had been suspended, and although in a pecuniary point of view it was an unprofitable, losing business he felt that he received a rich reward. In 1851 his dwelling was burned, he built another and in 1852 sold his farm and purchased another of 240 acres in Green Valley, Tazewell Co., Illinois. In 1854 a Presbyterian church was organized and he was appointed an elder. He is now, 1872, enjoying good health though 87 years old.

Jan. 30, 1864; learned the tanner's trade in his father's works; m. Betsey Cushman, of Brookfield. After residing a few years in West Randolph, moved to Potsdam, N. Y., and bought a farm. He, with his wife, united with Presbyterian church in 1820. In 1833, with his family and relatives he moved to Sangamon Co., Illinois. In 1844 he removed with his family to Minnesota. "From the organization of the Presbyterian church, of Stillwater, in 1849, he was a ruling elder, held in great esteem by the church and community. He was an active, useful and consistent Christian, exceedingly affable in disposition, firm and unflinching in his principles.

Stillwater, Minn.

Frontier Life, Reminiscences, etc.—When the elder Cornelius moved there, the country was a wilderness. Where the city of Stillwater now stands—a city of 6,000 or 7,000 inhabitants—there were only three men, and one log shanty. While opening his farm, which was some four miles from what is now the city of Stillwater, his family resided there, camping out in haying time, to cut the wild hay on the prairies; they fell short of provisions, and having nothing but five or six pounds of pork left, his sons went to Stillwater to obtain supplies. The wolves, attracted by the meat, came around his bed; once or twice he drove them away; finally, he put the meat under his pillow for safe keeping, but the wolves carried it off before morning.

He put up a cabin on the bank of the St. Croix in the spring of 1847, and moved up his family. He brought with him a sow and eight pigs, and they finding themselves in a strange place, took refuge under the house. That night the family were awakened by a terrible squealing, and the oldest son, going out to see what the trouble was, beheld a wolf making off with one of the young pigs. He immediately gave chase, but the wolf was too spry for him and escaped. He had but just returned when the pigs sounded the alarm again. He immediately issued forth with intent to kill, but the enemy had retired in good order. Storrs returned to the house, concluding that the wolves, had determined to have the pigs at all hazards, as they did, before morning. The dam, bereft of her young, returned in the morning to the city in grand disgust with frontier life.

The Indians at this time were very numerous, but generally were friendly toward the whites. But the Chippewas and Sioux were continually at war among themselves.

A party of Sioux came to the house one night just at dusk and wanted supper. They had been on the war path and had the scalps of some ten or a dozen Chippewas whom they had killed, that afternoon, some six or seven miles above on the Apple river. No one was at home except Mrs. Lyman. She refused them admittance, but told them they might build their fire out in the yard, which they did; and after supper, they danced their scalp dance, nearly all night. One of the members of that war party is now a missionary among the Sioux.

quired to renounce protestantism, or sacrifice all that the heart holds dear on earth, he made the sacrifice for conscience sake. His property, which was ample, was confiscated. His wife, with three young children, was torn from his embrace. Thus destitute and desolate he was banished to a distant foreign country, but he who holds the winds in his fist directed the ship to the shores of England where he was lauded. His wife, knowing nothing of his fate, managed to transport her little charge also to England. There, landed on the beach, she sat neglected while others were received by friends or shared the kindness and hospitality of strangers; then raising a loud and bitter cry, she exclaimed: Is there none here who can speak the French language? Attracted by the cry and the accents of his native tongue, a stranger went to her relief and sank into the embrace of his lost, despairing wife, by this surprising providence receiving her with their little ones as alive from the dead! Once more united, an unbroken family in a foreign land, like their Divine Master, they had not where to lay their heads. Still the subjects of penury and of persecution they took refuge in the wilds of America, the home of the oppressed.

The names of their three sons b. in France, were Francis, Ephraim and Joshua. Other children were born to them in America, from whom a numerous posterity have descended worthy of their pious and distinguished ancestry. Mary Gittau, wife of David Lyman, d. in 1803, aged 85 years. He d. Dec. 27, 1787.

21 EPAPHRAS was the eldest son and first settler in the township. He came in advance of the family, and for six months labored alone, building a house and making a small clearing. His nearest white neighbor was eighteen miles distant. For his meat he drove with him a young beef creature, there being no roads for conveying provisions. He followed out a log in which to salt his meat; and with the few things he could bring on his back, commenced housekeeping. On returning to his shanty one day, he found a wolf on the roof eating the heifer's skin which he had thrown there, to be, as he supposed, out of the way of such pilferers. At another time, he came home and noticing, at a little distance, that the door was slightly ajar, he cautiously advanced, and pushing wide open the door, an Indian sprang up, rifle in hand, and quickly leveled the deadly instrument at his breast, at but a few feet distant; but before the Indian could fire Mr. Lyman sprang upon him, wrenched the rifle from his hands and quickly overpowered him. The Indian had learned enough of our language to find words to plead for his life; and, although he was an old offender, he was dismissed in peace.

Mr. Lyman was a man of good talents who took a prominent part in all the affairs of the new settlement, particularly all that pertained to the welfare of his fellow men. The poor found in him a helping, sympathizing friend. His fund of information was extensive and varied. A man of sterling integrity: he repeatedly filled offices of trust and honor. He was born 1784 or 1785, and died 1842 lamented by all who knew him.

12 REV. ORANGE LYMAN<sup>7</sup>, son of David<sup>6</sup>, David<sup>5</sup>, Richard<sup>4</sup>, Richard<sup>3</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>, was a Presbyterian minister, educated at Williams College, receiving his diploma from President E. Fitch; he studied theology with Rev. Dr. Porter, of Catskill, N. Y., where he made many warm friends, among whom was Rev. Samuel J. Mills. Mr. Lyman was married Sept. 13, 1814, to a sister of a classmate and dear friend, Chester Dewey, late of Rochester, N. Y., and for many years professor in Williams College, and in the Rochester University. His wife's name was Maria Dewey, dau. of Stephen Dewey of Sheffield, Berkshire Co., Mass., who reared a large family of children. She is still living Jan., 1870. Mr. Lyman was a man of great energy of character, sterling worth and eminent piety. He enjoyed the acquaintance, friendship and confidence of a very large number of the best men of his time; prompted by a desire to do the greatest amount of good, and having a fondness for rural life, he chose the life of a pioneer in the work of the ministry, and from the time when the west meant western New York state, afterwards in north-eastern Ohio, and in the evening of his life in northern Illinois, he was always one of the foremost in the good cause. His wife, one of Berkshire's most gifted daughters, always held up his hands; and his home, though sometimes only a log house, was always graced by her presence and presented the charms of a refined New England home. His latch string was always out, and hundreds of weary brother ministers have found their toilsome life cheered and made bright by only a brief sojourn under his hospitable roof. He was gifted with a very rare fund of anecdotes, always appropriate, and the writer has often, when a boy, sat for hours and listened, as he and some dear old classmate or other cherished friends sat around that cheerful fire, and told over the days of long ago. He died at the good old age of 71, beloved and respected by all who knew him.

Dr. Lyman was b. in the parish of Torrington, in Litchfield county, on 6th of September, 1787, and d. in the 64th year of his age. He early distinguished himself at school by his great proficiency, being for one year at school, after which, by his unassisted application, he prepared himself for entering the junior class at college. After obtaining his profession, with the cares of a family, and the pressure of a large professional business, he found time to prosecute his classical and mathematical studies, until he had attained the full college course, and made himself one of the most perfect scholars of his time. At the age of 24 years, Dr. Lyman was licensed to practice medicine, by a board of censors; and in 1831, received the honorary degree of doctor of medicine, from Yale College, at the recommendation of the president and fellows of the Connecticut Medical Society.

Dr. Lyman was endowed with faculties of mind which fitted him for eminence in his profession. He possessed great powers of memory. When he commenced the study of the Latin and Greek languages, he committed to memory the whole grammar and small dictionaries of these languages; and, what would have been to other men a task too irksome to be borne, was to him an easy attainment; his memory was as retentive as it was strong; for we are told, that when a boy, in learning and reading the Bible and Psalm Book, they were so fully committed, that he could recite most of the Testament and every psalm and hymn in the Hymn Book, by giving him the number or first line. And in reading the Greek Testament, with a Latin translation he so read it, that he could recite the whole Testament in the Latin, Greek, and English languages, to the time of his death, and was so familiar with the Greek and Latin classics, that he could recite whole pages, often putting to the blush those who had received a full collegiate education, by his accuracy in classical literature. His strong and retentive memory, made him the repository of all the great facts and discoveries, both in the natural and medical world, for the last forty years. It enabled him to gather up all the different systems and theories of medical writers, and the most successful treatment of diseases, from the earliest annals of medicine, to the present time. He remembered every case of any importance, which he had ever seen, and most of which he had heard. He practised successfully, for about seventeen years, in Glastenbury, Connecticut, and for the last twenty-two years, in the town of Warren; making thirty-nine years in which he had constantly been engaged in the ordinary duties of his profession. He had thus accumulated a vast fund of medical knowledge, and tested the correctness of different systems of the treatment of diseases, by his own large experience. His mind was, therefore, one great store-house of knowledge, in which nothing was ever lost, but so arranged that he could at all times, make those treasures available, by calling them to his aid, on any emergency. His apprehension had the rapidity of electricity. He saw at a glance the whole case before him in all its bearings; and his far-seeing eye detected at the outset, the point of danger, and he guarded it with the most consummate skill and fidelity, until the danger was past. Hence, in the result of a case, he was never taken by surprise.

From Mr. John Lyman we have the following account of frontier life in Potter Co., Penn. William Ayers moved into Potter county, the fall of 1808, six miles east of Condersport, the county seat of Potter Co. In 1809, Major Isaac Lyman obtained the agency of the land of John Keating & Co., who owned 130,000 acres of land in the county. Mr. Lyman had 150 acres given him, and each of his sons, 50 acres. The first fifty families that settled on their land had fifty acres each by settling thereon, building a house and clearing five acres and residing thereon five years, then they were entitled to a deed, and as much more land as they wished to purchase at two dollars per acre. In Nov., 1809, Mr. Lyman came from Tioga Co., into Potter Co., 42 miles, and laid up a log house twenty by twenty-two feet, put on a roof of shingles four feet long and built up the gable end with the same, split slabs out of pine logs, dressed them with a narrow axe and laid the lower floors, cut out a place for a door and openings for two windows, for two six lighted windows, and laid three-fourths of the upper floor; this was the situation of his house when he moved into it the 16th of March, 1810, at night, with his family, consisting of ten in number. There was not a bushel of grain nor any meat, except wild game, elk, deer, panthers, bears, and wolves; we had to haul our provisions from fifty to seventy-five miles over a very bad road, and some brought on pack horses; where night overtook us there was our tavern, we made our own fires, cooked our own victuals, made our own bed on the ground of hemlock boughs. The landlord was very generous, charged us nothing, but yet the hardships and privations were many. He was married the 10th of Sept., 1812, began life with nothing, having poor health for four years, has had a family of twelve children, and by the help of God is yet alive waiting for the Lord's time to call him home.

We give this family in Lock Haven, Pa., a place here because they seem to be related to the lineage of Major Isaac Lyman.

The tradition of the family is that their grandfather Eleazer was a son of onè Major Lyman, an officer of the Revolution, that this Eleazer, b. in Mass. m. Betsey Raymond—that he removed to Tioga Co., N. Y., where he lived a farmer until 1850. They had 3 sons and 6 daughters.

One of these sons was Eleazer, Jr., the father of the present family, who m. Sally Payne said to be from Mass. The issue of this marriage was 4 sons and 2 daughters. He removed to Alleghany Co., and studied medicine, and then established himself in Great Bend, Susquehanna Co., Pa., as a physician and surgeon. He was killed by his horse at the age of 42 in 1845. His wife d. in 1839.

A sister of this Dr. Lyman m. Ex-Governor Blair of Michigan.

The oldest son of Dr. Lyman, C. A. Lyman, Esq., a lawyer in Lock Haven, enlisted in 1861 as Capt. of a Co., in the 7th Pa. R. C., and participated in many of the great battles of the Peninsula and the Potomac, and was promoted to the rank of Maj. and Col. He is 51 years of age and has a family of six children.

The second son, C. E. Lyman, is a mechanic and manufacturer. Another brother with himself and his son enlisted early in the war of the rebellion all distinguished for their bravery in many battles, the brother and son were killed when leading the forlorn hope in storming Fort Fisher. The surviving brothers were frequently raised in rank for their dauntless courage and effective service in many battles, never laying down their arms until victory was achieved and the rebellion quelled.

Few families have a more patriotic and honorable record. Some one, we hope, more fortunate than ourselves, will be able to establish their true relations to their kindred, whom all the Lyman family would gladly welcome to their brotherhood.

In the life time of Mr. Lyman a heated controversy arose in Lebanon about the location of a church, which illustrates the spirit of the times; and, with circumstantial variations, stands as an example of controversies often enacted in New England, on similar occasions.

In the height of their excitement one party set fire to the old "meeting-house," but failing in their object, the other party committed an equal sacrilege on the old church with their axes, breaking up the pews and hewing the timbers. On the sabbath following, the contending parties met in the school house for public worship. Their pastor proposed to these discordant assailants of himself and his church to sing the 74th Psalm as paraphrased by Dr. Watts :

Will God forever cast us off?
 His wrath forever smoke
 Against the people of his love
 His little chosen flock ?

How are the seats of worship broke !
 They tear the building down ;
 And he that deals the heaviest stroke
 Procures the chief renown.

With flames they threaten to destroy
 Thy children in their rest,
 Come, let us burn at once, they cry
 The temple and the priest.

The chorister, an active agent in the sacrilege, confused and trembling, set his pitch pipe, the tuning instrument of the day, upon B flat, and sounded the note, but had no voice to lead the song. The result was that two churches were erected a mile apart, and two feeble antagonistic assemblies formed, who might have remained a powerful central church harmoniously meeting for worship in the great congregation age after age.

32 Rev. WILLIAM LYMAN<sup>r</sup>, D.D., of Millington, a parish in the town of East Haddam, Conn. son of William Lyman of Lebanon, Conn., b. at Lebanon, 6th Sept., 1764, educated at Yale College where he graduated in the class of 1786, served a brief term as tutor in his alma mater. He was a chaplain with the troops under Gen. Shepard, during the Shays rebellion.

Dr. Lyman was a man of uncommon bodily strength; and 288lbs. weight.

He settled in Millington in the year 1784, where he remained thirty-six years in an uninterrupted pastorate. He afterwards removed to western New York, where he continued ministerial labors, in the churches of Mount Morris and Le Roy for a time. He died at Arcade, N. Y., in Nov., 1832.

At his installation in Millington he was quite young, in fact, and still younger in appearance. His trial sermon before the ordaining council, was highly satisfactory, inasmuch that a member ventured the suggestion that a more experienced hand than his had been employed upon it.

Mr. Lyman was a good preacher and was made more impressive by the uncommon compass of his voice. He was never fatigued by speaking. He has been known to speak nine hours in a day. The power of his voice was a quality that aided to individualize him. When it fell to him to preach the "election sermon" at Hartford, a gentleman on his way to that city invited his neighbor in Farmington to go with him to hear and see the proceedings.

"No," said he, "I am very busy, but when the hour comes, I am going up into the mountain to hear the sermon"—10 miles distant.

Dr. Lyman sat as a prince in his parish in virtue of the influence that he had fairly earned, and a remnant is still left of those who ardently cherish his memory. Many of his occasional sermons were published. Some of them remain in the memory of his people. Upon a funeral occasion, when there was no preacher present, a lady who had committed to memory one of Dr. Lyman's funeral sermons, upon invitation, repeated it, and thus all the proper rites of the occasion were filled. He m. Rhoda Huntington, Dec. 24, 1789. She was b. at Lebanon, Ct., June 11, 1767.

98 COL. CHARLES OTIS SHEPARD, U. S. consul at Yedo, Japan, son of Charles Otis Shepard and Rhoda H. Lyman Shepard, of Arcade, N. Y. ; was b. at Arcade, 1842. He enlisted in the early days of the rebellion, and was soon promoted to a lieutenancy, in which capacity he served during the war. His aptness as a drill-master and clerk led to heavy drafts upon his energies. He returned home to Buffalo. He labored in the organization of the " frontier police," and enstamped upon that organization the seal of his genius. He became a colonel. He threw himself into the canvass, which resulted in the election of Gen. Grant to the presidency. Under the administration to whose accession he had contributed, he was appointed consul at Japan, to reside at Yedo. The running down of the U. S. ship Oneida off the coast of Japan, called the consul to vigorous but unsuccessful efforts to save the crew. In the disaster by explosion at Yedo, in which Missionary Cornes, his wife and child were destroyed, Consul Shepard exerted himself to better effect. When Hon. W. H. Seward visited Japan, the pleasure of entertaining him, on account of sickness in the family of the American minister, devolved upon Consul Shepard ; and thus, when Mr. Seward went into the presence of the Mikado, Mr. Shepard was also admitted — an honor never before attained by one of his rank. Mr. Shepard, though the youngest, is one of the most efficient and useful of American consuls.

83 REV. HUNTINGTON LYMAN<sup>7</sup>, was the 2d son of Rev. William Lyman, D.D., of Millington, where he was b. April 25, 1803. His parents desired to give him a collegiate education, and to that end some progress was made in the study of the Latin classics. Pecuniary stringency following the war of 1812, however, interrupted the plan, and Huntington entered a clerkship opened to him by his older brother in Sparta, and in Moscow, N. Y. After completing his apprenticeship he became a partner of that brother, and pursued a prosperous business for seven years in China, N. Y. At this stage of his life he became in the military line, inspector of brigade.

In 1831, the Amer. S. School Union being desirous to fill the valley of the Mississippi with Sunday schools, invited Mr. Lyman to enter their service and to have charge of the Sunday school depository at New Orleans; which he did. The influence of the climate was unfriendly and compelled him after severe sickness to abandon his position and return to a northern latitude.

On his way, he met at Cincinnati, friends who had gathered with the purpose of entering Lane Seminary which was awaiting the arrival of Dr. Beecher and other professors. The proposal was here made to Mr. Lyman, to join those who were to constitute the first theological class of the new institution. Although the difficulties in the way of this step were great, they were overcome. After spending a short time in the preparatory course, Mr. Lyman was admitted as a member of the first formed class of that seminary, not on a college diploma but on the score of "general attainments."

Two years of happy sociality and earnest study under beloved teachers ensued.

American slavery was at that day an apple of discord and a theme of public debate. The institution was anti-slavery in all its parts, but it was divided upon the question of colonization. A great majority of the students were for unconditional abolition, and opposed to the scheme of colonization. This difference, through the action of the executive committee became the occasion of a rupture. The executive committee, persons unknown to the students prepared a code of laws which a majority of the students, thought oppressive, and decided not to enter for another term under them. Mr. Lyman was one of those who for this cause took letters of dismission.

He immediately became a member of Oberlin Theological Seminary, where he completed his studies. He was ordained in 1836. He accepted a commission from the American Anti-slavery Society, and as a lecturer, performed for it, in stormy times, a brief service. Then he became pastor of a church in Buffalo, N. Y. In 1845, he removed to the territory of Wisconsin. As a home missionary, he spent at Sheboygan the greater part of the fifteen years of his life in that region. Returning in 1860, to New York, he has up to this date, 1872, devoted himself to the duties of his profession, at Marathon, N. Y. When the rebellion broke out, Mr. Lyman exerted all his powers to rally loyal soldiers and to sustain and cheer those at the front. He m. Frances Kingman, April 25, 1839. Marathon, N. Y.

Mr. Lyman graduated at Yale College about 1797, was ordained about the year 1800, to the Congregational ministry. Very early in his ministerial career, which opened with much promise, he was compelled by ill health to abandon his calling and undertake that of teaching. Returning health led him to resume the duties of the profession he so much loved, only to be again compelled to return to the office of a teacher of youth. In 1820, he had a boarding school at Jamaica, L.I., in 1825, preached at Chatham, N. J., in 1828, he removed to New York city editing for a time the Youth's Journal, removed in 1832, to Buffalo, N. Y., had a boarding school in Skeneateles; in 1834, removed to Clinton, at which place he d. in 1836. All his life he was struggling against the inroads of pulmonary disease, resuming ministerial labor whenever an improvement in his health or a change of climate encouraged him to do so. For many years before his death he did not attempt any regular charge, officiating only occasionally as he found himself able. He taught at Kennebunk, Boston, Buffalo and Clinton. Clinton, N. Y.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This not only helps in tracking expenses but also ensures compliance with tax regulations.

In the second section, the author outlines the various methods used for data collection and analysis. These include surveys, interviews, and focus groups. Each method has its own strengths and limitations, and the choice depends on the specific research objectives.

The third section provides a detailed overview of the results obtained from the study. It includes several tables and graphs that illustrate the key findings. The data shows a clear trend towards digital adoption among small businesses, which is driven by the need for efficiency and cost reduction.

Finally, the document concludes with a series of recommendations for future research and practical applications. It suggests that further studies should explore the long-term impact of digitalization on business performance and employee satisfaction.

of a meeting of the Bible Society, at the City Hotel. At the hour appointed she was working her way through the crowd in the streets to the place appointed. Arriving at the hall, she found it already crowded. On descending, she met the usual throng in Broadway, all going, as she supposed, to the Bible meeting. Her own disappointment being fresh in mind, she addressed first one and then another group: "You can't get in." This address was only returned by a look of curiosity while the crowd swept on. Finding that her well intended effort made no impression, she said: "Well, try it if you will, but I've just been there, and the hall is full." Enfield, Conn.

Joseph, however, the eldest, enlisted as a private at the breaking out of the war. Failing to secure a position in the 1st Iowa Regt. of Infantry, the company to which Joseph belonged, became a part of the 4th Iowa Cavalry as "Co. E." After serving as private and corporal of cavalry until Nov., 1862, a commission came unexpectedly from the Gov. appointing him adjutant of the 29th Regt. of Infantry, which he accepted. He was the youngest officer, and, with few exceptions, the youngest man in the Regt. The only vacancy occurring in the offices above him was that of major, to which by general voice, Mr. Lyman was promoted. In 1864, Maj. Lyman was in the staff of Gen. S. A. Rice, and was by the side of that officer when he received his mortal wound. During the last year of the war Maj. Lyman served as adjutant general in the staff of Maj. General F. Steele. Major Lyman was mustered out of service in 1865, after the surrender of the rebel armies. Desirous to retain him in the military service, a commission in the regular army was sent him which he declined. Maj. Lyman was in very active service which led him, with the exception of N. and S. Carolina and Va., into all the rebel states. Aside from frequent skirmishes the following is the list of battles in which he participated, Helena, Ark., July 4, 1863; Little Rock, Sept 10, 1863; Terre Noir Creek, April, 1864; Prairie De Anne, April 1864; Camden, April, 1864; Saline River, April, 1864; Bluff Springs, Fl., March, 1865; siege of Mobile, April 29, 1865. During more than four years service at the front Maj. Lyman was never wounded, though he had two horses killed under him.

Sereno and William, brothers of the foregoing Major Lyman, becoming of sufficient age, enlisted in 1864 in Co. C, in the same—24th Regt.—with their brother, where they served to the end of the war. A commission as captain of a negro company was tendered to Sereno, which, as it involved the necessity of serving longer than the duration of the war, was for that reason declined. Council Bluffs, Ia.

19 Rev. JOSEPH LYMAN<sup>6</sup>, D.D., of Hatfield, was b. April 14, 1749, at Lebanon, and was the son of Jonathan and Bethia Lyman. He m. Oct. 15, 1772, Hannah Huntington, dau. of Simon and Sarah of Lebanon, Ct. Graduated at Yale, in 1769, with high honors. After a popular tutorship there, he was ordained 4th March, 1772, pastor of the Congregational church in Hatfield, Mass., where, for over half a century he served the church and society, with great ability, and wielded a marked influence among the ministry and churches of western Massachusetts. He used to ascribe much of his pastoral success, to his wife, whose ruling aim seemed to be, to promote his usefulness. He was one of the most commanding men in the ministry, in his day; and in nothing of a worldly nature, did he show more power over his contemporaries, than in giving shape to pulpit influence, during our Revolutionary struggle. His colleague, Rev. Dr. Waterbury, late of Boston, speaking of him, as he was in the last two years of his life, makes this just estimate of his character, and this is said after he had passed into a state of bodily infirmity, which, to use his forcible language, "gave to him, the aspect, somewhat, of a magnificent ruin. The heavy column, and the broad span of the arch, told, even in their dilapidation, the scale of grandeur, upon which the whole structure had been reared. The Roman cast of his features, his expressive eye, his simplicity of language, and manner, struck me very forcibly upon my first introduction to him." "This great and good man" d. March 27, 1828. He had seven children, only two of which survived him.

For 56 years Dr. Lyman was pastor of the church in Hatfield; a man of mark in his day, of great originality and decision of character, he exerted for many years a commanding influence in the state, especially in ecclesiastical councils, in settling controversies in the churches and theological discussions; many candidates for the ministry resorted to him for instruction in theology. From 1823 to 1826 he was president of the A. B. C. F. M.; the degree of S. T. D., he received from Williams College. Many anecdotes are related of him illustrative of his character and influence, of which the following may be given:

While he was ever true and faithful to the gospel, he was roused to great zeal and activity in promoting the revolution which resulted in the independence of our country.

He was associated with Caleb Strong and Isaiah Thomas in writing and publishing letters of the most stirring character. Nor did he fail in private, or in public, to exert all his powers in rousing and keeping alive the patriotism of the people. But his actions and his utterances, in this direction, did not fail to awaken opposition. A leading man of the parish was of different politics, and, of course, became indignant that his young minister should thwart and counteract him. Able to bear it no longer, he came one day into the parson's study, and, in an excited manner, exclaimed, "Mr. Lyman, I have gotten you here as my minister, and now you rise up against me. I shall not bear it." Mr. Lyman at once arose, assuming an attitude, at least as erect and commanding as his assailant, and said: "Sir, you have governed this town, and to a great extent, the county for a long time, but I now inform you there is one you will never govern." The rebuker, wrathful but abashed, hastened out of the room. But to his credit, be it said, after a little time he returned with an apology, and showed his nobility by saying: "Mr. Lyman, I shall ever honor your independence, and be more your friend than ever on account of it."

"Very soon after my own settlement in the ministry," says a cotemporary, "Dr. Lyman stopped for a few minutes at my house, saying as he came in, 'I am an Old Testament man, and call on ministers.' This was the introduction to my acquaintance with one whom I ever found cordial, interesting and instructive to an uncommon degree. What I particularly remember of his first call was, that after the door was quite closed at his departure, he came back and said, in a fatherly but most impressive manner, 'You are beginning the ministry, and I want to give you one charge; always make Saturday noon your last limit for the full preparation of your sabbath sermons. Do this that you may relax, and refresh yourself in the afternoon; have your nerves in such a state that you can sleep; and be in a proper physical condition for the labors of the pulpit.'

"I will add that my own experience, and the contrary experience of many of my brethren, have fully confirmed me in the wisdom and importance of the rule thus given me at my front door, more than fifty years ago."

He was never detained from his pastoral duties on the Lord's day, by sickness, during his connection with the church. He was a liberal donor to all the benevolent institutions of his day. In 1820, the society contemplated building a new church, and at a meeting of the society for that purpose, it was proposed that a committee should first settle their accounts with their pastor. The committee accordingly attended to the settlement, and found, that there were certain sums left unpaid for the last sixteen years, which several sums, with the interest upon each to the time of settlement amounted to the sum of three thousand and three hundred dollars, Mr. Lyman, then told the committee, if they would give him a note for three hundred dollars he would cancel the obligation.

225 DANIEL LYMAN<sup>r</sup>, M.D., was born in Woodstock, Ct., Sept. 5, 1784, and what is a little remarkable, was taken to church on the day of his birth—it being the sabbath—and baptized by his father Eliphalet Lyman who was pastor of the Congregational church in that village for 40 years. Daniel fitted for college in the Woodstock Academy, and at the time of his death was the only living member of the first class which left that institution. He entered Yale about the year 1805. He stood high in that institution as a scholar, took an active part in debate and other exercises connected with some one of the literary societies which flourished there. During the latter part of his senior year he was attacked with an affection of the heart, which necessitated his laying aside his studies for some months, so that he failed to graduate with his class. He pursued a regular course in the medical department of Dartmouth under the instruction of the celebrated Dr. Smith. He was a remarkably apt scholar to whatever department of study he turned his attention. He commenced the practice of medicine and surgery in his native village, about the year 1809 or 1810, in which calling he had a wide and very successful practice for 40 years. He administered to the bodies of his fellow citizens of the surrounding region, for almost the identical period of time which it was the privilege of his honored father to prescribe for their spiritual maladies. He made a specialty of cases of epilepsy in the treatment of which he had remarkable success, having patients from every state of the Union. And he was not without honor in other departments: he held the office of judge of probate for several successive terms, during which time he had the decision of several very intricate cases. One case in particular on which he could get no light from high authority which he consulted, he at length decided according to his best judgment, which judgment was afterward confirmed and made the law of the state in such cases by legislative enactment. He had an almost intuitive perception and insight, into the merits of any matter brought before him. He was justice of the peace for many years. He feared no man. No flatteries, no bribes, no insinuations, no threats could move him a hair's breadth from what he considered a straight line. Of firm nerve, of undaunted courage, he was a terror to evil doers. He entered heartily into all matters of public, social, civil, or religious interest. In temperance he early advocated the principle of total abstinence, and delivered a stirring address in his own town in 1835, in which he advocated this platform as the only safe one. An earnest Christian, a zealous patriot, he possessed a clear head, a guileless heart, a tender conscience: he has left to his children the precious legacy of a good name. He was united in m. June 26, 1811, with Miss Frances M. Eldridge, of Brookline, Conn., and d. March 5, 1870. Woodstock, Conn.

This branch is represented in the ministry of every church from the democratic Congregational to the imperial Roman Catholic inclusive. Two families have educated each two sons for the ministry; and another, three for the same office. Those only, who, with the control of moderate means, have battled with the task of educating publicly their sons, can appreciate the zeal and persistence required for its accomplishment.

Almost, without exception, the Lymans have survived the severities of their curriculum, and emerged from their college course, mens sana in corpore sano, sound in body and in mind. As a characteristic illustration it may be remarked that the colonial laws of college were very different from those which are borne by republican students of the present day. One of those old laws having a reference to the proper dignity of the seniors, allowed that class to exact menial service from the freshmen. The freshmen split wood, made fires, brushed boots, and carried parcels for their superiors. A pompous senior, as his classmate passed his door, said to him, "Lyman, as you are going by the cricket ground, please send me a dozen freshmen." Mr. Lyman executed the order to the letter and was at pains to wait until the full number of freshmen was found and marshalled. When they presented themselves at his door, the senior was taken aback by the array. All the errand he could make, was, the conveyance of his six pieces to the laundress.

Other incidents of college life are omitted for want of space.

though born and educated in the Congregational faith, yet from conviction became a Baptist, and was the first person immersed upon a profession of faith in Christ in the town. In his theology he was strictly Calvinistic, but earnest in all the practical duties of the gospel. He made the Bible supreme and final in his faith and practice.
He loved the church and consecrated his abilities to its support and edification. He was very faithful in prayer and exhortation, and in the absence of a pastor led the worship of the sanctuary, to the comfort of the church and satisfaction of the congregation. In a very decided sense it may be said of him, that he used the office of a deacon well and purchased to himself a good degree and great boldness in the faith. He was a good man; an

PART IV.

1 THOMAS LYMAN<sup>3</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>, 1649-1725; the 2d son of the 2d Richard; b. in Windsor, Conn., about 1649; moved with his parents to Northampton about 1656, where he m. 1678, Ruth, widow of Joseph Baker and daughter of William Holton. By her marriage with Mr. Baker, in 1663, she had had six children, the eldest of whom, Joseph, b. Jan. 20, 1665, was, with his father, killed by the Indians, Oct. 29, 1675. Dea. Thomas<sup>3</sup>, had, according to Savage, six children, two of whom—Elizabeth and Enoch—are mentioned by him alone, and do not appear in the Durham records. He moved, in 1708 or '9, to Durham, Conn., which, for three or four generations thereafter, was the headquarters of this branch of the Lyman family. His wife Ruth and a part of his children came with him; he was one of the early settlers; one of the first deacons; a representative of the town several sessions; and d. there July 15, 1725, aged 75. The date of Mrs. Ruth Lyman's death is unknown. Both signed the covenant pledge at the settlement of the Rev. Nathaniel Chauncey, the first minister of Durham, Dec. 30, 1710. The letter of dismissal and recommendation from Dr. Solomon Stoddard is preserved and is here copied: "To Mr. Nathaniel Chauncey and the brethren at Durham that are about to enter into a church state: Ensign Thomas Liman, who is one of your inhabitants, has desired letters of dismissal for himself and wife, accordingly we do recommend them to your holy communion; he is in covenant with us; she is in full communion; both without offense. We desire that God would make them blessings among you, and prosper your beginnings that a foundation may be laid for the conversion and edification of many, thus requesting your prayers for us, we remain your brethren in the fellowship of the gospel. Solomon Stoddard in the name and consent of the church in Northampton. N. Hampton, Jan. 16, 1711<sup>o</sup>."

Children, Fourth Generation:

3 3 Ebenezer<sup>4</sup>; 1682-1762; had 7 children, Experience, Ebenezer, Stephen, Experience, Mindwell, John, Hannah.

6 6 Enoch<sup>4</sup>; b. Jan. 18, 1691, found only in Savage; he may have d. young; no date of any kind; no record of marriage; does not appear in the Durham records, though the names of his three brothers appeared there repeatedly. This Enoch Lyman appears to have removed early to Glastenbury, where he m. Dinah, dau. of Samuel Smith, b. Oct. 28, 1697. He appears to have inherited property from his wife and to have been a large landholder. He sells land at different times for £80, 70, 450, 150, 55, 120, and releases to Samuel his brother-in-law, 234 acres for £120, buys in 1733 land for £550, appears to have d. between 1745-8, leaving a dau. Dinah and a son Samuel.

His granddaughter, Mrs. Hannah L. Ingersoll of Rochester, N. Y., says: "My grandfather Ebenezer came to Torrington before it was settled, purchased a large tract of land, hence the name Lyman Brook, which ran so far on his land. After a few persons came into the place, they built a fort on my grandfather's land, and every night resorted to it to sleep. In the day time they hoed their corn and cut their hay, with their guns by their side." She goes on to say that he had 2 sons and 5 daughters, viz.

Ebenezer Lyman<sup>5</sup>, d. about 1751, at the age of 42; this date is recovered by means of the following singular tradition, preserved by his grandson, Geo. Lyman, of Wadsworth, Ohio, who writes to his sister, under date of Feb. 4, 1869, as follows: "Our grandfather lost his life in the following manner: He, with two other men, went from home on a hunting expedition expecting to be gone from home several days. It was in the winter. When they arrived at the place where they expected to stop awhile, it being night, they built a fire against a large rock, and lay down by it to sleep. While thus situated, the fire operated on the rock and a very large portion fell over directly on our grandfather and so badly bruised him he did not long survive. Father, Caleb<sup>6</sup>, b. 1747, was then about four years old; so that the death of Ebenezer<sup>5</sup>, first settler of Torrington, occurred about 1751.

tenor, 36 acres of land with a mansion house, March 14, 1741. The next month, Hope, wife of John<sup>5</sup>, buys April 6, 1741, of Eph. Coe, 25 acres for £200, directly west of the previous purchase, now called "swamp pasture." And so John<sup>5</sup>, and his wife go on buying, as shown by 14 curious old deeds, till they have 165 acres, which cost £1,623. He d. in 1763. His 8 children were: battle of Lake George, Sept. 8, 1755, Gen. Johnson having retired to his tent after "receiving a flesh wound in his thigh at the commencement of the battle," the command devolved on Gen. Lyman, who, says Dr. Dwight in his Travels, vol. III, 349, "immediately stationed himself in front of the breast-work, and there, during five hours, amid the thickest danger, issued his orders to every part of the army, with a serenity few acquire." At length the French were repulsed on all sides, and their commander, Baron Dieskau, an able general, was taken prisoner. Gen. Johnson, though he acknowledged in conversation that the victory was won chiefly by Gen. Lyman, did not mention him in his dispatches. The news of the victory arriving in England when the government was discouraged by Braddock's defeat of two months before, revived the hopes of king and country, and gave a new turn to the fortunes of the war. Johnson's claims being immediately urged in the right quarter, Lyman's name being as yet unheard of in England, he received the thanks of parliament, and £5,000. and a baronetcy. After the close of the war, which this and other services of Gen. Lyman had contributed to render successful and glorious, he went to England, where he remained eleven years and where his solicitations for recognition and reward were fruitless, or nearly so. He returned in 1774, cherishing some faint hope of recompense in a projected settlement of Mississippi and the Yazoo lands; but d. in 1775, in West Florida, on his way to the new colony. Besides Dwight's Travels, vols. I and III, see Mass. Hist. Collections, vol. VII, 1st series, 108-115; also Fowler's Hist. of Durham, 108-9. Gen. Lyman m. The following records may show in what consideration he was held:

To all persons to whom these presents shall come, I Samuel Wheeler send greeting. Know ye that I ye said Samuel Wheeler of Oxford, in Derby, in the county of New Haven and colony of Connecticut in New England, do for, and in consideration of love, good will and respect which I have, and do bare towards the Rev. Mr. Jonathan Lyman, pastor of the Church of Oxford, in Derby, in the county and colony aforesaid in New England, have given and granted by these presents do fully and clearly and absolutely give and grant unto the said Rev. Mr. Jonathan Lyman, his heirs and assigns forever, a certain parcel of land lying in Derby, parish of Oxford, near the meeting house. (Then follows a description of the land): Sept. 10, 1746. April 21, 1747, John Lumm gives him a piece of land: "For and in consideration of the good will and respect that I have and do bare to the Rev. David Lyman<sup>8</sup>, was b. in Middlefield, Conn., then a part of Middletown, Conn., on the 19th of October, 1820; and d. in Middlefield, 24th of Jan., 1871, at the age of 50 years and 3 months. From the numerous biographical notices which appeared in the journals of New Haven, Hartford, Middletown, and other places, we select and abridge the following, published in The Free Press of Bennington, Vt., Feb. 4, 1871:

From his parents, persons of uncommon physical vigor, of more than ordinary intellectual capacity, and of the strongest moral and religious convictions, Mr. Lyman inherited a permanent capital in the business of living a good life—that sound, physical, mental and moral constitution which has stood him in so good stead through his eminently useful career. He received in his youth what was then considered a good common school education, supplemented by a little academical instruction. At the age of nineteen he was sent by the Messrs. Trowbridge of New Haven to Kentucky to purchase mules for the West India market, and by them and the house of Alsop & Chauncey of New York, was kept at this work for some years. For a short time he followed it too on his own account. At twenty-seven he was appointed to the trusteeship of a large estate, and, by the conditions of the will of the testator, was not required to give the bonds usual in such cases. In the management of this trust, which he held up to the time of his death, his great capacity for business was constantly called into requisition. Not long after his acceptance of the trust, a legal controversy arose concerning certain dispositions of the will. This controversy ran through the highest courts of Connecticut and New York, and the U. S. Circuit Court for the District of Connecticut. At the end of ten years of expensive litigation, in which some of the most distinguished lawyers of the land had been employed on one side or the other, Judge Nelson of the U. S. Supreme Court, in giving a decision in the case at New Haven, said of him: “His conduct presents a conspicuous instance of great capacity, fidelity and success in the discharge of the difficult and responsible duties confided to him by the deceased under the will, and calls for the commendation of this court. We have rarely known an instance of such faithful, conscientious, and accurate performance of the duties of a trustee; and in view of the fact that trust estates are so often, through incompetency or unfaithfulness, wasted, we feel it our duty to give the conduct of this trustee the marked approval of this court."

Mr. Lyman's chief business, from which he received, for ten years previous to his death, a large annual income, was the manufacture of clothes-wringers by a manufacturing company, in which he held a controlling interest. For the last four years, however, he had had little to do with its active management, his whole time having been completely absorbed — so completely as to have shortened his days — by his interest in the new line of railroad from New Haven to Middletown, and thence to Willimantic, the aim of which was, by connecting the two points of New Haven and Willimantic, to form a shorter line between New York and Boston. To build a rail road is not usually difficult when the money is at hand, but financial matters in this case were not the chief difficulties to be encountered. The Connecticut river was to be bridged at Middletown, and to this the most powerful interests in the state were opposed. The river towns above the proposed bridge; the competing lines of rail road already in existence; and, more than all, the city of Hartford, the city par excellence of judicious care for its own interests, were the parties the new rail road would have to contend with, and which twenty years before had defeated the very project Mr. Lyman proposed to accomplish. A man of less pluck, less ability, and less enthusiasm and hope, would have stopped even before he had begun. For two years he worked before the Connecticut legislature for a charter for the bridge and failed. The interests against him were too powerful for any one man or corporation. But nothing daunted, he went to Congress, and obtained the right to bridge the river, and the work was commenced. How he has labored since then, through doubt and discouragement, through evil and good report, through the lukewarmness of friends, and the open attacks of enemies, cannot be narrated here. All admit, friends and foes, that nobody else could have built the road at this time, or during the present generation. The two cities of Middletown and New Haven know and appreciate his labors. As a slight tribute to his memory, their corporate authorities passed each a series of resolutions, and attended his funeral at Middlefield. One of the New Haven resolutions was as follows:

“Resolved, That in the death of David Lyman, the public at large are called upon to deplore the loss of a true man, eminently faithful in the discharge of every duty; attending to every trust committed to his care; genial, earnest, full of hope, inspiring others with his enthusiasm; who carried to substantial completion that great enterprise, the Air Line Railroad, a work of inestimable benefit to this city, and which will ever endure as a monument to him, illustrative of his sagacity, perseverance, and indomitable energies.”

The magnetism of the man was something remarkable. He inspired all with whom he came in contact, with his own enthusiasm and with interest and confidence in himself. He had that “hopeful, buoyant temper,” that “cheerfulness and hopefulness which are reported to belong to the real Lyman stock,” and to which Henry Ward Beecher, himself a Lyman in part, alluded in a characteristic letter to the Lyman gathering at Northampton, in 1869.

Too soon has the grave closed over him. In the prime of life, in the midst of his usefulness, with the most promising future before him, he is cut down, a sacrifice to the work he had undertaken. Less than a week before his death, he left his home against the wishes of his family to attend to important railroad business. He returned to it never to leave it alive. His disease was typhoid fever, which progressed favorably until congestion of the lungs set in, which proved fatal. Of his own knowledge he was soon conscious of approaching dissolution; and, as was said by an eye-witness of the scene, “he set about the business of dying as about a rail road or any other business that had to be done.” He was completely self-possessed to the last, his mind clear and composed to an unwonted degree. During the last few hours he was unable to articulate, but continued to communicate his thoughts and wishes by writing. He was in no pain, as he frequently signified by words or signs. He retained something of his great physical-strength to the end, the grasp of his hand, only a few minutes before his death, seeming as powerful as ever, while his smile was quite the same that had won so many hearts. He breathed his last, with pencil in hand, endeavoring to complete a few more cheering words to surviving friends.

Farewell, kind friend, dutiful son, loving husband, affectionate father, faithful citizen, public benefactor, too soon, farewell!

The Hearth and Home, of March 17, 1871, which contains one of the best likenesses of Mr. Lyman, says of him that : "No man had warmer friends and none better deserved them, while few could command so great respect from those opposed to measures he advocated. His unremitting labors undoubtedly caused the acute disease which hurried him to the grave. With ordinary work to do, he seemed to have the constitution of an octogenarian, and himself expected long life. But he murmured not when the summons came — his life had been a preparation for a better sphere.

PART V.

JOHN LYMAN<sup>3</sup>, son of Richard<sup>2</sup>, was b. in Windsor, Ct., in 1655; lived in Northampton; m. Abigail .....; ?d. Oct. 13, 1727, aged 72, as appears on his grave-stone, distinguished from others of the same name by the addition of "Richard's son."

Children, Fourth Generation :

- 1 1 Abigail, b. in Northampton, March 12, 1696; d. April 15, 1696.
- 2 2 Abigail, b. in Northampton, Feb. 1, 1697.
- 3 3 Nathan, b. in Northampton, Jan. 1, 1699; d. April 11, 1700.
It is inferred that this death, taken from Northampton records is the one whose birth is here given, because there was a second Nathan in this family, b. in 1706, and this Nathan must have d. before that time.
- 4 4 James, b. in Northampton, 1700, m. Ann, who d., according to monument in the cemetery, July 15, 1773, in her 83d year. On the stone is inscribed "Ann, wife of Capt. James." On the stone to Capt. James, is inscribed: "Capt. James Lyman, died Sept. 25, 1769, in his 70th year." They left no children.
- 5 5 Abner, b. in Northampton, Feb. 1, 1701; m. 1st, Lydia ..... and had the following children:
Ch. 5th Gen.: 1 Lydia, b. Aug. 17, 1727; d. Aug. 22, 1731. 2 Beulah, b. Aug., 1729; m. Obadiah Janes, of Easthampton, who d. in 1817, having had no children. 3 Elizabeth, b. Nov. 24, 1731. Abner Lyman m. 2d, Sarah Miller, May 3, 1739, and had children; she d. Sept. 28, 1756. 4 Sarah, b. April 11, 1740. 5 Abner, b. Aug. 16, 1746.
- 11 6 Job, b. in Northampton, Dec. 1, 1702; May, 1703.
- 12 7 Joshua, b. in Northampton, Feb. 27, 1704; m. 1st, Sarah Narmont, and 2d, Esther .....
- 13 8 Nathan, b. in Northampton, May 5, 1706; m. Sarah Webb, of Hadley, who d. 1788, aged 72. He d. in Southampton, Oct. 16, 1784, aged 78, leaving no children. He settled in Southampton in 1733, one year after the first two families, and was a member of the church formed in 1743.

12 LIEUT. JOSHUA LYMAN<sup>4</sup>, son of John<sup>3</sup>, was b. Feb. 27, 1704. At the time of his marriage he was said to be of Northampton, but subsequently his residence was in Northfield, where he was one of the first settlers; he m. Sarah Narmon, of Suffield, Conn., Oct. 1, 1729, and 2d, Esther ..... The first five were the children of Sarah; he d. 1777, aged 73.

John, usually called Dea. Lyman, was a farmer, a vigorous and active man. On one occasion he went on snow shoes to what is since called Huntington, eight or ten miles over the hills, where he shot a deer, and returned at evening, bringing or dragging the deer. One of its antlers is still in possession of his granddaughter.

Prof. B. B. Edwards has recorded of him in a note to his address at the centennial celebration at Southampton, 1841: "Dea. John Lyman was a man of great weight of character, and exemplariness of life. He was equally remarkable for his wit and his wisdom, and was among the ablest and most useful men who have resided in town."

Rev. John Woodbridge, in an article printed as "Reminiscences of an Old Man," wrote: "On the grave stone of Dea. Lyman, that good man so familiar with some of the best writings of the Puritans, particularly the works of Flavel, that the thoughts they gave him seemed infused into his very being, moulding and establishing his principles, and regulating and sustaining the even tenor of his life, is inscribed with the utmost pertinency the divine sentence: 'Blessed are the peace makers,' &c. If tumults ever arose and serious divisions were threatened in the town, his gentle voice for many years was a charm to command silence and allay the elements of strife.

The children of Dea. John Lyman were Sarah, Martha, Nathan, John, long known as Maj. Lyman, Achsah, Asa, who d. in infancy, and Asa.

Of Major Lyman and his wife. Prof. B. B. Edwards wrote: "They were among the most interesting people whom I knew in all that region. The major would have made a governor or judge in other circumstances." He was upright and reliable. was town treasurer for twenty years, when he declined the office. He was also one of the selectmen of Southampton for many years, and honored as an exemplary Christian and a wise counsellor in the church of which he was long a member. Like his father, he was a man of wit and sound judgment. When Major Lyman was a small boy he sometimes wished for better clothing. The deacon said to him, "You must remember you are a poor man's son;" but John could not see it. Not long after, a friend from a distance wishing to see the deacon, went out into the field where he was at work, his young son being with him. The father wished the boy's dress had a more respectable appearance, and apologized to his friend. The boy looked at the stranger and said: "I'm a poor man's son, sir; poor man's son." One night in autumn, when John and some friends were regaling themselves with delicious peaches that loaded the trees, his father, hearing a noise and supposing that thieves were taking the fruit, opened the the door and said: "John, where's my gun?" "Behind the door, father," was the prompt reply of John. The deacon withdrew. His family, his laborers and friends were often cheered by a sally of wit, a pleasant joke or unexpected repartee. His children were:

Easthampton, Mass.

Rev. Luther Wright, son of Luther and Sarah Lyman Wright, was b. in Easthampton, Nov. 21, 1796, on the spot where he died. Was fitted for college at Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass. Admitted to Yale College in New Haven, Conn., in 1818. Graduated in 1822. Was principal of an Academy in Maryland from Sept.

1822 to Aug., 1824. Began to study theology in New Haven in the autumn of 1824. Was tutor in Yale College from March, 1825 to Sept., 1828. Was licensed to preach in 1828. Was for a time professor of Latin and Greek in the Military Academy at Middletown, Conn. : but after a few months' service resigned the office, because the place, from its associations with war, was not congenial to his views and feelings. Was m. Oct. 1829, to Emeline Gregory, daughter of Samuel and Anne G. Colton of Longmeadow, Mass., who died, greatly beloved and lamented, March 6, 1863. Was associated with Judge Hall, in 1829, in establishing the Classical School at Ellington, Conn. Was principal of the Academy at Leicester, Mass., from Sept. 1833 to Oct. 1839, when in consequence of broken health, induced by labors above measure, he resigned his place, and returned with his family to his native town, in hope of recovering, if possible, by farm labor, his physical strength, and that he might nourish, with filial assiduities, his aged father and mother.

He was principal of the Williston Seminary from its opening Oct. 1, 1841, to July, 1849.

After resigning his place in the Seminary, Mr. Wright was for several years engaged in giving instruction to private students in classical learning—a labor of love with him; and his soul broke for the longings it had unto it at all times. In the closing day of his last sickness, amid his wanderings of mind, those who watched around his bed-side found him fancying himself engaged in his favorite toil, teaching Greek. It is estimated that in the various positions held by him as a teacher, he has had under his care and tuition an aggregate of four thousand pupils. Of these pupils there are those now occupying positions of eminent usefulness whom we have heard frankly and thankfully confessing, that for all that they are and have done, they are indebted, under God, to Luther Wright.

Mr. Wright became a Christian while a member of Yale College, and joined the church in that institution. His conversion, in respect of its immediate and instrumental cause, he attributed to Mr. Nettleton's whispering in his ear the three words, "Be in earnest," at an inquiry meeting, in a season of revival in Yale College. His convictions of sin were pungent, and that thorough "law work" gave depth and fervor to his piety as seen in after years.

Coming to Easthampton from Leicester, Mr. and Mrs. Wright brought letters from the church there, and joined the church July 5, 1840. He was chosen deacon of this church May 14, 1857, and continued to discharge the duties of that office till the day of his death. Was chosen member of the church committee June 23, 1866. Has served during several years as member of the parish committee. Has been the treasurer of the church since his election to the office of deacon. Has many times been sent with the pastor to neighboring churches to serve on ecclesiastical councils.

In his humility he requested that upon his tomb-stone should be placed no title, but simply his name. And so, in conclusion, as was said of Henry Kirke White, I should say of my friend and father—LUTHER WRIGHT, "His monument shall be his name alone."

Deacon James G. Bolles, the husband of Orra A., was the son of Rev. Matthew Bolles, and was born in Eastford now Ashford, Conn.,

Jan. 17th, 1802. When a lad of about fifteen years of age, he went into the printing office of the Bridgeport Farmer, under the late Mr. Stiles Nichols, and continued there until he was twenty. Afterwards Mr. Bolles was the publisher of the Christian Watchman in Boston, but, not finding his physical strength equal to the demand there made upon it, he came to Hartford about 1825, and engaged in the dry goods business. Subsequently, he took up Fire Insurance, as the great business which he made emphatically his life's work, so far as his secular occupation was concerned. For a number of years he was the respected secretary of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company. When the North American Company was organized in 1857, he was made its president, and held the position for some time. He was a director of that company at the time of his decease. He was among the oldest, if not the oldest underwriter in the city. During the administration of President Lincoln, Mr. Bolles was collector of Internal Revenue for the first district in this State; but was removed by President Johnson. In 1855, he was elected major of the Governor's Foot Guard. Several times Mr. Bolles traveled in Europe, and he was on the eve of making another tour with his family, at the time of his decease.

Having been an example of a pure and blameless life, and a faithful attendant on the duties of religion, his conversion at the age of 40 years was a remarkable illustration of the reality of the new and nobler life to which one is born by grace divine. All were constrained to see and admire the change in Mr. Bolles, to which all his subsequent life gave witness.

Mr. Bolles was baptized Jan. 24, 1841, and from that date to his death, he has been a most faithful friend to the church. He was elected to the deaconship, Feb. 4th, 1845. He gave largely for the support of the preaching of the gospel, and was glad to have a share in the benevolent operations of the day. Dea. Bolles was a generous contributor all our objects of Christian benevolence. In addition, he left by will, to the First Baptist church $10,000; to the Connecticut Baptist State Convention, $10,000; to the Connecticut Baptist Education Society, $10,000; and to the Hartford Hospital, $10,000.

Mr. Bolles was a man of great purity of life and uprightness of character, amiable and gentle in all the relations of life, but firm in principle. He was a devoted Christian, in connection with the Baptist church. He was a man generally beloved, his advice was sought, his counsel was sound and valuable; he was especially friendly to young men, and always ready to help them to an honorable start in life. Very many who read this paragraph will recall his always friendly words, his charity, his kindly manner, his efficient help. He was a man beloved and trusted; true in his political life, true in his friendships, liberal and upright. Hartford owes its honorable reputation to such men. We profit by his example and mourn his loss — a Christian gentleman, one of nature's noblemen, all the more ennobled by grace divine.

MISS JULIA E. LYMAN.—The following obituary is abridged from that which was presented at the last Reunion of the Lyman Family :

Soft as the lunar ray that sleeps
 Upon the bosom of the peaceful lake ;
 Or dewy eve distilling sweet
 On vernal flowers ; or breath of morn,
 On od'rous wings ascending from the east
 With melody of birds—so soft and sweet,
 Is memory of those we loved.

Forty years ago, and more, you might have seen in one of the Lyman families of Connecticut, a very slight delicate girl, studious and accurate as a scholar, sedate, conscientious, fond of books, but not given to as abundant use of the tongue, as some of her sex are reported to be. That fine, quiet, scholarly girl, early formed a loving attachment to the Lyman name. She never would change that name for any other. Born in it, she lived and died in it.

She early manifested talent for business : a mind clear, quick, accurate and retentive. Fortunately for us, while yet a girl, she became interested in the Lyman genealogy. That interest increased with the increase of years. She felt, as well she might, that the Lyman, like many other families, were sustaining a great loss, by a criminal ignorance and neglect of their worthy ancestors.

It is a noble work to help save a family name from an ignoble oblivion. She engaged in it with Christian zeal and love, and persevered in it at the cost of time and money and perhaps of life itself.

The chart of the Lyman family, so highly valued by us, is wholly the work of her hands. None, save he who has tried it, knows how much work, hard work, is requisite to prepare such a chart. The sources of information for it are fourfold : 1st. Ancient colonial and municipal records. 2d. Old monuments and grave stones. 3d. Old family and church records. 4th. Old folks of sound memory and clear mind. All these she consulted as extensively as her health and strength would permit, years and years ago. Before many of us had ever been baptized into the Lyman name, she might have been seen collecting and correcting these materials, writing and visiting various places in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont ; examining old saffron-colored records and parchments, rubbing off the ancient moss from old tombstones, that she might read the name and the date thereon, asking for the sacred old family record, and talking with the "old folks," about persons, that their childhood memories could recall. All these facts, she would set down in their order, until she had collected the indisputable data, out of which, to construct this wonderful chart-wheel, where we can all trace our own families as belonging to the branch of Richard Lyman, who came from High Ongar, to establish a name in America. Let us remember, too, that all this was a work of love ; no money tempted her ; she always peremptorily refused all pecuniary aid. She would not even share with others, the expense of her journeys and correspondence in this matter.

She would work, disinterestedly, from love of the work, and love of the family.

For all we have enjoyed of union and reunion of the Lyman brotherhood, we are, in no small degree, indebted to her patient, life-long labors. By the letters she had written, the facts she had collected, and the interest she had helped to excite in our family history, she has done more than any one else to create the demand, among the Lymans, for our reunion, and for such a history as we hope to have. It is sad to think, that by these assiduous labors, she hastened her end. Self-sacrifice, and Christian love for others, seemed the law of her life. She had cast her anchor within the veil; she died in faith, she sleeps in Jesus, our Lord and Master in whom the whole family in Heaven and earth is named.

The following extract is from the letter of a sister, who speaks from a full heart:

"The chart she commenced many years ago. When a prospect opened of a genealogical record of the whole Lyman family, being combined in a book, her assiduities increased, and her labors expanded. Innumerable notes of names and families multiplied upon her desk, like leaves of the forest, communicating with persons of the Lyman name and connection, in almost every part of the Union, and beyond. They were labors of love, and I know of no other motive, that ever led her to undertake or carry it on, and though her frame was slight and delicate, and her health never good, often very poor, yet she had a fund of mental resolution which induced her to go on in her efforts, far beyond what she had strength to sustain. The chart she wrote, and rewrote, many times, and it was a work she enjoyed. But the difficulty of getting it rightly engraved, was one she could not control, as she could her own hand: and it saddens me to remember, how severely this work, told upon her health, which was at that time very feeble. After her part of the work was finished, her health steadily declined; such intense and long-continued labor, combined with active disease of body, showed their sad effects. The last few months of her life were seasons of great sufferings, which she bore with sweet Christian patience.

"Her views of herself, were very lowly; but this did not remove her from the Rock, Christ Jesus, on whom her faith rested. It may not be thought proper, for one so nearly related, to dilate upon the excellencies of her character, but, surely, none knew as well as myself, how beautiful that character was. A person so disinterested and so conscientious, is rarely seen; self-sacrifice was the law of her life. Life was joyless to her when she could not communicate some good to some of her kind. Her energies were not all spent upon the work of which we have been speaking, but scattered all along her pathway in life, she found many ways of doing good, in a quiet and unobtrusive manner, and it is a sweet solace to me to believe that the influence of her lovely example, is not lost in the little world in which she moved. Her memory will be cherished, in the hearts of all, who knew her well."

Rev. George S. Bishop, of Newburgh, N. Y. [Ch. 10th

Gen. : (1) William Samuel. (2) Margaret Williston.]

Mr. Williston, son of Rev. Payson Williston and brother of Hon. Samuel Williston, entered into business in Northampton as a druggist and grocer, and later in life was an extensive cotton manufacturer. Also the original inventor and only manufacturer of Payson's indelible ink. In his business he was successful from the start. He was sagacious and far-seeing, and planned for a campaign of a lifetime, rather than for the present. Such was his clearness of perception, his knowledge of correct business principles, and his capacity to adhere to them, that he seldom if ever, made a failure of any enterprise he engaged in. He was a director of the Northampton Bank for many years, a director of the Holyoke Water Power Co., and at one time was a selectman of the town.

He early engaged in true temperance reform; was active and prominent in the Washingtonian movement. Bold, defiant, aggressive, he pursued the evil with tireless zeal, and summoned to his aid whatever of assistance his wealth could command. During this protracted controversy his barn was twice destroyed by an incendiary fire, and his house likewise fired and partially consumed. His life was an unflinching testimony to his faith in his temperance principles, for he practiced himself what he earnestly counseled and demanded of others.

He was also the early and devoted friend of the anti slavery cause. This he espoused in its infancy, when it was unpopular and even obnoxious to the general New England public. Regardless of fear or favor, he pushed it onward, demanding that slavery should be discussed and denounced in our halls and pulpits. Here also he practiced what he preached, and the fleeing fugitive slave, who often came this way on the route to Canada, found in him a faithful friend. His roof sheltered, his table fed, his sympathy cheered, his purse assisted, the fleeing bondman. His house thus became widely known as one of the depots of the "underground railroad," which conveyed so many people from a land of slavery to a land of liberty, in fact rather than in name.

But perhaps Mr. Williston was best known to this community for his large, though unostentatious charities. In his early years he espoused the Christian religion, and his long life was conspicuous for his faithful following of the teachings of Christ. Benevolence he regarded as one of the Christian principles, and with religious fidelity he practiced it. Soon after he entered upon his business life he resolved to appropriate whatever he should make each year in excess of $500, during the period of ten years, to benevolent objects. At the end of that time, he found he had nothing to give, and he then resolved to devote to charitable objects one-tenth of his income, be it more or less. This resolution he more than fulfilled, and during the later years of his life he gave away in charities his entire income. The public little know, nor will it ever be apprised of, the full extent of his charitable contributions, for he gave in secret, and never with a view to notoriety. The widow, the orphan, the lonely and forsaken ones, have been helped by him when help was precious. He also assisted many poor young men to commence business, or aided them when involved in difficulty. His heart was open and his hand ready whenever he could see that the call was a worthy one. He also aided many young men to educate themselves. He espoused the cause of a poor colored boy, and educated him at his own expense, until he graduated at Oberlin College.

Mr. Williston was for a long series of years an active and leading member of the first church and society in this town, and in 1833 was chosen one of the deacons of the church, retaining the office to the day of his decease, a period of 34 years.

Although often at variance with the public in dealing with questions of policy or principle, he yet retained at all times the entire respect and confidence of the people. His great boldness, his wonderful perseverance, his unyielding devotion to whatever he believed to be right, his hatred of shams and whatever seemed to be false, and above all, his incorruptible integrity, rendered him a remarkable power in the community, and his influence here will be felt long after the present generation shall have passed away. He may truly be regarded one of the most remarkable men that ever lived in Northampton. His was a life of earnest purpose, of courageous effort, of strict, methodical adherence to principle. Such a life is a life of power and of lasting influence. Modest, retiring, conscientious and unswerving in principle, eminently successful in business and unostentatious in his charities, he is an illustrious example of a good and faithful servant of his Master.

Mr. Williston was m. in March, 1827, to Miss Cecilia, only daughter of the late Asahel Lyman, of this town, who survives him. Their children have been nine in number ; seven died almost in infancy, the oldest being only five years old, and two are now living : Asahel L. Williston of Florence, now and for a number of years, the general manager of the Greenville Manufacturing Company, and Hannah, wife of Rev. George S. Bishop, settled over a Congregational Church in Newburg, N. Y. They have also an adopted son, Rev. Martin L. Williston, settled over a Congregational church at Flushing, L. I.

594 1 Louisa, b. Dec. 2, 1823 ; m. Robert W. Traip, of Boston ; had one daughter, who d. young.

595 2 Edward, b. Jan. 21, 1826 ; m. Minerva Lyman.

Hon. Job Lyman inherited from his Puritan ancestors a rugged strength of moral principle which served throughout the changes and vicissitudes of modern skepticism to retain, intact, the early faith of New England ; a faith, which, however stern in theory, when blended with the warm, generous impulses of his heart, became a religion that irradiated to the close of the life of the gentle pilgrim ! Exceeding by nineteen years the allotted three score and ten, Mr. Lyman illustrated in the ever gentle courtesy of his demeanor, the dignity of the "old school!" and the daily life of colonial times. Breaking away from the agricultural and mercantile traditions of his family, the younger brother made a bold move to secure to himself the advantages of a liberal education, and entered Dartmouth College when he graduated in 1804 ; classmate of Daniel Webster. He studied law at Windsor and Haverhill, N. H., and located for the practice of his profession at Woodstock, Vt., where he spent the prime of an honorable and useful career.

He early became connected with various important public interests ; serving as cashier in the Old Vermont State Bank throughout its existence, and as president of the Woodstock Bank for many years.

He was court auditor of Windsor Co., for a long period and a member of the governor's council. As a member of the Congregational church, he sustained a prominent position, and in every relation of life, whether private or public, was known as an industrious, successful and honest man.

In 1850 he removed to Burlington, Vt, retiring from all business, to spend the rest of his days in the family of his son Edward, whose affectionate care, coupled with that of his only daughter, Mrs. Traip, made pleasant the declining years of life.

Mr. Lyman married a daughter of Judge Lot Hall, of Westminster, who died, sincerely mourned, seven years previous to the death of her husband.

Mr. Lyman retained to the last his cordial interest in public and national affairs. Throughout the long and sometimes doubtful struggle of our late civil war, he remained a cheerful, unwavering supporter of the government; and, although too aged and infirm to place himself within the lists, sent a stalwart substitute to battle in behalf of his principles.

One of the most pleasing incidents that marked the last years of this venerable old man, was his ability to be present at the centennial commencement of his alma mater — Dartmouth College — where as the oldest graduate present, one of sixty five years' standing, he was the most noticed of the Alumni.

Extreme weakness prevented his attendance at the Lyman pic-nic the August following, but his cordial letter of greeting and encouragement was not lacking on that occasion.

He took a lively interest in the growth and prosperity of Burlington and in many charitable institutions, prominent among which was the Home for the Destitute, which realized from his generosity a tangible and munificent benefit.

He fulfilled with conscientious strictness his duty as a citizen, not forgetting the important duty of voting, even when gathering years might well have excused him.

His last illness was brief, terminating on the 2d day, Sept. 10, 1870. He passed away ripe in years, rich in the garnered experience of an useful life, known to all as a patriotic and worthy citizen, a sincere Christian and a friend whose aid and sympathy were surest when the need was the most pressing; and those who have known him long and intimately, felt, in connection with the purity and gentleness of his heart, that he might well have exclaimed with the unfortunate Josephine of France: "I have never willingly caused a tear to flow."

Rev. Dr. O. A. Lyman, of the Euclid Street Presbyterian church, Cleveland, Ohio, was struck with paralysis while attending a special meeting of Presbytery in the Second Presbyterian church. He was the prosecutor in a trial, which has occupied the attention of the Presbytery for some time, and he had been engaged for parts of two days in examining witnesses, and had just made his argument in a quiet manner, though with some evidence of painful feeling in the discharge of the duty. While sitting a chair he slipped to the floor, and when lifted up was found to be entirely paralyzed on his right side. Excellent medical attendance was immediately at hand, and he was soon taken to his house. He remained helpless and unconscious till death, and the event produced great pain throughout the city. He was in the early prime of his powers, and had won the highest respect of the community.

Elias Lyman, of Burlington, Vermont, was born July 8, 1800, at Hartford, Vermont, to which place his parents removed from Massachusetts at an early day. His father, whose name he bore, and who was the third of that name in direct descent, was a prominent landholder in Vermont. His mother was Anna White of Hatfield, Mass. Mr. Lyman was the sixth child of a family of eight sons and five daughters, of whom but three of the former and one of the latter are living. At the age of twenty-one he commenced business as a merchant, in Norwich, Vermont, where his energy and ability secured for him results so favorable, that he soon after enlarged his business by opening branch stores in Enosburgh and Thetford, Vermont, and Hanover, New Hampshire.

In 1831 his fellow citizens of Norwich selected him as their representative in the legislature of the state, in which capacity he served during each succeeding year, until his removal in 1834 to Burlington.

In 1842 he was m. to Cornelia J., second dau. of Timothy and Lucinda Hall, of Troy, N. Y., by whom he had two children, Ellen C., wife of Charles E. Allen, Esq., of Burlington, and Elias. At Burlington he engaged in successful mercantile pursuits for several years, till at length increasing bodily infirmities resulting eventually in the paralysis of the lower limbs, compelled him to withdraw from active duties, and in 1850, retired from business to the quiet life of home. But although thus rendered unable to engage personally in active pursuits, he still and throughout his life maintained a great interest in them, and continued his connection with various important business and social enterprises. As a business man he bore a reputation for untiring energy, sound judgment, and scrupulous honesty. Uniformly courteous with a manner quiet and unassuming, and ever exhibiting a marked degree of kindness and regard for the welfare of others, he possessed the love as well as the confidence of all who knew him.

His private life was an example of patience, cheerfulness and affection under his severe affliction. During the last ten years of his life he was unable to move about without assistance, but his perfect resignation and forgetfulness of self, in his consideration for others, are a sunny memory in the hearts of all who were intimately associated with him. He was an earnest member of the Protestant Episcopal church, and for thirty years he was one of the vestrymen of St. Paul's, Burlington.

In the summer of 1870, his disease, which had thus far been marked by a progress so gradual as to be almost imperceptible, reached the vital organs; and after five weeks of entire prostration, which were borne, as had been all his other trials, without a word of murmuring, he quietly entered into his rest on Monday, September 5th, 1870. As we remember him, the words of an American poet emphasized by his own whitened locks, come to mind:

“ His youth was innocent ; his riper age
 Marked with some act of goodness every day ;
 And watched by eyes that loved him ; calm and sage,
 Faded his late declining years away.
 Cheerfully he gave his being up, and went To share the holy rest that waits a life well spent.”

This notice of the family of Sylvester Lyman, coming to hand too late to be inserted in its proper place, is given in connection with that of his surviving son, Charles Harvey Picket Lyman.—See p. 269.

Sylvester Lyman was b. at the old homestead near Smith's Ferry at the foot of Mount Tom, m. in Northampton, commenced business in "Shop Row," afterwards removed to Boston, opened dry goods business. After the war of 1812, and declaration of peace, removed to Ohio, where he remained several years and then returned and settled in Pittsfield, Mass., where he resided some 10 or 12 years, was prostrated by lithiasis, went to Albany, N. Y., for a surgical operation, which he survived only 6 weeks; and was buried in the family plat in the Albany Rural Cemetery. He was a man of medium height, though his father measured over six feet, blue eyes and light complexion, of remarkable purity of character, uniformity of disposition, of great endurance and application, courteous and gentlemanly in his manner, warm-hearted and a true friend, of whom the companion of his pilgrimage after his decease often testified, that for more than forty years she had borne with him the vicissitudes of life, yet in all that time he never spoke one unkind word to her.

Nancy Clapp, his wife, was born at the old homestead, which is still standing in South street, Northampton, daughter of Ebenezer Clapp; of deep piety, warm affections; governing by a look, never by words or blows; a consistent member, through her whole life, of the Congregational church. She survived her husband but two years, and is buried by her side. The writer of this owes his first religious impressions to her constant practice of retiring with him up to the period of his leaving home, in his early boyhood, to her private chamber and then on bended knee commending him in prayer to God's mercy and protection.

George Lyman, the eldest son, was b. in Northampton. He was a man of more than ordinary ability, was pronounced in his day, the "most elegant man in Boston." His height was 5ft. 11 inches, well built, dark hair, hazel eyes, straight as an arrow, polished and graceful, a warm friend, but quick to resent insult. His history was one of peculiar interest to his family, more remarkable than fiction, but too lengthy to narrate here. In 1824, he embarked in a commercial enterprise, in connection with the opening up of the Nicaragua canal, by the British government, in Central America. The expedition was unfortunate. While crossing Lake Nicaragua, a storm arose, and the merchandise was thrown overboard, and, though an expert swimmer and urged to make an effort to save his life, he nevertheless simply wrapped his cloak around him and went down with the vessel. Only one escaped to tell the tale.

Wm. Lyman, was b. in Boston. Shortly after the emigration of his parents to Ohio, he returned to Massachusetts, for the purpose of entering a store, and traveled alone on foot over the Alleghenies and safely reached his destination, being then only 13 years of age. About 1830 he went to Albany, N. Y., and shortly after established the well known firm of Lyman & Hanford, which for many years maintained an enviable reputation. He d. suddenly in the spring of 1858, of congestion of the lungs, and is buried by the side of his wife, father and mother. He left no issue.

Henry Lyman, was b. in Boston, graduated at Union College with the valedictory honors; passed through Princeton Theological Seminary, and after serving acceptably a number of years in the ministry, took up his residence in New York. He d. of pneumonia, Jan. 31, 1872, and is buried by the side of his wife in his family vault, at Forest Hill Cemetery, West Roxbury, near Boston, Massachusetts. He left no issue.

Sylvester Lyman, of New York, and C. H. P. Lyman, of Chicago, are the only surviving members of the family.

From that time he has conducted a successful grocery business in Springfield, in several places from which with his rents, he receives a handsome income.

To him and his wife the Lyman family are indebted chiefly for their union Aug. 10, 1869, and reunion, Aug. 30, 1871. At a picnic the proposal of a similar social gathering of the Lymans was suggested by Mrs. Lyman, and he was designated to carry it into effect; which was happily and successfully accomplished. The facilities for the reunion in 1871, were chiefly provided by the same, and we may hope that these have inaugurated the stated meetings of the family in future years. Springfield, Mass.

Dea. Moses Lyman, bought and cleared two 50 acre lots for his farm, on Town Hill, where he built first, a log house, and, in time, a framed house, which again gave place to the brick house on the homestead, which was occupied by his grandson, Moses Lyman, Esq. This house is still in the possession of the family, and has been occupied by the first son of the same name to the present time.

At the town meeting, Dec. 6, 1739, Mr. Lyman, then 26 years of age, was appointed collector and treasurer, a grand juror, in 1744, tything man, in 1743; in 1746, one of committee of six for the settlement of the Rev. Mr. Heaton, as pastor of the church, with whom he in connection with others was soon in controversy respecting his Armenian sentiments, as they alleged. This controversy resulted in the dismissal of Mr. Heaton, in June, 1753. In May, 1759, Mr. Lyman was chosen deacon of the church which office he continued to hold through life, about nine years.

Dea. Lyman, and his wife are characterized as religious, exemplary, industrious, economical and liberal to the poor. He was remarkable for his endeavors to make peace and reconcile difficulties, of sound judgment and for many years a magistrate, he exercised a controlling influence in the town. It is said of Mr. Lyman that he was a father to the poor, eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame, relieving the fatherless and helpless, and making the widow's heart to sing for joy.

He was a magistrate many years. - As the representative of the town in the general assembly he attended 14 sessions. His judgment was good and much depended on. His intellectual acquirements and improvements in the knowledge of things, human and divine, were superior.

SABBATH HOUSES.— The Sabbath-day houses of that age were a characteristic institution which has passed away with the generation that frequented them. Dea. Lyman was one of the first to erect one of these near the church. They were built for the accommodation of families during the intermission of public worship. The families of the proprietors were the first and principal occupants, but the houses were open also to other worshippers. Here the entire family were expected to spend the hour of intermission. The deacon was accustomed to bring the dinner for his family in his saddle bags on horseback. The dinner was spread upon a small table, and a wooden bottle supplied them drink. Mr. Buell, who was a joint proprietor of the house, usually asked the blessing and the deacon returned thanks. All arose from their seats when the blessing was asked, and when the thanks were returned. After dinner, the children were expected to occupy the time in reading some religious book for the edification of the company. The room was ceiled; and with a liberal supply of dry wood, all were made comfortable in the coldest season. Stoves were a luxury then unknown.

19 Col. MOSES LYMAN<sup>6</sup>, m. Ruth Collins, dau. of William Collius, of Guilford, Ct., who d. June 8, 1775. After a period of 12 years, during which his mother had the care of the family, he m. for 2d wife the widow of Jesse Judd of Litchfield, dau. of Capt. Jonathan Buell, of Goshen, with whom he had been intimate from childhood. Col. Lyman was a farmer, and occupied the homestead of his father through life. He d. Sept. 29, 1829, aged 87; his 2d wife d. Oct. 7, 1835, aged 73. Goshen, Ct.

In the militia, Col. Lyman held in succession every grade of office from that of corporal to colonel. During the war he was frequently in the army, sometimes by draft, sometimes as a volunteer on sudden alarms. He went with the recruits from Goshen, to join the Northern army, before the surrender of Burgoyne. When the call came to the town for troops in the Revolutionary war, his company was called together. When formed in line they were told how many men were wanted and those willing to volunteer were requested to step forward. Every man in the company marched to the front. Then every fifth man was ordered to the rear and those were taken.

Col. Lyman was commander of a body of troops stationed on the night of the 7th of Oct., 1777, to watch the movements of Burgoyne's army, and was the first to inform Gen. Gates, on the morning of the 8th, that they had deserted their camp. In consideration of his important services, he was honored with the duty of conveying to Gen. Washington personally the first intelligence of the battle of Saratoga, and the surrender of the British, under Burgoyne. He was also commander of the guard over the illustrious and gallant captive Major André, at and previous to the time of his execution.

In civil life, Col. Lyman sustained many offices in the gift of the town. He was a man of strong mind and great energy and decision of character, of the strictest integrity, conscientious in the observance of the sabbath and of the daily worship of God in his family. Though not a professor of religion, vice and immorality never failed to meet his frown and stern rebuke. By his infirmities in advanced life he was, for several years, confined to his house, and d. Sept. 29, 1829, aged 87 years. His second wife d. in Milton Society, Litchfield, Oct. 7, 1835, aged 93.

Col. Moses<sup>7</sup>, m. Jan. 21, 1796, Elizabeth Buell, of Litchfield, Milton Society, dau. of Ira Buell. He had in a remarkable degree the characteristics of his father and his ancestors, a man of commanding influence and foremost standing in society, a thorough and successful business man, firm supporter of the gospel, though not a professor of religion. He engaged extensively in commercial pursuits, first in partnership with Elihu Lewis, of Goshen, from 1793 to 1797, then with his brother Erastus, until 1827, when they dissolved their partnership by dividing their property into equal parts as nearly as possible and bidding for the choice, which fell to Erastus at a premium of 400 dollars. From this time to their decease, each cultivated his own farm. He was a man of superior mind, much above mediocrity. His manners were polished and he was distinguished for politeness.

In mercantile pursuits he was a correct and successful business man. Through a long course of years he successively sustained most if not all the offices in the gift of the town. He represented the town many times in the General Assembly and long acted as a civil magistrate.

Erastus Lyman<sup>r</sup>, a man and a Christian of no ordinary stature, has fallen in our midst; of uncommon capacity and of inestimable value to the community. Self-made, or rather made by circumstances incident to a life of bold business adventure in all parts of this country as it was fifty years ago; with more than an average amount of natural endowments, actuated under the pressure and the promptings of an indomitable purpose, he rose to prominence and an influence indicative of his character. In him, as a man with remarkable physical energy, were combined great mental activity and a strong moral sense. He became associated with the prominent men of this country and state, in conducting and adjusting important business matters, and enjoyed a high reputation abroad as a counselor and an executor in financial affairs.

We can point our young men to his regularity and punctuality at every place where duty called him, to his readiness for every good word and work, to his promptness in saying and doing whatever he had to say or do; and to his ready and cheerful response to almost every call of charity, and say to them: "Go ye and do likewise."

Henry Alexander Lyman, b. Sept. 5, 1839. Removed with his father from Goshen. to Waterbury, Conn., from thence to New York city, Jan. 1, 1859. Became a citizen of New York, by registration in Nov., 1860. Emigrated to London, England, in the same month and year, and settled at Upper Norwood, in the county of Surrey. Connected in business, as resident partner at London, with the brothers of his father's second wife, William S., and Charles H. Thomson, who had commercial houses in New York, London, Paris, and Brussels. Compiled the pedigree of the Lymans in England, and completed the writing of the same in Nov., in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty nine.

Mr. Lyman has in his possession a large quantity of interesting documents relative to the Leman, alias Lyman, family, and their estates; consisting of letters, deeds, wills, proofs, certified copies of registers, pedigrees, etc., etc. Also a full and interesting historical pedigree of Elizabeth Lambert, dau. and heiress of Henry Lambert, of High Ongar, Co. Essex, time Henry VI. and wife to Thomas Lyman, of Navistoke, Co. Essex, showing her descent from Sir Radulphus Lambert, Knt., grandson of Lambert, count of Loraine and Mons, who came into England with his kinsman, William the Conqueror, and was present at the battle of Hastings. Also the pedigree of Johanna, sister and co-heiress of Gilbert d'Umpheville, earl of Kyme, the famous soldier in the French wars, time Henry IV and Henry V, and who was slain with Thomas, Duke of Clarence and others 1421; who m. Sir Thomas Lambert, Knt., of Owlton, and showing her descent from Sir Robert d'Umpheville, Lord of Tours and Vian, in Normandy, commonly called "Robert with the Beard," and who was kinsman to William the Conqueror, with whom he came into England, and who in the 10th year of his reign gave him the forest of Riddlesdale, with all its castles, manors, lands and woods. Also, the pedigree of Matilda, Countess of Angus, in her own right, who m. 116 1 Erastus, b. Jan. 20, 1847, at New York.

Among the most intelligent and efficient members of the business community of the city of New York may be named Erastus Lyman, Esq. He was b. at Goshen, Litchfield county, Connecticut, Nov. 29th, 1817. He is the son of the late Erastus Lyman, of Connecticut, who was a merchant in that state for over forty years, and also a prominent politician and holder of several state offices. After the close of his political career, he turned his attention to farming, and d. from an accident at the age of eighty-six years. His son Erastus lived on the farm, and devoted himself to the care of the horses and cattle, and, in the summer, worked in the harvest-field.

At the age of twelve years, he left home for New Haven, with the view of taking some preparatory studies. In a few months, however, his health failed, and he was obliged to go into the mountain districts, where he again gave his attention to agricultural pursuits. Having regained his health, he returned to New Haven, where he entered a retail store, in which he remained some two years.

He commenced at the lowest round of the ladder, fearing neither drudgery nor toil, and at once developed a great tact for business. He had found the exact sphere in which he could best develop his talents and energies. Bargaining and selling, speculation and enterprise, system and energy, all appealed to qualities which he possessed in a most marked degree.

At length he determined to seek a wider field in the city of New York. Entering the employment of one of the then leading dry-goods houses, he threw his whole energy and mind into the duties of the position. This, in the beginning, was a very inferior one; but, true to his antecedents in New Haven, it did not prevent him from aspiring to the highest. He applied himself with a diligence that did not go unrewarded. He rose from clerkship to clerkship, until he became the head salesman of the house. He was noted as one of the most clear-headed, enterprising clerks of his day, and for a geniality and integrity of character that secured to him popularity and respect among the whole mercantile community. He formed a very intimate and extensive business acquaintance throughout the south and southwest.

Depending chiefly upon this acquaintance, and his reputation for energy and integrity, he finally embarked in business on his own account. He established a grocery, jobbing and commission business, and became a large receiver of cotton, and other southern products. From year to year his business increased, until it became one of the most extensive in New York. At a later date, he organized the Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company, of which he became, and still is, president. This was in 1853, and he has now held the presidency of the company for over nineteen years. The organization and successful management of such an institution as a life insurance company requires very high business capability. In this case Mr. Lyman has met these requirements to the utmost degree. The whole system of organization and business has been arranged and developed under his personal direction. He has held no sinecure office, but one which called for the highest general business ability as well as knowledge as to this particular branch, and a personal resolution which could defy and overcome every kind of obstacle.

In his business character Mr. Lyman is remarkable for great executive powers, reliable judgment, and system and order in regard to all that he directs or undertakes. He has a keen and critical observation; nothing escapes him that he ought to see or know, and still he does not seem to be giving more than the ordinary attention to matters. In fact, thoroughness, energy, intelligence and system are purely force of habit with him. As a clerk, as a merchant, and now, in his executive capacity, his success has been based on these, rather than, as with so many, upon mere shrewdness and good fortune. His whole life has been a settled plan and purpose, followed with zeal and courage, and wherein action and reason have ever been made to accord. His character will bear this close analysis, for it is a strong and peculiar one. Those who come under its influence soon feel its scope and power, and to the superficial observer, he appears not less the master of will.

Hon. Darius Lyman<sup>7</sup> died at the residence of his son-in-law, W. S. C. Otis, Esq., in Cleveland, Ohio, December 13th, 1865, aged seventy-six years and five months. He was born in Goshen, Litchfield county, Conn., July 19, 1789. His father, Col. Moses Lyman, was an officer in the army of the Revolution, and commanded a regiment at the battle of Saratoga; and as a mark of honor for meritorious services, he was deputed to convey to General Washington the official report of that important victory. His uncle, the Hon. Samuel Lyman, was a member of the first congress elected under the constitution of the United States.

Mr. Lyman was reared upon a farm, where he was taught those habits of industry, economy, self-reliance and self-control, and those principles of virtue, which constitute the foundation of true manly character. He early manifested a desire for, and determined to obtain a liberal education. After the usual preparation, he entered Williams College, and graduated in 1810. While a member of college, he wrote out and solemnly adopted, on his nineteenth birthday, the following resolution as the rule of his life:

"Goshen, Connecticut, July 19, 1808.

"The will of God shall be my rule of life."

Shortly after his graduation, he entered the law school at Litchfield, then under the charge of Judge Gould, where, by diligent attention to his studies, and the spotless purity of his life, he won the respect and affection of his distinguished teacher, and of all those associated with him. While connected with the law school, he wrote out and adopted this further rule of life:

"Litchfield, Connecticut, December 12, 1812.

"The Prince of Peace shall be my Guide."

After leaving the law school at Litchfield, Mr. Lyman proceeded to Pittsburgh, Pa., where he spent several months in the office of the Hon. Henry Baldwin, one of the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, in order more fully to perfect himself in his legal studies. From thence, in the early part of the year 1814, he emigrated to Ohio, was admitted to the bar, and established himself permanently at Ravenna, Portage county. Here, before he had tried a single cause, he adopted and wrote out the following resolution, as the daily rule of his professional life:

"Ravenna, Ohio, April 25, 1814.

"Having adopted the profession of the law to procure a livelihood, I will practice it through life, always governed by a lofty and sacred sense of honor and perfect rectitude. I will do all the good I can to those with whom I may be called to associate. I will never allow myself to indulge a feeling of revenge, either for insult or injury."

These "rules of life" he always carried about his person, and he paid to them such practical obedience, that all might see, and none mistake, his principles of action; and neither in domestic, private, professional nor public life, was he ever known to depart from this law which he had prescribed to himself. It might well be said of him that he was upright before God and man.

Though by temperament unobtrusive and retiring, Mr. Lyman was frequently called to occupy public stations. In 1816 he was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature; was reelected in 1817; and in 1818 he was elected state senator. In 1828 he was again elected senator, and was re-elected in 1830, when, at the close of his term, he declined a re-election. In 1833 he was the candidate of the Anti-Masonic and National Republican parties for governor. In 1850 he was again elected senator. Mr. Lyman had much to do in moulding the legislation of his adopted state; and among the prominent public measures, to the success of which his influence greatly contributed, was the construction of the Ohio canal, and the adjustment of the difficulty relative to the boundary between the states of Ohio and Michigan.

In 1854, Mr. Lyman was elected probate judge of Portage county, which office he continued to hold for three successive terms. As an illustration of his conscientious attention to his official duties, it may be mentioned that during the entire period of nine years, he was absent from his office but fourteen days.

Judge Lyman also took an active interest in the educational, moral and religious improvement of the community in which he lived, and always contributed liberally of his time and means to their support. He was for many years an efficient member of the board of trustees of Western Reserve College. He was the very earliest advocate of the temperance cause, when nearly all his cotemporaries were openly and actively hostile to the movement; he was the uniform and firm opponent of slavery and of oppression in every shape, advocating and successfully defending the right of free speech when assailed by violence. He aided in organizing the First Congregational church and society in Ravenna, and was one of the trustees of the society for a period of nearly twenty-five years.

Judge Lyman possessed a clear, well-balanced and discriminating mind, inflexible uprightness and unsullied purity of heart, and great decision of character, united with the most refined gentleness and tenderness, and a dignity of mind and manner peculiarly his own. Such a rare combination of virtues and qualities constantly drew to his home a large circle of cherished and valued friends, to whom he always dispensed a generous hospitality. It was here — in the bosom of his family and among his friends — that he shone the brightest and took captive the affections; it was here that he was most loved, revered and cherished; and in that inner circle, especially, his death created a vacuum which can never be filled.

Average of those who had children from the 2d to the 7th generation 6.83. No. of children in families of the 3d, 4th, and 5th generations 6.38; of the 6th 7th, and 8th generations 4.208.

one of the first settlers of the second precinct, now Southampton, was b. in Northampton, Sept. 30, 1715, the 2d son of Capt. Moses L., grandson of Moses and great-grandson of John, the son of Richard.<sup>1</sup> He m. Anne Phelps, of Northampton, and after a long and useful life, d. in S. Feb. 18, 1803, aged 88 years. He was early chosen deacon of the church; was a delegate to the provincial congress, at Concord, Mass., Oct. 11, 1768; with several of the town was one of a committee of correspondence; and in 1775, was a member of the provincial congress which met at Cambridge. He was a frequent member of the legislature, and one of a committee of safety in the Revolutionary war, in addition to many important offices in which he was employed during his long and useful life. By his only surviving grandchild, his tall, stout and venerable form, grave and sedate demeanor, are distinctly remembered as commanding the reverential regard of his family and his friends. He reared a family of seven children, two daughters and five sons. His descendants are very numerous, exerting a commanding influence in the various occupations and professional pursuits of life. Anne, his wife, d. Nov. 18, 1791, aged 72. He d. at the advanced age of 88 years.

- 5 5 Elias, b. June 27, 1752, lived near his father's farm in the western part of the town, remembered as a large corpulent man, facetious, jocose, full of mirthfulness, killed May 26, 1804, by falling from a young horse unaccustomed to the saddle.
- 6 6 Noah, b. 1754, enlisted in the army of the Revolutionary war, returned enfeebled by disease and d. at Southampton, Jan. 2, 1778, aged 24.
- 7 7 Joel, b. Sept. 20, 1758; m. Achsah Parsons, of Northampton, Dec. 19, 1791, farmer on the homestead of his father through life.

The settlement of Southampton was begun near a century later than that of Northampton, on a meadow within the limits of the town. The Pomeroy's appear to have made some improvements early in the eighteenth century. The tradition is that they built their first houses in 1722 or 1724. The first meeting on record of the proprietors was held March 21, 1730. This was an adjournment from Jan. 31. In this a committee was appointed to make an equitable division and assignment of the land to the original proprietors. The division was made by lot to thirty individuals, on condition that they should make improvements and erect buildings within a specified time. In Dec. 22, 1732, Ensign John Baker and Moses Lyman, of Northampton, were appointed by that town to lay out a highway so as to accommodate the new settlement. That year two houses had been erected in the precinct.

In May, 1733, fourteen families from Northampton joined the settlement, of whom one was that of Nathan Lyman, son of John and grandson of Richard. He built a house near the present residence of Dea. Samuel Lyman. During three or four succeeding years, fourteen additional settlers took up their residence in the precinct, among whom was Elias Lyman then 17 years of age and grandson of Moses mentioned above. The new settlement was incorporated into the second precinct of N., July 23, 1741. The petition to the general court for this purpose was signed by 35, who requested to be set off with usual privileges, and that a tax of six-pence per acre should be laid on the whole of their tract, being 14,000 acres that they might be enabled to build a meeting house, settle a minister and have the worship of God among themselves.

In 1743, the number of ratable polls was 31, and the valuation of the whole settlement £750 7s, in 1750 the polls were 62 and the valuation £1205 2s. 9d. Their meeting house was not completed until several years later. The church was first occupied for worship by the people sitting on the sills of the house. In Jan., 1753, a committee was appointed to "dignify the seats and the pews." At the ordination of the Rev. Mr. Judd, their pastor, in 1743, the church consisted of 63 members, 32 males and 31 females, comprising almost every adult in the town. The Rev. Jonathan Edwards was the preacher on the occasion. For settlement, Mr. Judd had 200 acres in land, 100 pounds old tenor in money, and 125 pounds in work; for salary 130 pounds for 3 years, then an increase of 5 pounds a year until the salary amounted to 170 pounds a year.

For several years the inhabitants were fearfully molested by the Indians. When they walked in the road or went into the woods in search of their cattle, every man carried his weapons with him, and in their labor in the fields some kept watch in rotation as sentinels to prevent surprise. A stockade or palisade of stakes was set around certain houses to which the families fled for safety upon an alarm from the Indians. All lived in constant terror and several fell victims to the tomahawk and scalping knife of the savages. In 1748 the settlements were broken up and abandoned for some time to the ravages of the Indians. In addition to these terrors from the Indians, the labor of the husbandman failed by reason of frost and droughts; in 1746, a severe frost on 12th of August killed almost their entire crop of corn; in 1749, there was no rain except one small shower from March until wheat harvest. Not a handful of hay could be gathered at the time of haying, but the rains in autumn gave a good crop of rowen. These details have been selected from the Centennial Address of the Rev. B. B. Edwards, to illustrate the perils, hardships and self-denials with which our forefathers established their settlements "for the furtherance of the public weal and the propagation of the gospel."

They were subject not only to the relentless wars with savages at home, but with foreign foes in the French war, for a series of years. When in 1745, Cape Breton was reduced by New England forces under Gen. Pepperill, Elias Lyman went from Southampton, as a private in this expedition. In the expedition to Crown Point, in 1755, in the capitulation of Fort William Henry, followed by the treacherous massacre of the garrison and soldiers, in 1757, in the siege of Ticonderoga, 1758, and in the capture, we believe, of Quebec, by Wolfe, 1759, the inhabitants of this town were represented by their quota of men. Then again these military sufferings and sacrifices were soon followed by the accumulated horrors of the Revolutionary war.

He married, Oct. 23, 1770, Anna Blair, of Western Mass. He raised a family of ten children, and died Dec. 11, 1810, aged 70 years; Anna, his wife, died Dec. 16, 1768. His second wife was Hannah Clark, of Southampton, m. July 10, 1786. Chester, Mass.

Dea. Stephen, and his brother Timothy began public life together as the first settlers of Murrayfield, now Chester, a mountain town, 17 miles west of Southampton, their native place. Tall, stalwart young men, with strong hands and hearts, they went out into the wilds together and cleared from the native forest adjoining farms on which they lived through life. Their way was through an unbroken forest with no track for their guide but that of the bears and the deer. A single camp chest contained their frugal outfit, a few loaves of brown Boston bread, a cheese, a ball of butter and two or three tow shirts, each grasping one handle of the chest with one hand and carrying his axe in the other, they set forward in 1763, for their wild mountain land home. As they rested at frequent intervals they marked the trees with their axes to guide their way back to their native place. Their farms were given them on condition that each one, within the space of three years from June, 1762, should build a dwelling house on his lot, 24ft. by 18 and 7 feet stud, and have 7 acres well cleared, and brought to English grass, or ploughed, and actually settled, by a family on the farm, and continue such family for a period of six years, and within 8 years settle a Protestant minister. Stephen and Timothy, are recorded among those who organized the Congregational church in Chester, Nov. 14, 1769, of which the former was the first deacon.

Andrew B. Lyman<sup>8</sup>, M.D. was at an early age bereaved of both his parents, and by his unaided efforts carved his way to distinction and usefulness, in the medical profession. After several changes, he settled in Richmond, Kentucky, where he is successfully engaged in his profession. Faithful among the faithless in the great rebellion, he remained true to his country and to the cause of freedom, and early volunteered in defense of his country's flag. For over two years his services were given to the federal government, in the care of the sick and wounded, and for a portion of the time he was on the medical staff, under General Saunders. His own house was invaded by rebel soldiers under Morgan, and the life of his venerable father-in-law, 80 years of age, was saved by the noble wife and daughter, throwing herself before the weapon of the assassin who cowered in view of her dauntless heroism and spared the life of the patriot patriarch. Dr. Lyman m. May 19, 1858, Isabel Field, of Richmond, Ky.

The aged father, E. H. Field, saved by the heroic daring of this daughter, was a loyal Kentuckian, who in those days that tried men's souls, nobly dared at his great age—to rally around his country's flag, for her defense against the traitor rebels of his native state; to take his gun and join the horse-guards for the protection and preservation of the Union, for which his father Capt. Henry Field had bled and died, in the terrible battle of Blue Licks. The mother of Mrs. Lyman was a sister of Col. Irvin, who lost his life at Fort Meigs, while bravely leading his regiment against the British and the savages in the war of the revolution. Such is the noble and gallant blood that runs in the veins of the heroic, devoted daughter.

Unionville, Ct.

Child, Ninth Generation :

- 337 1 George L., b. June 1, 1863.

Dea. Samuel Lyman, the youngest son of Dea. Stephen, now 86 years of age, has collected and recorded the genealogy of 337 of his kindred, the descendants of his father in just 100 years — the most prolific on record in this genealogy, of the whole lineage of the Lyman family.

Children, Seventh Generation :

- 338 1 Susannah, b. Nov. 6, 1770; m. 1789, Joseph Clapp, of Easthampton, a merchant of that place many years, and a prominent citizen. With one exception he held the office of town clerk longer than any citizen of the town. In 1810, he retired from mercantile life, and in 1830, removed to Homer, N. Y., where several of his children resided. He d. July 11, 1839, aged 74 years. His wife d. July 18, 1842, aged 72 years.
- 339 2 Achsah, b. Feb. 27, 1774; m. July 19, 1792, Dr. William Coleman, of Middlefield, Mass.

In 1816, Achsah and family removed to West Hartford, Conn.; in 1821, to Pittsfield, Mass.; in May, 1868, removed to Oberlin, Ohio, where she resided with her daughters in good health and a green old age, verging on 95 years, having been a housekeeper 76 years and a widow 10 years, after completing almost 66 years of married life with Dr. Coleman. So far as appears in this genealogy, she attained to the greatest age of any of the Lyman family. This venerable woman died Dec. 7, 1868, after an illness of a day or two. She was truly a mother in Israel. In early life she made a public profession of faith in her Saviour, and her whole subsequent life was one of unobtrusive but devoted piety. She retained the full possession of her faculties to the very last; and her dying hour, full of peace and joy, was the fitting close of a Christian course that extended beyond the number of years ordinarily allotted to human life.

Cold in the dust the perished heart must lie,
But that which warmed it once can never die.

- 340 3 Theodosia, b. Nov. 16, 1775, m. Jasper Brewster, lived several years in Washington, where were born four sons and one dau., in 1817; removed to Madison, Lake Co., Ohio, where Dea. B. died, Sept. 15, 1824, aged 55 years. Mrs. B. died April 1, 1851, aged 75 years.
- 341 4 Dorothy, b. April 24, 1780, m. Oct. 4, 1804, Edward Taylor of Montgomery, Mass., d. 1866.
- 342 5 Timothy, b. Aug. 30, 1782; m. Experience Bardwell, Jan. 6, 1808; lived on the homestead in Chester; died Dec. 22, 1837, aged 55.
- 343 6 Asahel, b. April 2, 1785; m. Jan. 23, 1810, Dolly Blair of Blandford, Mass. Engaged in mercantile life in several places.

The marriage of Timothy Lyman and Dorothy Kinney was one of the first, perhaps the first, in the town of Worthington, Mass., adjoining Chester, on the north-east. The town was not yet incorporated, neither do any records of the precinct run back to this period. Col. Kinney, the father of Dorothy, from Preston, Conn., had removed his family consisting of several daus. of adult age, into his log cabin inclosing a single compartment comprising kitchen, parlor and lodgings for the household, very inconvenient for the entertainment of lover and friend and the reciprocal expression of the "conscious flame." But the address of these wood nymphs was equal to the emergency. Lumber they had none, but the birch bark of the forest carefully prepared, afforded a substitute of silvery tinc and polish that might grace the wainscoting of a princely parlor; and with their birch bark partitions they extemporized a cosy parlor for the reception of their friends. Within this birch bark parlor one hundred and two years since a youthful virtuous pair, with native energy and character competent for higher scenes, pledged their mutual faith and love, and were m. May 18, 1769. The husband was a man of rare ability, quick discernment, and sound judgment, very ready in repartee and capable of the keenest irony.

Resided in Dorchester, Mass.; m. Pamela Strong, Southampton, Mass. Two children, Frances Amelia and Henry Lyman.
- 351 8 Almira, b. Jan. 23, 1802; m. Charles McKnight of Truxton, N. Y.
- 352 9 Eliza, b. June 17, 1805; m. J. Babcock, of Homer — no children.
- 353 10 Alonzo, b. Oct. 15, 1808; married — no children.
- 354 11 Alender, b. Jan. 28, 1811; a graduate from Amherst College, 1837; studied theology at Andover; taught in Worthington and Pittsfield, Mass., and in Miss.; without any assignable cause his usefulness was interrupted by mental derangement; d. at Northampton, March 3, 1866, in the asylum for the insane, where he had lived many years.

Sumner Gallup Clapp, Cong. clergyman, b. in Easthampton, Mass., March 10, 1800; fitted for college at Plainfield, Mass., with Rev. Moses Hallock; at Amherst Academy, and then at Hartford Academy with Rev. Lyman Coleman; principal 1823-4 of Lincoln Academy, Newcastle, Me. Graduated at Yale Coll., 1824. Studied theology in Andover; pastor 1824-7; pastor Cong. Church in Enfield, Mass., 1828-37; Mass., of Third Cong. Church, Cabotville, Mass., 1837-50; pastor of South Cong. Church, St. Johnsbury, Vt., 1850-5; pastor of Cong. Church, Sturbridge, Mass., 1856-62; then preached one year in Lyndon, Vt.; his health failing, he ceased preaching in 1865. Married in 1829, Pamela, dau. of Phineas and Eunice Strong, of Southampton, Mass., by whom he had two children; Frances Amelia, b. Nov. 2, 1831, who is married to Franklin, son of Gov. E. Fairbanks, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., and has had three children, one only now surviving.—Henry Lyman, b. Aug. 2, 1836, was in Amherst College till junior year, when he was obliged by ill health to leave; now of the firm of Fairbanks & Co., 118 Milk street, Boston, and is m. to Susie Taintor, of Brookfield, Mass. After enjoying, through several of his declining years, the quiet home in Dorchester, Mass., provided for him by his children, died at his son's house in Boston, Jan. 20, 1869, aged sixty-eight years. He was "a faithful, true-hearted and most affectionate servant of Christ, and wherever he dwelt attracted the confidence and love of many hearts."

The close of life was serene, cheerfully bearing the burden of ill health, endearing himself by his sweet and modest worth to all around, he waited for the summons, which came suddenly at last, but not too suddenly for one who long had felt that "The Lord's appointment is the servant's hour." His record is on high; and though his labors have ended, his words of truth and love will long remain to bless those to whom he ministered.

Joseph B. Lyman, d. suddenly at Richmond Hill, L. I., Jan. 28, 1872. He was from childhood a great reader and good scholar. Had an original turn of mind and when a child greatly amused the neighbors by his smart sayings and philosophical turn of mind. He was early inclined to study for college and was willing to make great sacrifices to fit for college and support himself while there.

He taught for two or three years at the south, and studied law and was admitted to the bar, in New Orleans. He was ambitious and a very careful and diligent student. He was just beginning to gain a position in his profession when the war broke out, which eventually drove him north, impoverished and disappointed. He was remarkably cheerful in misfortune. Always looking on the bright side and when he went to New York, in 1864, he had nothing but his head and hands to depend upon. He had no one to introduce him, or to help him into a position, or support him and his increasing family till he could get a start. He wrote articles for newspapers on topics of interest, depending upon their own merits to introduce them. They were, many of them, published, though the writer was unknown. He made a demand for his writing by their true merit. He wrote most of the sketches of that very popular book The Women of the War, though his name does not appear. He also wrote several articles on agriculture and together with his wife, published The Philosophy of Housekeeping, and soon became the agricultural editor of the New York Tribune.

"These experimental essays brought him into communication with New York journalism, and he came to this city to begin the useful and successful career which has been suddenly cut short by death. He acted for two years as agricultural editor of the World, next became managing editor of Hearth and Home, from which position he came to the Tribune, where he filled for the last four years of his life, with unusual energy and intelligence the chair of agricultural editor. He traveled extensively west and south, and his conscientiousness and sagacity made his letters especially valuable. He was a prominent member of the Farmer's Club and Rural Club, and in honorary capacity connected with many horticultural and agricultural societies. The Farmer's Club afforded him congenial means of diffusing practical knowledge on current subjects. This club owes largely its importance and usefulness to his zealous cooperation." He was a very hard working man, would undertake what would seem impossible to other men. In all his labors for the diffusion of knowledge and progress in agriculture, he was imbued with the thought that he was doing good. He was for many years a professing Christian. In his last sickness when inquired of, by his wife, about his feelings, his reply was, 'Christ has been the head centre of my faith, for 20 years, I have no fear.'"

Both Caleb Strong and Phebe his wife were distinguished for original strength of mind, sound judgment and exemplary Christian deportment. They were the parents of twelve children, one of whom was Gov. Caleb Strong, one of the most distinguished Christian statesmen of Massachusetts. He was U. S. Senator in the First Congress, 1788-94, 1794-1800. He became eminent in the legal profession; and equally distinguished for his moral worth and stern integrity. He was deservedly honored with the respect of his citizens throughout the state of which he received the highest evidence in his appointment as governor of the commonwealth. On his election as governor of the state although party spirit ran high, not a vote was cast against him in seven or eight towns of which Northampton was the centre. To the same office he was repeatedly elected.

As early as 1772 he was a professing Christian, and acted plainly under the sense of religious obligation, and sought the praise of God rather than that of men. He was a pillar in the church at Northampton, and for many years president of the Hampshire Co. Missionary Society and of the Hampshire Bible Society. In the latter years of his life he was much given to the study of the scriptures and of theological works. Time grew less and eternity ever more in his thoughts. In private life he was affable and attractive. He had those magnetic qualities of character, which, with his integrity, simplicity and dignity, drew all eyes and hearts to him. The Lymans and the Strongs, beginning at Northampton their career together in America, have frequently intermarried. Their mutual relations from these intermarriages are fully developed in the history of the Strong Family, by the Rev. B. W. Dwight, from which the above statements have been chiefly taken.

Nothing is known of any of his children except Theodore, who is still remembered in Boston as a man of great force and marked traits of character, of sterling worth, and generous impulses. He was one of the set of men who made the name of a "merchant of Boston" respected throughout the world.

Theodore was the only married son of Rev. Isaac L., therefore his descendants are the only ones of the male line from this branch. There were descendants in the collateral branches of Bragdon, Plummer, Keating, Gilman, Keating. Dr. Buckminster had no children.

The following is extracted from the funeral sermon of the Rev. Dr. Hemmingway of Wells, Me.:

His talents appeared to be rather solid than shining, qualifying him rather for usefulness in his particular calling, than to figure in the eye of the world. With a sound, sagacious judgment, his mind was well furnished with valuable and useful knowledge; particularly he understood the sacred doctrines and duties of the Christian religion, of which he was a public teacher. Prudence in the conduct of life was an eminent and acknowledged part of his character, as was also great integrity and probity. In him the wisdom of the serpent was joined with the innocence of the dove. His integrity and uprightness preserved him. He appeared always to maintain a mild, placid, and kind temper, happy to himself and those with him, and a conversation becoming the gospel. None appeared more universally loved and respected. Those who were most acquainted with him had the highest esteem for him. He was not a bigot. His religion was orthodoxy and charity united. As a public teacher the apparent aim and tendency of his discourses was not to show himself, but to promote true godliness and righteousness. He was an amiable example of the graces and virtues of the Christian temper and life. For many years he was wholly taken off, yet was useful to the last by his exemplary patience, and resignation to the will of God. The inscription upon the marble placed over the grave of Mr. Lyman is this:

In memory of the Rev. Isaac Lyman, the social, venerable and pious pastor of the 1st church in York, for more than sixty years. Was born at N. Hampton, Mass., Feb. 25, 1724. graduated at Yale College, 1747. Ordained Dec. 20, 1749, and d. March 12, 1810. aged 86 years.

Theodore Lyman, a munificent benefactor of reformatory education in Massachusetts, was born in Boston on the 20th day of February, 1792, the son of a successful merchant, and therefore in circumstances favorable for the formation and development of a manly character, under the influence of practical views, and liberal instruction. He was educated at Phillips Academy, and Harvard College, and was graduated at the latter institution in 1810.

In 1812 he went abroad, and traveled in Europe for about four years, a part of the time in company with Hon. Edward Everett, visiting all the great centres of interest, including Greece, Egypt, and Palestine. He was in Paris when the allied armies entered that city, and of the stirring incidents of that period, he has given an account in a volume entitled Three Weeks in Paris. The fruits of his foreign travels and suggested studies, were subsequently embodied in an octavo volume on Italy, and two volumes on the Diplomacy of the United States with Foreign Nations, both of which were favorably received by the public.

Medusa Lyman.

In 1821, Mr. Lyman married Miss Mary E. Henderson of New York—a lady of rare personal attractions and mental accomplishments, who blessed his home by the birth of three daughters and a son. In that home for thirteen years, he found all the comforts which a sweet accord of temper, books, the converse of highly cultivated friends, and abundant means of doing good can command.

In 1833, he had the sorrow of losing his oldest daughter, just as she was arriving at a most interesting period of life, and developing the powers which had been wisely cultivated by careful training. In 1835, he was called to endure the still heavier loss of the mother of that child, who for fourteen years had been the object of a devotion rarely equaled, who had shared all his cares and interests, and had repaid his affection with all the sympathy it could not fail to call forth. Principally to gratify her taste, he had purchased, in the previous year, the estate in Waltham, which formerly belonged to Gov. Gore, and had already improved and embellished it with remarkable taste and judgment. This great sorrow, however, rendered it impossible for him to continue where every flower and tree was a memento of his loss, and he removed to the place in Brookline, which he renovated with the same taste and skill he had shown at Waltham, and which have rendered the house and grounds remarkable among the many beautiful residences in the vicinity of Boston. In the year following the loss of his wife, his second daughter became so ill as to render a change of climate desirable, and he took her to Cuba, with the hope of restoring her to her accustomed strength. It proved in vain, however, and his own health was so much affected by his repeated afflictions, that he was obliged to remain at the south on his own account for several months.

In the summer of 1843 he thought it advisable to go again to Europe, principally for the benefit of the health of his son. He remained abroad a year, and was in Frankfort, and in Paris, during some of the most exciting moments of that revolutionary period. The voyage home was a rough one, and proved a severe trial of the remaining strength of his constitution, and he reached his home in a state of great exhaustion. He remained in a feeble but nearly stationary condition for eight or ten days; and complaining one afternoon of a sudden pain, he desired to be removed from the sofa to the bed. In a short time he became apparently insensible, and expired on the eighteenth of July, 1849. Thus ended, in its maturity and strength, the life of one who was in several respects a remarkable and memorable man, of warm affections, of cultivated taste and sagacity, of delightful manners and incomparable temper, conscientious in the performance of all the duties and amenities of life, and thoughtful of those whose only claim on him was the want of opportunities which he had enjoyed. The recollection of his fine person and his dignified, polished and amiable manners, can survive only in the memory of his friends; but the remembrance of his virtues, his benevolence, his exactness, his kindness to all about him, will continue through many generations in the institution to which he so largely contributed, and which is an honorable memorial at once to him and to the community of which he was a part. Besides large donations during his life, he left by will, $10,000 to the Farm School; $10,000 to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; and $50,000 to the State Reform School. Total for the Reform School, $72,500.

Went to Europe, March, 1861, where he traveled and pursued his studies; his dau. Cora, b. at Florence, Italy, March 9, 1862. Returned to the U. S., June, 1863, commissioned Lieut. Col., Aug., 1863, and by special permission of the secretary of war, appointed volunteer aide-de-camp, on the staff of Major Gen. Meade, commanding army of the Potomac. Was present in all subsequent movements, including those on Mine Run and Centreville (1863), and the great battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, &c. &c. He served during the whole investment of Petersburg, and in the route and pursuit of Lee's army. He was one of the few officers who were allowed to ride through the rebel lines after the surrender at Appomattox Court House; where he saw Lee, Longstreet, Gordon, etc. etc. Since the war he has lived at Brookline, Mass., as before, and has continued to interest himself more or less in science, and has also given some attention to the reformation of juvenile offenders, in which his father was so much engrossed. Col. Lyman has made valuable contributions to natural science, in the current and occasional literature of the day, among which are a report on the fisheries in Massachusetts, on fish culture and on forces.

John Lyman<sup>6</sup>, was a man like most of the connection, "very much set in his ways." When once he had decided that a measure was right, or had deliberately formed an opinion on any subject, it became a changeless sentiment, from which he seldom or never swerved. He emigrated to Jericho, Vt., soon after the Revolutionary war, among the first settlers in the state. He was well adapted to enjoy pioneer life as a mighty hunter and an accurate marksman.

In the winter season he would leave his home in the morning and return late at night, occasioning by his long absence deep anxiety to his wife and children; but, not unfrequently, on the following day he would bring in with his team, as the fruit of his hunting excursion, two or three deer, a wolf or a bear, or both. Even in old age, when leaning on his staff, he retained the skillful use of his gun.

Perhaps his characteristic as a successful hunter, together with his personal appearance, erect in stature, of dark complexion, with small black eyes, gave rise to the impression that he possessed Indian blood. On one occasion on taking lodgings at the public inn, he was invited by the deacon of the church to his house as the Indian preacher who was to be their supply on the sabbath, a mistake which his native humor and love of adventure keenly enjoyed. Although retiring and reticent in character, he was remarkably social with his friends. He was a man of deep thought and sound judgment, an earnest Christian and a constant attendant on the worship of God. Living three miles from church, he was always in the house of God with his family upon the sabbath, and a punctual attendant upon the meetings of the church during the week. It was his highest joy to witness the return of his children to God and welcome their admission to the church. As a bold and fearless soldier and sure marksman he served faithfully his country in the war of the Revolution; and, in the last years of his life, received a pension which he delighted to distribute to his children and grandchildren on their visits to him.

The parents of this numerous family have lived for several years with their only surviving daughter Mrs. Conners, Butternuts, N. J. Mrs. Richardson d. Feb. 28, 1869. She was the daughter of Capt. John Lyman, who emigrated from Salisbury, Conn., to Chittenden county soon after the Revolutionary war. Her parents carried to that then new country the religion of the Puritans, rearing their numerous family in the faith of the gospel. Laura was the second daughter, and very early in life was the subject of deep religious impressions. She could not recollect when she did not love the Saviour, and so thought it wrong to tell her pastor she did not when she felt love toward God and his people, and loved to pray. She was much troubled, however, because she knew not just the time of her conversion. Thus, sometimes hoping and sometimes doubting, she passed her early life.

Marrying quite young, and removing to Westford, Vt., she made a public profession, uniting with the Congregational church, under the care of Rev. Simeon Parmelee. Again removing to Jericho and finding herself now in the midst of a powerful revival, she sought of the Lord an assurance that she was indeed his. After a protracted agony of spirit, the assurance was given her. Her joy was unbounded; doubts and fears all removed. Thus commenced anew her ardent devotion to God. Ever after she gave her testimony in the weekly meetings for Christ. Often she had precious seasons of prayer with her children. Once when the father and other members of the family were at church she poured out her soul in the little prayer meeting, and to her great joy had good evidence that three of those dear children were then converted. About one year after, those same dear children d. leaving most comforting evidence that they were not dead, but "gone home to Heaven," in the submissive and expressive language of their mother.

How can I sink with such a prop
As my eternal God,
Who bears the earth's huge pillars up,
And spreads the heavens abroad.

She had faith in a covenant-keeping God, always finding great comfort in dedicating her children to God by baptism.

Daily now she seemed to be growing in grace. Fifteen years before her death she was raised again by a rich spiritual experience, to a higher, purer state of heavenly enjoyment, often saying that her last days were being her best ; that her peace was like a river. In all her conversation the love of God was the absorbing topic. Only a few days before her death she conversed most cheerfully and clearly of her coming decease, and the ground of her hope. She was reminded of the high opinion every where entertained of her Christian character, and then asked if it was not this — her holy life—that now so much comforted her ? “ Oh ! ” she said, in great surprise, “ I am nothing ; my whole comfort is in my Jesus, who shed his precious blood for me.”

She seems daily to have contemplated death with triumph, as being the gate to endless life. Finally, with the going down of the sabbath sun, she gently sank to rest, without a struggle. Among other requests was this, that her friends should not mourn but rejoice, when they should hear of her decease.

The husband still lives, waiting in the beauty of holiness, to rejoin her in the skies.—Selected Obituary.

Col. Frederick Tremain. The brief and brilliant career of this youthful warrior, which for heroic daring in action, coolness, consummate skill and generalship has seldom been surpassed, deserves a further record than time and space will now allow. Parental affection has fondly and eloquently said.

To the pen of history belongs the noble task of recording the military operations in which he had the honor to participate during the ever memorable campaign of 1864. And yet, when we consider the bloody and obstinate nature of the battles that were fought—the glorious and unconquerable resolution which was displayed in conducting the movements of the Union armies—the immense loss of human life—the masterly combinations of those armies—the vast extent of country which constituted the field of their display—the number of those brilliant raids performed by the cavalry alone, through the heart of an enemy's country, each one constituting an interesting history of itself—the toil, the sacrifices, the fatigue, sufferings and perils to which the heroic soldiers in those armies were continually subjected, and to which, with unflinching fortitude and cheerfulness, they submitted—when we consider too, the innumerable deeds of personal bravery, performed both by officers and men—the holy patriotic purposes by which the great body of those armies was prompted—the unselfish willingness they manifested to sacrifice their lives for the preservation of the honor, the integrity, and the unity of their country—and, finally, the glorious and successful results of all these operations, we may well doubt whether history will ever contain more than an outline skeleton of them all.

He participated in no less than twenty-five battles and skirmishes in ten months, rose high in rank and achieved at the age of 21 years a reputation for military qualifications and talents which were the admiration of all and might well be the envy of renowned veterans. The scene of his splendid achievements was the famous battles of the Wilderness and in connection with them the ever memorable raids of Gen. Sheridan in which he acted a conspicuous and brilliant part until struck down by the deadly aim of a rebel sharpshooter.

Col. Tremain went to the field in the fall of 1862, as Adjutant of the Seventh Volunteer Artillery. Not relishing the monotony and inactivity of garrison life—to which duty the regiment was assigned—he sought and obtained a transfer, and was detailed to staff service in the field, with Gen. Gregg, in the cavalry corps of Gen. Sheridan. And there he found an abundant opportunity for the display of his high soldierly qualities. He was foremost in every battle in which that corps engaged, and which has rendered it and its heroic leaders famous in the annals of the war. He was in that ever memorable ride from the Rapidan to the James, during which a score of battles were fought, millions of the enemy's property destroyed, the outer fortifications of Richmond entered, and prodigies of valor displayed by every member of the heroic band. On the James, he joined in most of the cavalry reconnoissances and raids which have passed into history as among the most dramatic of the war, and fell while engaged in driving back the rebel force which attempted to check the resistless progress of our troops.

Col. Tremain was a young man to be admired and loved. He combined, with a noble presence, winning manners and attractive social qualities. As a soldier, he was prompt and fearless. He was a brave rider, and coveted nothing so much as perilous adventure. He early attracted the attention of his superior officers by his manly bearing and gallant deeds, and earned his several promotions by his heroic achievements.

Educated, young and chivalrous, he speedily won the confidence of his superiors, and promotion soon followed the development of the soldierly accomplishments which distinguished him in the many battles in which he participated. No better evidence of his merits as a soldier need be cited than the fact that he earned the rank of lieutenant colonel, at the early age of twenty-one. The history of this war, participated in by so many of the youth of the country, and offering unprecedented opportunities for promotion, affords but few instances of one so young attaining this distinction.

Four cousins, differing but little in age, entered the service at about the same time, all bright and promising young men, prompted by the highest sentiments of patriotism and duty. Of these, three lost their lives in the service of their country. Their names are: Lieutenant Walter Tremain, Lieutenant-Colonel Frederick L. Tremain, and Major Frank Tremain.

The conversion of David Lyman<sup>6</sup>, forms one of the interesting incidents of his life, which occurred when he was near fifty years of age, under the faithful labors of the Rev. A. Nettleton, and is narrated in the following abstract of a letter to his brother:

Salisbury, 1815.

God in his infinite mercy has been pleased to bring my feet from the pit of miry clay, and established them on the rock, Christ Jesus, and I ought to bless his holy name for it. He has been pleased to bless, as we have reason to hope, four of our children. The work began about three months ago, and has been progressing rapidly ever since. Scarce a day falls but more or less, are brought from darkness to light. There are now more than 120 who indulge hope, children from 12 years old, to the man of 70, are subjects of the work.

I will give you a short account of my experience. I have been in an awfully stupid state of mind. I had tried deism and atheism, but was not satisfied and finally thought that morality was the best religion, and that God would do me justice and not punish me much. The Bible I put little or no confidence in. When the awakening first began, I thought little of the work of Divine grace until two of my daughters expressed a hope in redeeming grace. That awakened me to a sense of my condition as a sinner, and I continued in this frame of mind for three or four weeks, until I was brought to pray that God would be merciful to me a sinner. I had faith to believe that if I went to the throne of grace, I should not perish, therefore, I drew up the resolution to go, and if I perished, to perish there.

About this time, Calvin, aged 12 years, was brought out wonderfully clear. He began to tell me how I had lived and the awful situation I was in. I was sensible of it before he began, but it came with such force, and such anxiety that he appeared to have for me, that it cut me down. I trembled like Felix, and said "God be merciful to me a sinner." I continued most of the night crying for mercy, and have reason to hope that God pardoned my sins that night. Oh how precious are God's promises to me. The Bible is now my study, and I delight in its perusal. Every thing appears new. I have but just begun to live, and I pray "God that I may live the remainder of my days in his service."

He remained faithful to the close of life. The blessed results of that revival remain to the present day, and well illustrates the revivals of that age.

970 CALVIN LYMAN<sup>7</sup>, b. May 16, 1803; d. Jan. 12, 1864, aged 60 years, in Brockport, N. Y.; m. Mary Robbins, of Hartford, Conn. He was converted at the early age of 12 years, but soon relapsed into a state of indifference, and remained so until his last sickness, when he was fully restored to the divine favor, and his son George C., writes that he d. happy, perfectly resigned to the will of heaven, assured of eternal life hereafter. *Rockport, N. The following chapters on pioneer life written by Samuel Lyman, son of David Lyman, who left Salisbury, Connecticut, in 1817, and settled in Rose, N. Y. are a quaint and amusing illustration of the spirit of the man and of the age:

THE THIRD BOOK OF MACCABEES.

CHAPTER I.

1. Now there dwelt in one of the eastern provinces an aged man, a man of renown, of the lineage of Simeon, and there were born unto him twelve children, six sons and six daughters, and they were comely in stature, and beautiful to look upon, and they were brought up under the law of Moses and the Saybrook platform, and they swerved not from the precepts of their Father but observed the ordinances of the law blameless.

2. And when his eldest son had grown to man's estate, he took to wife one of the daughters of the land, and when children were born unto him, he said, behold the land is too straight for us, and it was told him of a goodly land, lying west of the great mountains — a province, flowing with milk and honey.

3. And he communed with his wife and said, thou seest the straits to which we shall be driven, behold the land is too straight for us, let us arise and seek a habitation beyond the great river, for ourselves and little ones, where there is room for our flocks and our herds, lest we come to poverty.

4. And the saying pleased her, and she said, thou hast well spoken. Now do as thou hast said, that we may find sustenance for ourselves and little ones.

5. And he gathered together his substance and took his wife and little one, with seventy shekels of silver, and bade his kindred farewell and departed.

6. And he journeyed westward over the great mountains of the province, and on the third day he arrived at the great river of the country, and he passed over it, and behold a level country opened before him.

7. And he pursued his journey for the space of seventeen days, and on the eighteenth he lifted up his eyes and said, we are drawing near our journey's end, and now behold, I have a kinsman living in this country, let us therefore seek him out and lodge with him, peradventure he may succor and befriend us, seeing we are strangers in the land.

8. And he inquired of the inhabitants of the land, saying, know ye such and such a man living near? and they answered, yea, we know him, and he dwelleth with us in the Valley of Roses.

9. And he hastened and drew near the place and alighted, and presented himself before the man, and when he had saluted him he said: I am a stranger from a far country, and I come to seek a residence in this land. And the man said — Whose son art thou?

And he said, I am the son of thy sister, whom she bare unto my father.

10. And the man said, Come in, thou blessed of the Lord. and tarry with us. And he ran and drew water and provided provender for his oxen and he sat meat before them, and they did eat and were satisfied.

11. And he said, now tell us of thy father and mother, and all thy kindred and of their welfare. And he told him all and kept nothing from him, and of the mighty men of renown in his country. And the man rejoiced exceedingly.

12. And he said, behold the land is before thee, choose thee out a place which liketh thee best. If thou likest it not on the left, then turn thou to the right, for the place is large and the whole land is before thee.

13. And on the morrow he journeyed northward, and eastward a little way, and behold a level plain like the plains of Amram opened before him, and the trees thereof were sturdy as the oaks of Bashan, tall and stately as the cedars of Lebanon and their tops reached up toward heaven, and he lifted up his eyes, and looked northward and eastward, and he said, this suiteth me.

14. And he conferred with the magnates of the land, and said unto them, what must I give thee for the land running thus far northward, and eastward, and southward? and they said, thou shalt have it for 750 pieces of silver.

15. And he unloosed the mouth of his sack, and weighed out to them a part of the price, even 40 pieces, and he called witnesses, and it was sealed unto him, and his children after him forever.

16. And he set up his Ebenezer, and pitched his tent, and he called the name of the place Peth, which name it also bears unto this day. And the man Sambo was twenty and three years old, when he first entered into Peth.

CHAPTER II.

1. And it came to pass on the twenty-first day of the second month, that he removed from the Valley of Roses to his own house. And it was winter. And the hoar-frost lay on the face of the country, to the depth of forty and eight inches. And he drew forth his axe of steel and swung it with vigor against the trees of the forest, and they fell prostrate before him.

2. And he clave the trees asunder, and drew the wood to his house and kindled great fires on his hearth, which ceased not to burn, night and day, till the frost ceased from the earth.

3. And at the end of forty and five days, the south wind began to blow, and the frost dissolved, and all the low places and pools of the country were filled with water. And the waters subsided, and the man said: I will go forth to my labors.

4. And the forest resounded with the blows of his axe, and the trees came tumbling with a mighty crash to the earth and he cut them asunder, and rolled them in piles, one upon the other, and set them on fire, and they were consumed.

5. And he prepared the ground and sowed it with wheat and corn and legumens, and the earth yielded her increase, some thirty, some sixty and some a hundred fold. And the man rejoiced greatly in the work of his hands.

6. And he spake to his wife and said, after a few more years of toil, and when this wilderness shall be subdued before us, we shall then have a goodly heritage, where our flocks and herds can feed in green pastures and lie down beside the still waters, for the land is fruitful and level as the garden of Eden and will produce all manner of fruits in their season, equal to the clusters of Eshcol.

7. And he rose with the lark, buoyant with, as it were, the strength of an unicorn, and he built stalls for his oxen, and outhouses for the products of the land, and he got him herds of cattle.

8. And when the season was far spent, and the products of the land had been gathered in, the inhabitants of the land said to him, our children are growing up in ignorance without schools. Come thou and teach them for ninety days, and we will give thee for thy hire, thirty-six pieces of silver.

9. And his wife said, go my husband, for the oil is clean gone in the cruise, and the meal runs low in the barrel, and there are but two pieces of silver left in the sack; go, therefore, that we may replenish our stores.

10. And he consented, and went. And when the ninety days had expired, he said, now pay me my hire, and he took the thirty-six pieces of silver, and brought them to his wife, saying: put them in the sack, and buy such things as are needed for our sustenance; till our own fields yield us a full supply.

11. And an angel appeared to him in a dream by night, and said: I have watched thy outgoings and thy incomings, these many days since thou hast been a sojourner in this wilderness, and how thou hast walked before me in thy integrity, and now I will reveal to thee things that must shortly come to pass.

12. And now evil genii are let loose in the land, and they are now going to and fro in the land and walking up and down in it, and they will pour out the vials of their wrath on the fountains of water, and all the pools shall become green, and the miasma shall overflow the country.

13. And sickness will follow, and death on his pale horse will traverse thy streets, and lamentation and woe shall be heard in thy gates, and thou canst not escape, for thou must pass through the mill, down through the hopper, between the upper and the nether millstones and pass out through the cogwheel. But like my servant Job, stick thou to thine integrity, and like him thou shalt come off more than conqueror,

14. And thy captivity shall be turned, and thou shalt be greatly blessed in thy basket and in thy store, and thy seed shall be greatly multiplied and they shall inherit the land, and thou shalt live to a good old age, and thou shalt yet behold thy children's children in troops gamboling in the streets of Peth; and he awoke and behold it was a dream. And he told it to his wife and she marveled greatly.

CHAPTER III.

1. And about the beginning of barley harvest when the sun shineth in his strength, he assayed to go to the field as at other times, and he thrust in his sickle and it fell from his hand, for his hand shook like the aspen leaf, and he hastened to his house and said, kindle a fire and wrap me in blankets that I may get heat, for the icy hand of death is upon me. And a mighty fever followed, and he said, bring me a drop of water to cool my tongue, for the marrow of my bones is on fire.

2. And sore disease was upon him, and he gat no rest. Chilled with ague by day and scorched by fever at night, as days and weeks rolled on they brought him no relief.

3. And, in anguish of spirit, he cried, O, that I had remained on my own native hills, there to inhale the health-giving breezes wafted from their everlasting heights! O, that I could drink of the sweet, sparkling waters that gush from their thousand fountains, and that I could now bathe my feverish brow and aching limbs, in the soft, foaming waters as they dance in their onward course from the top of Riga, instead of these sluggish waters, which breed malaria, pestilence and death!

4. And while he was yet speaking, behold a messenger came running, and said: A mighty tempest hath shaken the forest, and the trees thereof have fallen upon thy cattle and left thee none remaining. And his wife and little ones were also smitten with the ague.

5. And the voice of mirth was hushed in the streets, and the weeks of Sundays commenced. And few went to their fields, for sore disease was upon them. And the crops went back to the earth, for none could be found to harvest them. And the man bowed his head to the blast, and said, My cup is filled to the brim and runneth over. And he covered him with sack-cloth and ashes.

6. And he spake not again for the space of two days. Then he opened his mouth and said, Thy billows go over my soul and I sink in deep waters. Let that day be darkened, let it not be counted among the days of the year in which it was said, the man first set foot into Peth. And the man wept sore, for anguish was upon him.

7. And death on his pale horse traveled his rounds. And many were borne to their long homes. And a wayfaring man as he journeyed called in, and when he saw their affliction he said, be of good cheer, and fear not, I will cast out this shaking devil, that he torment you no more and ye shall be well, if so be I can find a certain herb which grows in the country; and he went on his way, and the man went with him a little way and he said, behold here it is, and he pulled up the herb and gave it to the man and said, steep it in water and drink of it, and ye shall be well. And he brought it to his wife and she steeped it and drank of the water, and was cured. The man also drank of it, but was not cured.

8. And the man said, behold the woman is cured, howbeit he could not cast it out of the man also. And it was said, this kind goeth not out by a decoction of roots and herbs. And the man shook on, and in dreamy mazes he would revisit his fatherland and ramble over the old wonted lots and eat of the luscious fruit of the old trees of the fruit-yard or drink of their generous juices fresh from the press; but only to awake to disappointment as when a hungry man dreameth.

9. And when months of suffering had passed away, the man began to amend and his strength returned as his disease grew less, and he said, the bitterness of death is past, I am fast getting through the mill, except perchance the cogwheels. And he thanked God and took courage.

10. And he gained in strength daily, the chilling blasts of winter were over, and the ague gone, the genial sun of spring returned to bless the earth and awaken to new life the vegetable kingdom, and the man felt its genial influence, was invigorated, and went forth anew rejoicing to his labors, and he toiled on and the wilderness receded before him.

CHAPTER IV.

1. Now it came to pass at the end of twelve years, as he sat musing on the events of the past, that he greatly desired to visit once more the land of his nativity, and know of the welfare of his kindred.

2. And he said to his wife, go to, I pray thee, let me go and visit my kindred in the Eastern Province, and know of a surety of their health and of their welfare.

3. And she said, go and the Lord prosper thee on thy journey thither. Go and visit thy father and mother, for they are old and well stricken in years; go, therefore, and see them before they die.

4. And he arose, and put on change of raiment, and girded on his sandals, and took his staff in his hand, and kissed them and said, be of good cheer till I return in peace at the end of the full moon, and he departed.

5. And he journeyed onward, till he came to the great thoroughfare of the country, and he took shipping thereon, and sped on the way four days and nights, and he arrived at the great river, and passed over it.

6. And on the fifth day, he lifted up his eyes and behold, the great mountains which divide the provinces were before him, and he passed over them and drew near to the home of his father and his mother, and all his kindred.

7. And when he came in sight of his own native hills his emotions were unutterable, and he sat down on the ground and gazed with delight and wonder upon the mighty Taghanic over whose rugged cliffs in his younger days he bounded, like the young roe in the chase, after the foxes and the conies.

8. And he said, up, I may not thus tarry,—get thee down to thy father's house and know of their welfare; and he hastened and entered into the house and saluted them, and he seemed unto them as a wayfaring man and they knew him not.

9. And he communed with them of their flocks and of their herds, and he said, I would see the master of the house if peradventure I may buy of him; and they said, he is in the field ploughing and as he assayed to go to the field he smiled; and his mother fixed her eyes upon him and she leaped from her seat and caught hold of the skirts of his garment and held him fast.

10. And she said, tell me, is this our son who has been gone from us these many years? tell me. And he dissembled no longer, and he said, yea, my mother, it is indeed he who has been gone so long, thy very son Sambo.

11. And she rejoiced and said, blessed be the God of thy fathers that he hath preserved thee alive and sent thee back in safety, that we may see thy face once more before we die. And she rejoiced as though she had seen the face of an angel.

12. And they brought forth the fatted calf and made a feast of fat things, butter, and honey and wine on the lees well refined. And they did eat and drink and were merry.

13. And when the end of the full moon drew near, he said, go to I pray thee, let me now return to my home and see how it fares with my wife and little ones. And they said, if now it must be so, bring thy sack for we may not send thee empty away.

14. And they brought forth their treasures, new and old, rich apparel and changes of raiment, and put them in the sack, and his father brought a lordly present, even 40 shekels of silver, and blessed him and said, the God of thy fathers bless and protect thee on thy journey, and may thy posterity inherit the land and make them as the stars of Heaven in multitude, and he bade them farewell and went on his way rejoicing.

15. And on the fifth day at the going down of the sun he drew near his own house, and his wife and little ones espied him afar off and they ran and fell on his neck and kissed him; and he unloosed the sack, and when they saw the treasures he had brought them they were filled with exceeding great joy.

16. And he again applied himself to his labor with renewed vigor, and blessings attended him in his outgoings and incomings, insomuch that sons were born unto him by couplets. And he named them after his younger brethren, and the lads grew and prospered greatly.

17. And he waxed strong in power, and his substance increased, and he gat him horses and chariots, and he rode upon the high places of Peth. He washed his steps in butter and the rock poured him out rivers of oil, and he sat as a prince among his people.

18. And he had six sons and three daughters, and among all the daughters of Peth there was none to vie with the daughters of Sambo.

19. And his sons were comely in person and walked in the steps of their father; and, like Recab, the son of Jonadab, drank no wine or strong drink, and they became mighty in building up the name and the house of their father.

20. And they took them wives, of such as they chose among the daughters of the land, and got them possessions on the right hand and on the left, and their children were born unto them, and the heavens were filled with their mirth.

21. And as Sambo sat at the gate at the entering in of the city, he said: Mine horn is exalted, for unto me is given a numerous progeny to build up my house and perpetuate my name in the archives of Peth forever.

22 JOSEPH LYMAN<sup>8</sup>, 3d of the name, b. Oct. 22, 1767, graduated from Yale College in 1783, was admitted to the bar in Jan., 1787, practiced seven years in Westfield, Mass., which town he represented in the legislature. He returned to Northampton his native town, and was appointed clerk of the courts of Hampshire county in 1798, a position which he held till 1810, when he was appointed judge of the common pleas and of probate. The court of common pleas was broken up in 1811, and Hampshire county was divided. In 1816 he was appointed sheriff of Hampshire Co. which position he held till 1845, two years before his death which occurred Dec. 11, 1847.

It is related as quite remarkable, that in sixty years connection with the courts as attorney, clerk, judge, or sheriff, he never sued any one in any other than an official capacity nor was he ever sued by any one. It is said that he had little choice between losing a debt and suing for its recovery. He was president of the old Hampshire Bank during the whole of its existence from 1812 to 1835.

He m. first, Elizabeth Fowler, daughter of Hon. Samuel Fowler of Westfield, Jan. 10, 1792. She was b. Feb. 1, 1772; and d. July 16, 1808.

Children, Seventh Generation :

- 40 4 Samuel Fowler, b. May 3, 1799.

41 5 Mary, b. March 27, 1802; d., 1834.

42 6 Jane, b. April 22, 1804.

Married 2d, Oct. 11, 1811, to Anne Jean, dau. of the Hon. E. H. Robbins, of Milton, Mass. She was b. July, 1789, and d. May 24, 1867, a woman of remarkable beauty of person, force of character and goodness of heart. The children of this second marriage were:

43 7 Joseph, b. Aug. 17, 1812; m. Susan Bulfinch, of Boston.

44 8 Anne Jean, b. July 7, 1815; d. autumn of 1835.

49 11 Catharine Robbins, b. Jan. 12, 1825; m. Warren Delano, of N. Y., and has had eleven children.

43 Joseph Lyman was gifted with personal and mental endowments of the highest order. He was a noble example of a refined, cultivated gentleman and scholar. With a heart tender as that of a child, delicate, gentle and sensitive as that of a woman, he was a man of heroic fortitude, dauntless energy and perseverance in the pursuits of life. From the study of law he passed to that civil engineering mining and metallurgy, and bent all his varied attainments and energies for some time to the early development of the deposits of anthracite coal and beds of iron in Pennsylvania. The construction of rail roads, as a means of national wealth, also strongly enlisted his attention, while the condition of the poor the ignorant and the oppressed employed his active sympathies and wakeful benevolence. The emancipation of the slave, the enfranchisement, the education and improvement of all classes of his fellow men was the study and the labor of his life. Every form of human misery he comprehended in his wide wish of benevolence. "There was not a groan from the oppressed in the world's wide realm, that did not reach his ear and melt his heart. There was not a hand lifted for freedom in Europe or America that he did see and bless."

And yet he comprehended in his reading and study the wide range of literature, science and politics, though half his term through life stretched helplessly on his bed the subject of acute, excruciating pain. Worn down with these sufferings, he yielded up his noble, exemplary life, Aug. 13, 1871, at Jamaica Plain, Mass., leaving a wife and daughters whose record has not been received.

OBITUARY.—Hannah Willard Lyman, daughter of the late Theodore Lyman, was born in "old Northampton" in 1816. Here amid these peaceful retreats, stately elms and lovely landscapes, the first years of her childhood were spent. Subsequently she removed with her family to Amherst, and after the distressing death of her elder brother, Henry Lyman, one of the missionary martyrs of Sumatra, she entered upon a course of preparative study at Ipswich Female Seminary, which was designed to fit her for the distinguished work which divine providence intended her to do. Miss Lyman commenced to teach at Gorham Academy, Maine, and she subsequently taught in Mrs. Gray's Seminary for Ladies in Petersburg, Virginia; but her more important work was carried on in the city of Montreal; surrounded by her nearest relatives, she commenced a select class for young ladies which speedily grew into a seminary of a very superior order.

For twenty-two years, though often oppressed with anxiety, by sorrow, by failing health, and most of all by the deep sense of her own insufficiency, she faithfully persevered in her work."

"Such earnest teaching could hardly fail to bear fruit; and she, who sowed often in tears, and under a discouraging sense of failure, was often blessed by a rich reaping time even on earth, very many of her beloved 'children,' as she was wont affectionately to call them, gave her the delight of seeing them joined to the Lord, and walking in the truth." Her reputation as a successful and inspiring teacher had been so wide-spread that she had received frequent invitations to take the superintendence of large public educational institutions, which she had uniformly declined. In 1865, however, she received an urgent request to become first lady principal of a newly organized female college on a very large scale — Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, an institution founded on a munificent bequest, with aims and resources greater than perhaps any other such institution in the world.

She would at once have dismissed the application, shrinking from the responsibility, but for the suggestion contained in the letter, "whether in this field the Master may not have work for you to do." She went, and it is needless to add that she carried her principles with her to the stately halls of Vassar where they had indeed wider scope, and greater development. "It was no easy task to which she was called, but to that task she brought no ordinary qualifications. Her natural gifts, amounting almost to a genius for her profession, had been enriched by an education of no ordinary range. Her early training in a college town of New England, her extensive acquaintance with teachers, professors and Christian ministers, her familiarity with many interesting questions which have of late been agitated respecting the education of woman, and her life-long experience in the actual management of the young, all made her counsel invaluable in the moulding of the great enterprise to which she had been called." She was genial but dignified, devout without austerity, cheerful without levity, and while very firm in all matters of principle and conscience, she was catholic and tolerant in respect of the religious convictions of others. There was nothing sickly or sentimental in the type of her piety, she hated affectation and cant. Her clear, incisive intellect enabled her with almost unerring certainty, to penetrate such disguises, and to distinguish between the meretricious and the true.

Miss Lyman was nowhere more at home than in the sick room, and beside the couch of suffering. Delicate in health herself, she was nevertheless always ready when the sick and the sorrowful needed her help.

When dangerous infection had driven others away, there she might have been found with her calm and gentle ministry, fearless of contagion. Her spirit was of a heroic sort, kindred indeed to that which animated her lamented brother at Sumatra, and that of a Florence Nightingale in the fever hospitals of Scutari. "I was sick and ye visited me."

I have said that Miss Lyman's character was well balanced, but it is fitting that I should add that her almsgiving in proportion to her means and resources were munificent, at the same time ostentation in giving was carefully avoided.

The amount of assistance, however, which she gave to ministers and missionaries, and their families, and to the indigent of Christ's flock would, if fully known, astonish her most intimate friends.

Who can estimate the value to the world of such a life? By what powers of arithmetic can its blessed results be computed? "And I heard a voice from Heaven say, Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Her struggle with death was long and painful. For three weeks she might truly be said to be dying; and "dying," said she, "is very hard work." She had no fears, no shrinking; she longed to depart. Her desire and prayer was that the end might come; and, as we looked upon her sufferings, we could not but join in her prayer. On Tuesday Feb. 21, 1871, the prayer was heard and answered. The gate at which she had so long been knocking opened, and she entered into rest.

"Wonderful was the change which passed upon the face as we stood, and watched the expression of weariness and pain passing away, and the features settling to a perfect repose."

"Weep not for her! She is an angel now,
And treads the sapphire floors of paradise,
All darkness wiped from her refulgent brow,
Sin, sorrow, suffering banished from her eyes,
Victorious over death, to her appear
The vista'd joys of Heaven's eternal year,

II. DESCENDANTS OF BENJAMIN,<sup>3</sup> THROUGH BENJAMIN.<sup>4</sup>

4 BENJAMIN LYMAN<sup>4</sup>, Benjamin<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>, 1703–1762, b. in Northampton, Jan. 2, 1703; m. Mary Mosely of Glastenbury, Ct., probably in the early part of the year 1726. She was b. in Westfield, Mass., in 1707. He lived in Northampton nearly twenty years. In 1745 or soon after, he removed with his family to Bartlett Mills on the Manhan river, a district then in Northampton, but afterwards with other settlements set off and denominated Easthampton. On the 28th of May, 1745, the town deeded to Benjamin Lyman and Stephen Wright, who was his neighbor and had removed with him from Northampton, for and in consideration of the sum of sixteen hundred and twenty-five pounds in bills of public credit, old tenor, "a tract of land known as 'School Meadow,' the same being land sequestered by the town 'for the schools,'" about eight acres of the Manhan meadow above the falls on the river and the public road across the same. At that time no place of worship had been erected in Easthampton. He therefore retained his connection with the church in Northampton where he was one of the early and constant supporters of Rev. Jonathan Edwards, D.D., being one of the nineteen who voted to retain him as pastor of the church at the time of the opposition to him. He died May 1, 1762, aged 59. Mrs. L. died Aug. 17, 1782, in her 75th year.

Children, Fifth Generation :

1 1 Benjamin, b. Aug. 1, 1727; known as Deacon Benjamin.

2 2 Mary, b. Feb. 22, 1730; m. Oliver Pomeroy, of Northampton.

3 3 Thankful, b. March 30, 1731; m. Daniel Williams.

5 5 Lemuel, b. Aug. 17, 1735.

6 6 David, b. Dec. 14, 1737.

7 7 Solomon, b. Jan. 21, 1741; d. Jan. 27, 1746.

8 8 Esther, b. June, 1748; d. 1749.

9 9 Martha, b. 1750; m. Oliver Wright, Nov. 8, 1770.

The town record of Northampton gives the birth of Aaron, son of Benjamin and Mary Lyman, Aug. 1, 1727. It has been said that Benjamin was b. in that year. No Aaron grew up in the family, and no such person is mentioned in the record of the deaths, though the death of Lemuel and Solomon is recorded. It is hence inferred that Benjamin was at first called Aaron, and the name changed.

Children, Sixth Generation:

- 10 1 Benjamin, bapt. July 27, 1759.
- 11 2 Mary, bapt. June 20, 1761; m. David Chapman.
- 12 3 Solomon, bapt. June 12, 1763.

- 15 6 Hannah, m. Eli Clapp of Southampton.
- 16 7 Mercy, b. Oct. 11, 1772; m. Josiah Snow of S. Hadley.

In the town records of Northampton there is recorded the birth of Hannah, a dau. of Benjamin Lyman, jr., and Hannah, b. Aug. 27, 1756. It could probably refer to no other than Dea. Benjamin, and it is probable that he had a child of that name who d. in infancy.

Dea. Benjamin Lyman built a house on the plain, where his grandson, Rev. Solomon Lyman, now deceased, lived. He was very active and influential in the formation of the church and district or town. To him was directed the warrant, to call together the citizens to the first meeting of the district after its organization. Robert Breck, Esq., who was empowered by act of the general court to issue his warrant to some prominent citizen, was chosen moderator of the first meeting. Mr. Lyman was chosen moderator of the second meeting, and he occupied that position many times thereafter. In church matters, he was also a leader. Before the settlement of a pastor, it was needful that there be a moderator, who could legally call meetings of the church, an office to which he was appointed. At one of the earliest business meetings of the church, he was chosen deacon, which office he accepted, and performed its duties till his death in June, 1798. He was a man of ardent piety, a faithful servant of Christ. His wife was Hannah Jones of Springfield. They had children, the dates of whose baptisms are given in the church records of Southampton, Rev. Jonathan Judd, pastor, which church they joined July 29, 1759, and attended until the organization of one in Easthampton.

10 BENJAMIN LYMAN<sup>6</sup>, son of Dea. Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, b. in 1759; m. Mary, dau. of Elijah Wright of Easthampton, in 1783. He was a farmer living in his native town Easthampton, where his grandson Ansel B. now lives. He served in the Revolutionary war, and stood guard over Major André at the time of his execution. He d. 5 LEMUEL LYMAN<sup>s</sup>, son of Benjamin<sup>t</sup>, who first settled in Easthampton, b. Aug. 17, 1735; moved with his father to Easthampton, at the age of ten. In 1755, at the age of twenty, in company with his neighbor, Lieut. Eliakim Wright, he joined the expedition then forming under command of Sir William Johnson against Crown point. A battle occurred at the south end of Lake George, Sept. 8, 1755, in which a portion of the troops were engaged, these being in command of Col. Ephraim Williams, the founder of Williams College, who was slain. Mr. Lyman was in this battle, and received a wound while in the act of firing at an Indian. The bullet passed across three of his fingers and struck his breast, passing through a leather vest, pierced his shirt three times on account of a fold in it, passed through his bullet pouch and half buried itself in his body. This pouch is still preserved in one of the numerous families of his descendants. Soon after this, he, with others, was sent with a drove of cattle for the northern army. It was supposed, that, in this expedition, by the privations and exposures which he endured, he laid the foundation for the rheumatism, a disease, which in later years rendered him, to some extent, unable to perform manual labor. He was a member of the board of selectmen for seven years, and one of the leaders in the establishment of a church, and the erection of a house of worship. He was a man of great physical strength, and was quick to perceive the best method of action in a moment of danger. He had a very retentive memory, great presence of mind, and native energy of character. He m. Lydia Clark, dau. of Eliakim Clark, of Easthampton, who was b. Sept., 1741. He d. Easthampton, Nov. 21, 1827. He built a house at the foot of "Meeting House Hill," Easthampton. For many years he owned the saw-mill on the Manhan near his residence, and carried on his lumber business, as extensive probably, as that of any man in the county. He also owned a share of the grist-mill opposite his saw-mill, standing where one has now stood little short of two hundred years. The first mill was erected by Samuel Bartlett, to whom in 1676-7 Northampton gave liberty "to set up a corn-mill upon Manhan river below the cartway on the falls of the river." Mr. L. P. Lyman d. Aug. 7, 1865. His death was hastened, by if not entirely, the result of an injury received on his head by the falling of a stick of timber at the raising of a house.

It was said of Daniel F. Lyman by one who knew him well and knew whereof he spoke:—Modest and retiring in his manners; he never sought to make himself prominent by seeking office, but was content to serve his generation by striving to do his duty as a citizen and a Christian in the sphere in which he was placed. Springing from a Puritan ancestry, he possessed in a large measure, the virtues which mark the genuine Puritan character, and it may truly be said of him that no man in town was more thoroughly respected, nor one whose integrity was more unquestioned. He had been for many years a member of the first church, and was regarded as one of its pillars. The Bible says, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," and Mr. Lyman has certainly left that as an inheritance for his children.

Daniel W. Lyman, son of Daniel F. Lyman, was a member of Co. K, 52d regiment, in which he was one of the first to enlist. Not from any fondness for the adventures and perils of war, nor from any momentary impulse, but from a deliberate conviction that to him the voice of country was the voice of God, was he led to offer himself, a sacrifice if need be, for his country's salvation. Upon a Christian young man not absolutely forbidden by some higher call of duty, he felt that the claims of country then were paramount. Influenced by such considerations, it is not too much to say, that in the darkest hour, his purpose never wavered, nor did a regret for his course find place in his heart. To his faithful performance of the duties of a Christian soldier, many have borne ample testimony. His cordial, unwavering trust in God, in times of darkness and danger, though probably doubted by none, is best known to those who knew him intimately. To many whom he never saw, he was known by his letters from the regiment, which were published in the Hampshire Gazette.

Sabbath morning, June 14, 1863, an attack on Fort Hudson was ordered, and, though deprecating the selection of that day for the assault, he went forward without faltering. His regiment being engaged as skirmishers, he, with a few of his comrades, gained a position in a ravine somewhat in advance of the main line, and while here, very early in the engagement, a ball from a rebel sharpshooter struck him in his head, killing him instantly. Capt. Bissell wrote to me thus in relation to him: "Gentle hands placed him in his grave, and covered the earth over him near the spot where he fell, although obliged to wait till after dark, and to be exposed to a storm of rebel bullets. This tender tribute of affection is his monument, and, although his dust may not make the violets of his native hills, it will not be amiss, on the morning of the resurrection, that his body should arise from the spot, where the latest duties of his life were so faithfully concluded."

In the town of Easthampton, nine of the name of Lyman enlisted in the service of their country to subdue the rebellion, four of whom died of disease or fell in battle in the rebel states.

340 PAYSON W. LYMAN<sup>3</sup>, son of Daniel F.<sup>1</sup>, of Easthampton, b. Feb. 28, 1842, graduated from Amherst College in the class of 1867, and from Union Theological Seminary New York, in 1870. He is the author of a history of Easthampton, Mass., published in 1866. He is now pas-

Following this, he taught school in Bristol, Ct. Here the blessing of God upon his efforts for the spiritual benefit of his pupils, was such as to lead him to decide to make teaching the business of his life. This profession he followed as principal of an Academy, at Williston, Vt. and Lenox, Mass., till he was compelled in consequence of ill health, to relinquish sedentary pursuits. For many years his business has been that of telescope manufacturer and civil engineer. A reflecting telescope of his manufacture, is admitted to be the best, as it is the largest of its kind ever made in this country. He has also invented and manufactured an instrument called the protracting trigonometrometer, a very superior drafting instrument. May 22, 1844, he m. He was ordained an evangelist and went to Oregon under the auspices of the American Home Missionary Society about the time of the California gold excitement. The journey thither at that time, as may be supposed, was far more of an undertaking then, than now. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman went by way of Cape Horn, and were nearly or quite half a year in making the passage from New York to San Francisco. They remained some months in California, at San Jose and then went to Portland, Oregon, where he was largely instrumental in the establishment of a Congregational church there as also at Dallas, where he resided some years after leaving Portland. He is now professor of mathematics in Pacific University, at Forest Grove, Oregon, a university whose primary object is to raise up men to supply the need of ministerial labor on the Pacific Coast. During a year's respite from the labors of his professorship he was in the government employ in the Custom house at Astoria, the entrepot of the upper Pacific Coast. He is now discharging the duties of the professorship.

Much of Gen. Strong's early life was spent in Easthampton, Mass., with his uncle to whose care he was consigned by his father on his death bed. He graduated at Williston Seminary and at West Point, in 1857, standing third in his class. He was stationed at Selma, Ala., and then had command of Watervliet Arsenal, in Troy. He was successively on the staff of Gen. McDowell, Gen. McClellan, and was chief of staff and acting chief of ordnance to Gen. Butler, in Louisiana. On Gen. Butler's recall from New Orleans he was promoted to brigadier general for his gallantry, courage and efficiency. He had the command of one of the brigades under Gen. Gilmore in the expedition against Charleston, and led the attack on Morris Island. Here he was placed in charge of the troops and given charge of the column which was to assault Fort Wagner. In this attack he received his death wound while leading and inspiring his men who almost worshiped him for his daring, his kindness of heart and his strict though impartial discipline. He d. Huntoon, of New York, Sept. 28, 1841, and settled in Easthampton, where he now resides, and is one of the leading manufacturers of the town. On the establishment of the button works of Hon. Samuel Williston in Easthampton, Mr. Knight, who had been before clerk and salesman for Mr. Williston, became a partner. Since then, the button works have been carried on by the firm of Williston, Knight & Co., until the recent organization of the National Button Co., in which the same persons are stockholders. Mr. Knight is also largely interested in the Nashawannuck and Glendale Companies, and next to Mr. Williston has been most prominent in the manufacturing operations of the place.

He has also been very prominent in the public affairs of the town, which he has twice represented in the lower house of the legislature. He also occupied a seat in the Senate during two sessions, and was a member of the Republican National Convention at Chicago, by which Abraham Lincoln was first placed before the people as a candidate for the presidency. He was a member of the Executive Council of the state of Mass., in the administration of Gov. Bullock, to which position he was elected under circumstances very complimentary to himself. He also filled the same office in the first term of Gov. Clafin. In the early part of the war Mr. Knight was very active in procuring volunteers, paying bounties to Easthampton men who enlisted in the 27th Regiment, and subsequently to those who enlisted in the 31st Regiment, amounting in the aggregate to several thousand dollars.

He was a very noble and earnest Christian man. He lived to an advanced age. At a late period in his life he tried to lay aside the office of deacon, but the church would not accept of his resignation. They said to him, "Your day is not done." "Well," said he, "I always want to have the chores done up Saturday night before the day is done."

At one time he was thought to be near his death, but was restored almost miraculously. He seemed to regret the restoration, and said he did not see why he was spared. Shortly after, a revival occurred in the town, and often the young converts would gather about him to hear him converse about the interests of the soul, and to receive Christian counsel. His neighbors and friends told him they could see why he was spared. He was a man quite given to anecdote and illustration. He m. Electa Graves, Jan. 9, 1788. She was b. Jan. 11, 1769, and d. This record is given as copied from their family Bible illustrative of the character of the man and the spirit of the times.

1st. Isa a record of his marriage. He says: 1735, I appeared before a small assembly at the house of Joseph Lyman, and there promised to love, honor and cherish and live with my dear wife as the law of God and man directs in a marriage covenant, and I pray the God of love and peace to enable me to keep that covenant, and be found blameless. Then follows an account of births and deaths in their family, copied from the original manuscript. 1 Elijah, 1st son, b. Nov. 30, 1735; d. Jan. 19th, 1736, aged 7 weeks. 2 Elihu, b. March 31st, 1737. 3 Justus; b. Jan. 13, 1739, and then he says: Praised be God for his goodness in giving us two living children — and perfect — and I pray God to grant that they may live in His sight, and also give His servant and handmaid hearts to bring them up for Him. 4 Eunice. 5 Jonathan, with no dates of birth. 6 Susanna, b. Oct. 20, 1766. 7 and 8 Elijah and Josiah without dates. 9 Pliny, Aug. 11, 1753, being the first year after new style began. Then, he says: "We have now eight living children, which we desire to give wholly to God the giver, and pray for direction to bring them up for Him, or return them to Him in death, according to his will.

March 22, 1760, my eldest son, Elihu, departed this life, being near 23 years of age. There is quite an extensive account of this young man, and so of the others.

Jonathan died Sept. 7th, 1766, in the 23d year of his age; he had made great proficiency in learning, was a student in Yale College, had entered upon his fourth and last year.

Josiah died March 19th, 1767, in the 17th year of his age.

Capt. Nathaniel Dwight, died of pleurisy, March 30, 1784, aged 72. Dr. David Parsons, of Amherst, preached a sermon at his funeral from Rev. xiv, 13.

Mrs. Hannah Dwight, wife of Nathaniel Dwight, died Dec. 25, 1793, in the 84th year of her age. Rev. Justus Forward preached a sermon at her funeral from Rev. xiv, 13. Her record is, that she lived a godly life, beloved and respected, waiting and longing for her departure.

LYMAN FAMILIES.

LINEAGE NOT ASCERTAINED.

Levi Lyman.

This family first comes into notice in Litchfield Co., Conn., and seem to be related to the Lymans in New Hartford; lived at one time in Bridgeport; Levi the father apparently of this Levi above mentioned, "came into Dutchess Co., N. Y., about 1765, from New Milford, Conn." He was named after his father. He had a numerous family.

Levi, one of these children, left home when a youth, after the death of his father, and became the architect of his own fortune. He acquired a good education; first a farmer, then overseer of a woolen factory; he d. Feb. 22, 1845; and Sarah Cornwall, his wife, d. Aug. 20, 1841, both devoutly religious people. Stanfordville, Dutchess Co., N. Y.

1 AMY LYMAN, a woman of superior character, m. Samuel Scott, a master carpenter, removed to Akron, Ohio, to Du Quoin, Ill., then to St. Joseph, Mo., and d. March 6, 1854. Their children were:

- 1 Drusilla, b. in Stanfordville; m. 1843, John Sheewood, Ohio.
- 2 Lyman S., b. in Winsted, Conn., went to California, and in the war of the rebellion was Capt. of Co. D, California Volunteers.
- 3 William Wallace, in Perryville, Mo., 1851, unmarried.
- 4 George M., b. in Ohio, his last address was Magnolia, Iowa.
- 5 Julia, m. and settled in Nebraska.

Children:

- 1 Adah Elizabeth, b. in New Hartford, Conn., May 11, 1834; m. Feb. 22, 1852, Isaac James Hosteller, of Penn., and when in St. Louis on business, in 1855, mysteriously disappeared; she m. 2d, Charles Biggar Merchant, R. R. agent.

Children:

- 1 Alice, b. in Chester, Ill., June 14, 1853.
- 2 Wagar S., b. March 6, 1855; adopted by his grandfather.
- 3 Charles Hanford, b. Feb. 11, 1861.
- 5 Willard Stuart, b. Sept. 12, 1866.

2. Jane Ann, 2d child of Wagar, b. in New Hartford, Feb. 6, 1836; m. May 7, 1850, Albert S. Palmer, adopted in infancy after the death of his mother by his grandmother in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and at the age of 18, entered into the U. S. naval service as engineer. His subsequent course is given as illustrative of the eventful and adventurous career of many a young American.

The greater part of the first year was spent on board the United States steamer Fulton under command of Com. M. C. Perry, afterwards famous as commander of the United States expedition to Japan.

Was transferred from the Fulton to the steamer Missouri. This vessel, which had been singularly unfortunate from the beginning, was sent on her first cruise in 1843, with Caleb Cushing, United States minister to China, on board, and was bound for Alexandria in Egypt, but burnt at Gibraltar on her way out, twenty-four hours after anchoring at the latter place. Nothing was saved from the vessel.

He returned to the United States on a sailing merchantman. Was afterwards sent to the S. Union then in the Gulf of Mexico. On his way home was in a gale nineteen days off Cape Hatteras; the vessel was nearly disabled and came near being lost.

After getting her back to the Washington Navy Yard, he was put in charge of her, which office he retained for eight or ten months, when he was ordered to the Water Witch, and soon afterwards was sent on the S. Princeton to the Gulf of Mexico at Vicksburg during the Mexican war and remained nearly a year, in or near the harbor of Vera Cruz, and until the taking of the Castle of San Juan d'Ulloa by the United States forces, when the Princeton was ordered to Philadelphia with dispatches.

He was soon afterwards transferred to the steamer Michigan on the lakes, where he remained nearly a year, when he went to Chester, Ill., on furlough, and soon afterwards resigned his commission in the navy, remaining in Chester, until the year 1867, when he removed to Du Quoin where he still resides.

He was in Chester, first dry-goods merchant, then Capt. and part owner of a steam ferry boat on the Mississippi river, and last, furniture merchant, which business he still conducts.

He has always been upright and honorable in all his business and social relations, a good husband, and a kind father; respected by all who knew him.

Children :

- 1 Albert Wagar Lyman, b. in Chester, June 1, 1854, has been a very dutiful son, and is industriously working out his own future. Is a watch maker.
- 2 Julian Somers, b. in Chester Dec., 20, 1862.
- 2 Henry Ernest, b. in Chester, May 27, 1865.
- 4 Richmond Shattuck, b. in Du Quoin, Feb. 14, 1868.
- 5 Don Churchill, b. in Du Quoin, Aug. 9, 1870.

Luke Lyman.

The following from GEN. LUKE LYMAN, was not received in time to be inserted in its proper place, p. 299, No. 817:

“My regiment, the 27th Mass., was a part of the ‘Burnside Expedition’ which went to North Carolina. It took an active part in the capture of Roanoke island, and Newbern, N. C., and afterwards in the battles of Kingston, Whitehall, Goldsboro and Gum Swamp; all in North Carolina (two battles at the latter place), and was one of only two regiments which were besieged and surrounded at Washington, N. C., for 18 days, without any communication with our friends outside. At all these above named places, I was present and acting as Lieut Col., or in the command of the regiment, the Col. being absent.”

OPENING ADDRESS.

I beg you to accept my thanks for the honor you have conferred upon me, by selecting me to act as your presiding officer, upon this interesting occasion. The compliment is the more appreciated, because there are many others present, more deserving of this distinction, who bear the Lyman surname, while my nearest ancestral relation, with that name, was my paternal grandmother who was a full blooded Lyman, my own double Christian name, David Lyman, having been bestowed on me by my parents, in honor of my father's uncle, who resided in Salisbury, Connecticut, and was the son of Simeon Lyman.

Washington Irving gives expression to the following sentiment, in one of his beautiful essays for the Sketch Book, wherein he describes Westminster Abbey : " There was a noble way, in former times, of saying things simply, and yet saying them proudly ; and I do not know an epitaph that breathes a loftier consciousness of family worth and honorable lineage than one which affirms, of a noble house, that ' all the brothers were brave, and all the sisters virtuous. ' " If this broad and comprehensive eulogium, dictated as we may reasonably infer, by a surviving member of the family of the deceased, escaped criticism from an observer so acute, and a gentleman so cultivated and correct in his tastes, so delicate in his sense of propriety, and so elevated and honorable in his views, as the world renowned American author, Washington Irving, surely, we have no occasion to withhold the expression of our honest sentiments, concerning the Lyman family, by any morbid apprehensions that we shall seem to be unduly influenced by pride, vanity, or egotism.

While it may be freely conceded, that there is no personal merit, whatever, in the accident of our being born members of a family, which has ever maintained an honorable position in the country, the fact, nevertheless, is one which may, naturally, and properly, excite in our breasts, emotions of lively exultation, and profound gratitude.

Nor is the consciousness of such a relationship calculated, in any degree, as we think, to produce feelings of satisfaction, on our part, with the reputation which others have achieved, and thus to relieve us from the duty of maintaining and increasing the good name of the family. On the contrary, its natural tendency would be to impress upon every sound and well-balanced mind, the necessity of upholding the family honor, and to stimulate its members, to prove, by their life and conduct, that they are not degenerate or unworthy descendants of such ancestors.

Love of family, and a feeling of pride in the distinction which has been acquired by those who are related to us, and in whose veins flows the blood of our common ancestor, are sentiments, which naturally result from that family relation, that was ordained by the Almighty. They are creditable to our common humanity, and are well calculated to exert a salutary influence, in moulding our principles of action, and in controlling our destinies. They are virtues which belong to the same family, with love of country.

As patriotism is one of the most ennobling passions which can influence the action of a citizen, so the emotions of which I speak, when properly guided and directed, lead to the performance of the noblest aims, and highest duties. Napoleon Bonaparte inspired his troops, in Egypt, with intense enthusiasm, by the famous apothegm: "Forty ages look down upon you, from the height of yonder pyramids." He was accustomed to excite his soldiers to the performance of extraordinary feats of bravery and heroism, by appeals to the former achievements which they, or the army to which they belonged, had accomplished; such as, "You belong to the Army of Italy, or, on beholding the cloudless sun, in the morning of the battle of Moscow, he exclaims "It is the sun of Austerlitz."

To me, however, it would seem as if no influences or appeals could be more powerful for good, than those unseen, and silent, but resistless forces that flow from family traditions, and from virtue possessed, and noble deeds performed, by one's own ancestors, for many generations. Let me give you, for example, a case, which, I trow, is not altogether suppositious, so far, at least, as it assumes to give the past record of the family.

Suppose that the Lyman family had been ever known and honored as a family loyal to its country, under all circumstances; that during the war of the Revolution, it was steadfast in its devotion to the cause of the colonies; that in all subsequent contests, and trials, its voice and influence had been uniformly exerted in the same direction; that during the late great conflict, it had freely poured forth its means, and the blood and lives of its members had been freely offered, for the preservation of our nation, and our free institutions.

Suppose, also, that in the present or future history of our country, other troubles and wars should arise and a member of this same family should be surrounded by influences and circumstances hostile to his country; that he should even feel and acknowledge the errors of administration, and then suppose that he should be insidiously approached by the foes of his country, and invited to join in some movements looking to the overthrow of his government: I think, in such an hour, I can see him rising, in the dignity of his manhood casting the tempter behind him, and exclaiming indignantly: "I belong to the family of Lyman: a family which has never, yet, given birth to a traitor to his country; I know well the consequence of the position I am about to take. It may lead to the rupture of my life-long associations, social and political; it may result in the sacrifice of my property, and the loss of valued friendships, aye, it may even lead to my imprisonment and death, but I can not, and I will not, be the first to bring the foul reproach of treason upon the honored name of my family. Before one disloyal sentiment can be uttered, or one treasonal act be performed by me, may my right arm wither and perish, and my tongue cleave, forever, to the roof of my mouth.

Influences similar to those which we assume, as the result of family patriotism, naturally flow from all other virtues. If the women of the family have hitherto sustained, by their influence and example, their husbands, brothers, fathers, and sons, in their patriotic efforts; if, in other days, they were known as women of piety, attending faithfully to the ways of their household, and performing acts of charity and benevolence, while creating no sensation, by eccentricities of dress or demeanor, on the platform, or in the public streets, we may expect that their descendants of the same sex, under all changes of name and circumstances, will prove, that they have profited by the examples and teachings of their patriotic and Christian mothers.

We accept, with joy, the accomplished facts in our family history. We acknowledge, gratefully, the historical truths, that among the members of that family who have been gathered to their fathers, and others who still survive, are many honored names of those who have acquired enviable distinction in the council chamber, and upon the field of battle; who have become eminent in the learned professions, as divines, lawyers, and physicians; who have risen about the common level of humanity, in the pursuit of literature and science, agriculture, and the mechanic arts.

We feel that the renown and honors, thus acquired, are the common inheritance of all who belong to the family. We take pride in acknowledging these achievements, and we hope and trust that the present and future members of the family, taking up the Lyman standard, will proudly carry it forward to more decisive and brilliant successes, in the future battle of life.

In monarchical governments, the subject who has become pre-eminent by reason of heroic actions, rare merits, or long service, is sometimes raised to distinction by a patent of nobility, conferred upon him by the king, who is deemed the fountain of all honors and distinction. As these patents descend to the heirs of the first taken, according to the terms therein expressed, it soon comes to pass, that they cease to be evidence of merit in their present owner, and prove only, that his ancestor was made a baron, a viscount, an earl, a marquis, or a duke.

Such aristocratic distinctions were justly regarded by the framers of our government, as hostile to the spirit of equality and personal dignity, which lies at the foundation of free republican institutions. In endeavoring, therefore, to perpetuate the memory of those who have deserved favorable recognition for their service to the state, we are acting in strict conformity with the spirit of our national constitution, which by a double prohibition, denies to the United States, and to the state, the power to grant any titles of nobility. We believe that the true and genuine nobleman, is he, who, by noble deeds, and virtuous conduct, has been accorded a place among the real nobles of the land, by the voice of the American people.

We have come together, to-day, from widely separated localities, to revisit the New England homes of the Lyman family. We would make, and renew our acquaintance, with those in whose veins flows the blood of the Lymans. We would cultivate, and strengthen, the bonds of our relationship; we desire to honor and cherish the memory of our ancestors. We have gathered here, in obedience to that law of natural affection, which prompted the ancients to revere the burial places of their dead, before they had learned to perpetuate their virtues, in poetry or by the sculptured monument.

Two hundred and forty years have elapsed, since Richard Lyman, the common ancestor of all the Lymans in this country, emigrated from the parish of High Ongar, near London, England, to America. He sailed from Bristol, in the ship Lion, in company with the wife and oldest son of John Winthrop, the governor of Massachusetts, and sixty other passengers, and on the 4th of November, 1631, they landed at Boston. Their safe arrival was announced by the firing of cannon, and on the 11th of November, a public thanksgiving was held in Boston, in honor of the event.

Four years later, he left Charlestown, Massachusetts, with Sarah his wife and his children, accompanied by a colony of about sixty persons, and driving with them one hundred and sixty head of cattle, for the purpose of establishing settlements in Connecticut. Their journey lay through a trackless wilderness, and was attended with great perils, difficulties, and trials, during which, they subsisted mainly, upon the milk of their cows, and after fourteen days travel, they had made the distance of about one hundred miles. He was one of the first settlers, and original proprietors of Hartford. It is supposed that he, and his wife, became members of the first church, in Hartford, of which the renowned Rev. Thomas Hooker was pastor. He died in August, 1640, and his name was inscribed upon a stone column, in the rear of the centre church, in Hartford.

The sons of Richard Lyman were among the first settlers of Northampton, and from this central point, his descendants have gone forth to every part of our country. After this long interval, we, who are present here to-day have assembled on Mount Tom, in Northampton, upon the soil of the noble old commonwealth of Massachusetts, the cradle of American liberty, to honor the name and memory of Richard Lyman, and to kindle anew, that love of pure religion, and civil liberty, which impelled him to leave his native land, and to seek a home amid the forests of New England.

How mighty and marvellous are the physical, moral, and political changes that have been wrought in the condition of our country, since he first entered the valley of the Connecticut ! These can only be briefly sketched, on this occasion. Eleven years before he landed at Boston, the Pilgrims had planted their footsteps upon the rock at Plymouth, and laid broad and deep, the foundations of free religious worship, and republican liberty. Two years before, King Charles the first had granted the charter incorporating "The Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England." One year before, John Winthrop had been chosen governor of Massachusetts, and had emigrated to the colony, leaving his wife in England, to follow him when her health would allow.

When Richard Lyman immigrated to Connecticut, the surrounding country was thickly covered with the aboriginal inhabitants ; the Pequods alone numbering seven hundred warriors. They had evinced a hostile spirit, and several years before, had murdered the crew of a small vessel, in the Connecticut river.

Bancroft, in his History of the United States, thus speaks of the emigration by the party to which Lyman was attached : "Never before had the forests of America witnessed such a scene. But the journey was begun too late in the season : the winter was so unusually early, and severe, that provisions could not arrive by way of the river ; imperfect shelter had been provided, cattle perished in great numbers ; and the men suffered such privations that many of them, in the depth of winter, abandoned their newly chosen homes, and waded through the snows to the seaboard.

"Yet, in the opening of the next year, a government was organized and civil order established ; and the budding of the trees and the springing of the grass were signals for a greater emigration to the Connecticut."

From such unpropitious beginnings, must we date the establishment of the Lyman family in America. God smiled upon the enterprise, and who shall set limits to its wonderful results ?

These feeble colonists have become a mighty nation. Where stood those primeval forests, now stand populous cities, flourishing towns and villages, and smiling farms and farmhouses, while the journey that then required fourteen days for its accomplishment is now made by the iron horse, several times, every day.

*About 7,300 of these descendants are now recorded in this Genealogy. Before this work is finished, we hope to give the number living at the present time.

I find the names of a committee, composed of Lymans, residing in England, in Canada, and in twenty-three states and territories of the Union. Who can estimate the vast amount and extent of influence for good in favor of morality, Christianity, the church, and civil and religious liberty, which, during all these two hundred and forty years, have been sent forth from the descendants of Richard Lyman, to bless the country?

We may learn from this brief retrospective review, that, with the blessing of Almighty God resting upon it, the smallest rivulet may become the mighty river. We perceive also, what means and influences may be set in motion, by one earnest, devoted, faithful man.

With hearts overflowing with gratitude, let us improve the lessons of this hour. Deeply impressed with a sense of our individual obligations and responsibilities, let us carry away with us, from Mount Tom, a fixed resolution to bring no discredit, by any act of ours, upon the good name of the Lymans, and, with God's help, to do what we can, to promote the welfare of our beloved country, and the happiness of mankind.

ADDRESS ON THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE LYMANS, BY REV.
LYMAN COLEMAN, D.D.

The love of kindred and country is common to man of whatever character, condition, or climate ; whether savage or civilized, in the frozen regions of the north, or on the parched desert, he clings with fond affection to his native land and kindred tribe. Before our ancestral home in this beautiful valley was enlightened by learning, or blessed with religion, it was moistened by the tears of the savage, as he wandered from the graves of his fathers, and the forests and friends of his youth.

Breathes there the man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said
This is my own, my native land !
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned,
From wandering on a foreign strand ?

* * * * *
Land of my sires ! what mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band,
That knits me to thy rugged strand.

With filial reference and affection we come back to the home of our fathers. With patriotic pride we come to this good land which they loved so well. In obedience to the noblest instincts of our nature we gladly come to this reunion, this greeting of surviving friends. We come to talk of our noble ancestry, of their stern trials and their toils in preparing the goodly heritage which they have transmitted to us. We come to speak of their piety, their patriotism, and deeds of daring in defense of their homes, and the freedom of their country. With heart and mind crowded with reflections on the present and memories of the past, we engage in these duties, conversing now, with the living, and now, communing with the dead.

Many of us, as we turn away from this place, will visit the scenes of our childhood, to hear and to tell the story of our childish companions. But the visages of these, if they yet survive, we shall find so marred that in their frosty brow, furrowed cheek, and trembling limbs we shall scarce discern the lingering lineaments of their youth. Our most familiar friends will be our native hills, their woods and streams, and sequestered glens, the village church and the churchyard, "where the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep." Conversing with these we shall visit the hamlet, the house, and the home of our forefathers. We shall live over with them the life they lived in their rude simplicity. We shall sit by their frugal board, and talk of their tireless toil and self-denial; their firm and faithful training of ourselves, mixed "with admonition due," by which they led us up to a vigorous, virtuous manhood. In sad, yet pleasing illusion conversing thus with the old folks at home, we naturally fall back into days bygone and live over again our childhood and our youth.

Dear lovely bow'rs of innocence and ease,
 Seats of my youth when ev'ry sport could please :
 How often have I loiter'd o'er th' green,
 Where humble happiness endear'd each scene !
 How often have I paused on ev'ry charm,
 The sheltered cot, the cultivated farm :
 The never-failing brook, the busy mill,
 The decent church that top't the neighb'ring hill.

At home thus in our native village, charmed with the endearing memories of the old folks themselves, we can best appreciate their varied virtues, and characteristics which we here commemorate.

The physical features of our ancestors and some genealogical statistics respecting them may claim a passing notice.

Nothing is known of the personal appearance of Richard our common ancestor, but the early generations of his descendants appear to have been a tall, stalwart race, well developed in large proportions, with strong, trusty hands capable of carving their way through life. The largest of the family on record brought down the scales far above 300lbs., requiring eight bearers to convey his body to the grave. The tallest of the family was six feet and four inches in height; many have been six feet and upwards. Some have been men of gigantic powers who might have stood against Ajax himself for agility and strength, and wrestled even with Hercules for his club.

Their limbs were cast in manly mould,
 For hardy sports, or contest bold.

For longevity, the Lymans have not been particularly distinguished, though many have passed beyond four-score years, some of whom are present with us to-day. Of more than 7,000, not one has attained to 100 years. One, however, a lineal descendant from the family, has passed that extreme limit of human life. This venerable lady, Mrs. Robinson of Lebanon, Conn., died Sept. 1st. 1871, aged one hundred and two years, one month, and twenty days. Her mother was a Lyman, the youngest daughter of Lieut. Jonathan of Lebanon. This daughter, Ann, married a Tiffany of Norwich Landing, where Mrs. (Tiffany) Robinson was born July 11. 1769, the only survivor of the sixth generation. She remembered many events of the war of the Revolution, especially those which occurred in Lebanon. As the governor of the state then resided there, and was the only legal colonial governor; and as the council of safety of which the governor was chairman, which was to act when the legislature was not in session, sat there more than nine hundred days during these seven years of the war, Lebanon had some claim to be substantially the capital of the state, and was a centre of intelligence and of important events. She remembered the fact that the larger part of a legion of French cavalry was stationed there in 1780, and recalled the names and appearance of the officers. Thus she connected us directly with that remote and now historical period, and enabled us vividly to conceive of its events.

Her funeral was very numerously attended at the brick church, Sunday morning; many being present from other parts of the town and from surrounding towns; a testimony to the interest with which she was regarded.

Of the Lymans proper the venerable mother of the speaker is foremost on the record for longevity. After a married life with her only husband of almost 66 years, and surviving him 10 years, she rested from her labors at the age of 95 wanting a few weeks, having been a housekeeper more than 70 years, and a communicant in the church nearly the same length of time.

The most prolific branch of the family is that of Richard, the oldest of the six grandsons of Richard.<sup>1</sup> He settled at Lebanon, Conn., and from that wonderful hive his descendants have swarmed out over all the land; two thousand seven hundred and thirty-four of this fraternity are recorded in this book, about twice the number of the posterity of any other grandson of Richard. The most prolific family in our connection is that of Dea. Stephen Lyman of Chester in this state, father of our venerable friend, here present, Dea. Samuel Lyman of Southampton, who himself has given the record of 337 of his father's descendants all having sprung into life from one within the range of 100 years. At the same rate of increase, what an army one hundred years hence from this one family! But the earliest generations, in all their hardships and poverty, have been the most prolific. The ratio of increase has steadily decreased as successive generations have increased in wealth and luxury. The largest issue from one marriage is fifteen. The total number of descendants of Richard the ancestor of all the Lyman Family cannot be estimated even by probable conjecture. The record of 7,000 has been collected. Many who have been addressed have neglected, and some have peremptorily refused to give any record of their families or those of their ancestors. The descendants of the daughters bearing other names cannot be estimated with any accuracy, but the sum total who, in 250 years, have sprung from the original immigrant, including the living and the dead, may be not far from 15,000 more or less.

Could that venerable patriarch, disheartened by all his losses and sufferings, wandering, "sick and melancholy," in the wilderness in search of a solitary home, who only by "God's mercy obtained some little reviving before he died" — could he have beheld in vision this great and glad assembly of his children, how would his sorrowing soul have expanded with wonder, gratitude and joy! Well that distant vision may be to him now a present, a blest reality. Perhaps from his orb on high he has, not only a full vision of this scene, rejoicing with us in gladness of the day, but beholding the great assembly of all his children who, both on earth and in heaven, but one communion make — strikes his harp to the loudest, sweetest notes of praise to God for all his goodness and grace to himself and his family.

The adventurous, enterprising spirit of the Lymans, should be noted as a prominent characteristic.

In every enterprise for the settlement of the country and development of its resources they have been pioneers. After the settlement of the other Hamptons, east, west and south, Durham, Goshen, Salisbury, and Lebanon, Conn., became early centres of emigration to the Green Mountains, in Massachusetts, and Vermont, to New Hampshire, and the Canadas. Age after age they have had a quick, attentive ear to the rallying cry, Westward, ho! and have been among the first to start in full pursuit of that ever receding, expanding, undiscovered country, THE FAR WEST. Within the memory even of some of us, the far west was just beyond Albany, the German Flats on the Mohawk, the Johnstown purchase, including Utica, and Oneida county. Within the lifetime of the speaker, the whole city of Utica was purchased for twelve cents an acre and regarded as a poor speculation at that. The original contractor, ridiculed by his neighbors for wasting his money on lands distant, inaccessible and useless as the mountains in the moon, gave up his bargain in despair. Next, the region of Black river became the far west, then the Genesee country and Holland purchase became the land of invitation, then New Connecticut in Ohio, and Pennsylvania, and finally the whole state of Ohio, then the great north-west territory and its subdivisions, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and the territories beyond. Into all these regions the Lymans have pressed foremost to possess the land, and in them all they or their descendants are still found. They have traversed the broad plains beyond the Mississippi, explored the remotest parks and recesses of the Rocky mountains, scaled their tremendous heights, and spread themselves out over the western slopes of the mountains to the Pacific coast where every river and stream rolls down its golden sands. Indeed it may be questioned whether there is a state or territory of the Union which has not been marked by the footprints of the Lymans, always excepting Alaska, that God-forsaken land, swathed in perpetual mist, drenched with rain, or encased in thick-ribbed ice and snow.

The hardships, self-denials and sufferings of their pioneer and frontier life is another characteristic of the family.

Cold New England winters passed in rude shanties with crevices open to the wintry winds wide enough for the hand to be thrust through the walls into the open air, the garments on going to rest laid by in a compact roll to protect them from the snow that filtered in by night, the bed in the morning covered with a counterpane of driven snow which melted as it fell upon the face of the sleepers without disturbing their slumbers; these are the familiar nursery tales of frontier life, often told in the ears of the speaker as the training in which his own infancy was nursed.

Long journeys of six weeks with an ox team, in a covered sled, the palace car by day and the sleeping car by night, running through a trackless wilderness only passable in winter when swamps and sloughs and streams are bridged over by the enginery of the severest cold; these were the luxuries of pioneer travel in the new settlements. One goes alone into the forest eighteen miles from the nearest neighbor, driving a young beef creature which is to give up its life for the support of the adventurous pioneer; the meat is salted in a trough cut out of a tree felled for the purpose; the hide, spread on the roof of his cabin, is soon stolen by the wolves; and the cabin itself, on returning from his day work, the solitary backwoodsman finds occupied by an Indian who instantly levels his rifle to his breast, but the savage is overpowered before he has time to fire, and, divested of his rifle, is sent peaceably away. Six months the brave pioneer labors alone in the solitude and perils of the wilderness, and thus begins the settlement of one of the rich, flourishing towns of Ohio.

Another goes two days' journey into the wilderness, returning from time to time for provisions which he bears on his shoulder, camping by night on the cold earth with the canopy of heaven for the curtains of his bed chamber. This veteran still lives, the patriarch of a numerous progeny and a flourishing settlement in Pennsylvania, delighting to tell the story of his frontier life, facetiously recognizing the kindness of the landlord who charged him nothing either for entertainment or lodgings. One dies of consumption contracted by similar exposures and hardships. Another kindles a fire at night by the side of a rock from which a mass, loosened by the heat, falls upon the sleeper whose slumbers will only be broken by the trump of God awaking the dead to life. Another goes with his ox team twenty-four miles into the forest, sleeps under his cart until he builds a log cabin and begins a flourishing settlement in Minnesota.

But time would fail to tell of the endless hardships, the heroic daring and dangers of pioneer life, the horrors of the war whoop, tomahawk and scalping knife; of the labors of the field prosecuted with rifle at hand; women and children hurrying, horror stricken, into stockades for protection; guns stacked in the church preliminary to the worship of God on the sabbath, and all the barbarities of savage warfare. More of this in the Genealogy.

Among the mental characteristics of the family may be enumerated a highly nervous, mercurial temperament.

This has often arisen to such intensity as to disturb the due balance of the mind, sinking sometimes to a morbid depression of spirits and again rising to an unnatural exhilaration, not unfrequently ending in insanity, sometimes in raving madness. So frequent and far-spread has been this mental bias in different branches of our brotherhood, that we must accept a tendency to insanity as a characteristic of the Lyman family. But this, be it remembered, is the infirmity of high intellectual powers: men of the finest intellect are oftentimes insane. It requires a man of mind and spirit, of ardent impulsive temperament, and highly wrought mental powers to be the subject of insanity. Such a fever is never stirred in the veins of a man of sluggish, torpid mould, whose mind is dull as night and dark as Erebus; you can not, perhaps, expect much of such a man, but of one thing be assured, he will never go crazy.

But the temperament which we contemplate, in its normal action inspires great buoyancy of spirits, irrepressible elasticity under adversity, and dauntless energy and enterprise in the pursuits of life. In domestic and social life it manifests itself in habitual cheerfulness mingled with a quiet humor, facetiousness and pleasantry which relishes a jest, a joke, a ready retort and repartee, with a dash sometimes of eccentricity, for which the Lymans are somewhat famous.

We cannot, perhaps, ascribe to them the highest order of inventive genius, the profoundest insight into the laws of nature and the mechanical powers, which calls into play new combinations of machinery, or undeveloped natural laws that open unknown avenues of industry and undeveloped sources of national wealth, making the inventor the benefactor of the world. But we may ascribe to them many useful inventions and labor saving machines, from the wringer in the wash tub to the reaper in the field, the threshing machine, the steam engine and the telescope. Many of these inventions are of curious workmanship, requiring the most skillful manipulation and combination of mechanical powers. Not a few have been highly remunerative, and amply repaid the time and skill of the fortunate inventor. Others evince surprising ingenuity and skill. How wonderful the skill that can accurately record the weight of each car in the train of a lightning express as it sweeps by like some heavenly body wandering from its course in the heavens!

Next in the enumeration may be specified great fixedness of character and firmness of principle as a characteristic trait of the Lymans.

Slow they may be in coming to a conclusion, tenacious of their established modes of thought and "very much set in their way." How often has this very expression been given as the characteristic of some patriarch of our family. Sometimes this fixedness may become a dogged obstinacy, and ripen into a character thoroughly untractable and detestable, — none more detestable than a willful man perversely conscientious in a bad cause. Reason with him and he only becomes more unreasonable. Ply him with arguments, press upon him your views of duty and you only confirm him in his own. You can do nothing with him, but let him alone; handle him as you would a porcupine, leave off before you begin. You may perhaps find in the family some of this character, but even this is an infirmity that leans to virtue's side. Rightly directed, such decision of character is the noblest characteristic of a great and good man.

Enter into the history of the patriarchal representatives of the family and you will find that in the political, religious and sensational tumults of church and society, they have stood firm as the rock on the beach upon which the billows harmlessly beat and break. Amid all the commotions of society such an one stands fixed and immovable as yonder holyoke resting in settled tranquillity on its own immovable base.

Our family are worthy of an honorable memorial, for their patriotic public spirit.

In the early, forming periods of our new settlements, many an one has been the pillar of the church and society, the life and soul of the settlement, foremost in organizing the government of the town or county, establishing the regular administration of justice, and the ordinances of religion; foremost in opening roads, and lines of public travel; in erecting the school house, the church, the court house, the academy, the college. They have been strict observers of the sabbath, steady attendants upon public worship, and liberal supporters of every patriotic enterprise, the friend of the friendless, the father of the fatherless, the counselor of the poor, the stay and support of the community.

The family have an honorable military and patriotic record.

In every war of our country, they have bravely borne their part. In the Indian and French wars, in the war of the Revolution, of 1812, and the Rebellion, they have left the field, the shop, the counting room, the bar, the pulpit, at their country's call to the battle field in her defense. ever ready to rally round her flag, whether in the heat of battle or in the forlorn hope storming the stronghold of the foe. From the town of Lebanon, Conn., containing only about 2,000 inhabitants, more than 500 were, at one time, in the ranks of the Revolutionary army.

Lieut. John commanded the first expedition against the Indians from Northampton, in the famous Falls fight, above Deerfield. Gen. Phincas Lyman of Durham, Conn., was for a time commander in chief of the American forces. By his generalship and bravery at the battle of Lake George, though holding a subordinate office, he gained a decisive victory over the French forces, taking their commander, Baron Dieskau, a prisoner of war. He possessed military talents of the highest order, second only to our own great Washington.

Gen. Daniel Lyman, colonel in the continental army, lawyer, judge, and chief justice, assisted at the capture of Ticonderoga, Crown point and St. John's and was president of the Society of Cincinnati. Col. Moses Lyman of Goshen, Conn., was detailed to watch the movements of Burgoyne on the night before the battle, and was the first to report his change of position which opened the way for the battle and the surrender of Burgoyne. For these important services Col. Lyman was commissioned as a special messenger to bear to Gen. Washington the tidings of the victory. He was also commander of the guard over Major André; and on the night previous to his execution, Benjamin Lyman of Easthampton, Mass., stood guard over that gallant, distinguished and unfortunate captive. Another was an aid to Gen. Putnam in the battle of Bunker hill; so efficient and daring that Putnam said, that with a thousand of such men he would drive every red coat out of the land. Major Lyman of Vergennes, Vt., at the battle of Plattsburgh bravely fought with heroic endurance at the risk of his life. Every grade of office in military life, from corporal to commander-in-chief, has at some time been occupied by one or more of the Lyman family.

Great numbers crowded the ranks of the noble army of volunteers for the suppression of the late rebellion. Four brothers from one family, all married men, with young wives and children dependent on them for their daily bread, went into the fight, braved every hardship, every danger of long campaigns and bloody battle-fields, and all returned unharmed to the embrace of their families. Nine from East Hampton, Mass., enlisted in their country's service and four of them, on rebel soil, gave up their lives in her defense.

Not a few in this assembly gave their gallant sons at their country's call. The first-born of our honored chairman, a youth of lofty talents, rarest culture and highest promise passed bravely through twenty-five battles, arose high in rank and then, laden with honors, gave up his young life on the field of battle in defense of the flag and freedom of his country.

The ladies were, if possible, more daring, more devoted than the men. One rode alone twelve miles on horseback in a dark rainy night through a rebel country, past the enemy's lines to convey important intelligence to the loyal army. Another saved the life of her loyal father by throwing her sacred person between him and the weapon of the rebel assassin aimed at his breast in her own parlor.

Nor must we forget the little drummer boy who at the age of thirteen, before he was able himself to bear arms, joined the army that, by the tap of his drum, he might summon others of stronger arm and firmer foot to the deadly combat. The brave boy quailed not at the shock of contending ranks, but everywhere when needful was heard, rising above the din of battle, his rat-tat-too rallying the lines to march on to their "gory bed, or to victory." All honor to the noble mother who gave the child to her country at this tender age. All honor to the brave boy who firmly stood where the bravest might well have quailed.

But the crowning excellence of this family is and ever has been their purity of morals and high Christian character.

In these virtues all and each of the six branches of the family have been distinguished. No exemption is claimed for them from the depravity and sin which infest the race. Instances of irreligion and impiety and immorality there may have been. But of the thousands whose record has been collected, none has been convicted of high crimes and misdemeanors; none has suffered the extreme penalties of the law; not one is known to have been a defiant, scoffing unbeliever; one only, so far as the record goes, has filled a drunkard's grave. Other inebriates there may have been ; we have not been careful to search into the secret history of individuals or of families, nor would we if we could expose each less pleasing feature of their characters. If any have done evil let it not live after them in the memory of surviving friends, nor be chronicled in history. But we may speak of the virtues of our forefathers, their high conscientiousness, their firmness of principle, their devout and humble piety, and their steadfast adherence to the faith of their fathers. None better understood the chief end of man. They learned it early in the catechetical instructions of the patriarchal fireside when Sunday schools were unknown. None have more faithfully sought or more fervently prayed for grace so to live as to "glorify God and enjoy Him forever." Few, very few, have ever swerved from the faith of their fathers to other Christian denominations ; fewer still have denied that faith, or received another gospel which yet is no gospel. One is a Roman Catholic priest, one has been a Mormon, one of the twelve apostles of that sect whom he has now abandoned, and a few of his connections are still enrolled among the Latter Day Saints of Salt Lake City.

But whole households, generation after generation, have without an exception professed the faith, the hopes, the personal piety of their ancestors. Many families, already passed beyond the flood, are safely gathered there we doubt not, an unbroken household in heaven. And many a lingering remnant of death-divided families awaits only the summons to go and complete again the circle of his own family in that far off sinless land to which they have been received before him.

But this visit with the old folks at home will be incomplete and unsatisfactory unless we go "to meeting" with them on Sunday. The good man goes on horseback, with his good wife on pillion behind him, a child, or grand-child in one arm while the other holds her securely in her seat behind her husband. The boys and girls are trudging silently along barefoot with shoes and stockings in hand to keep them neat and clean and free from useless wear until the old square meeting house, with horse block hard by coming into view, stiff, stately and cold on the green, becomes the signal for completing with stockings and shoes their Sunday suits. Within the church there are the old square pews compactly arranged like cattle pens at a fair, with high backs, and seats hung on hinges for the people conveniently to lean on the railing during the prayer of half an hour or an hour's length ; then at the conclusion the startling rattle of seats falling down awakes the profoundest slumbers into which any in the prayer have fallen, bending over the railings of the pews. These pews have been duly "dignified" by a committee appointed for the purpose, and the families carefully assorted and seated according to their "ages, state and parentage." The young folks according to their sex are assigned to the opposite galleries, and the old bachelors and unmarried maidens, — well they are seated under the stairs leading to the galleries, or, as a kind of small change, they fill every vacant gap about the house. There is the old pulpit and the winding staircase leading up to its towering height. The deacons are in their seats below and the man of God, perched high above, with the huge sounding board overhead to reflect the preacher's voice, as he, for an hour or more, through fifteen or twenty heads and as many inferences, screams out to his hearers down below, many of whom, in spite of their "smelling bottles," dill and caraway seeds have fallen fast asleep, under the dead monotony of his dull discourse.

The service ended, a short intermission follows, spent in the sabbath houses built for this purpose on the common. Here the family take their Sunday dinner, which has been carefully brought in one side of the saddlebags, balanced on the other by milk in a wooden bottle; the remainder of the intermission is occupied with the discussion of the sermon and the reading aloud of some of the children until the services of the afternoon begin.

But we are admonished that the hour has come when we must break this charming illusion in which, communing with former generations, we have again lived over our childhood and renewed departed joys — departed never to return. Farewell, departed scenes! Native village and sacred homes, farewell! Venerable ancestors! Kindred dear passed unto the skies, farewell! a long farewell!

Swiftly, oh, how swiftly, the generations of men are swept away on the ceaseless tide of time. They rise, like the waves of the ocean, roll awhile on its tumultuous waters, alternately gilded by the sunbeam and darkened by the storm, then sink and mingle with their original element undistinguished, unheeded. Time, in its ceaseless course, has swept away seven generations of our family, and we of the eighth, standing now on the verge of dark eternity, shall sink soon in the devouring depths of that dread ocean that lies outspread before us. As a collective assembly we shall never meet again. Other generations may gather here as we do now when we are gathered with the dead. But though a man die, yet shall he live again. And you, ye sons of sainted sires in heaven, here on this goodly mountain, now in glad communion met for one brief day — may you all — without exception — all — meet again on Mount Zion above, in a reunion infinitely more perfect, more joyous, to be prolonged and yet prolonged through blest eternity's long day.

CLOSING ADDRESS BY THE CHAIRMAN.

The hour of eleven having arrived, on the morning of the second day, the moderator, the Hon. Lyman Tremain, arose and addressed the meeting as follows :

My friends, I am admonished by the hand on yonder clock, that the hour has arrived when I am obliged to separate from you, and take the cars for my home. But before I leave you, I desire to express my acknowledgments and thanks to those thoughtful members of the family by whom the idea of calling this meeting of the Lyman family was conceived and has been carried into execution.

It was a happy thought, and notwithstanding the inauspicious weather which we had yesterday in the grove, I am sure that in the future, we shall forget that, and that the occasion will be remembered with gratitude and satisfaction by all who have had the good fortune to participate in its pleasures and privileges.

We have, some of us, been enabled, for the first time, to visit the beautiful locality where we assembled yesterday, to behold the delightful scenery in the valley of the Connecticut, which surrounds it, to renew old acquaintances, and to form new ones with those who are related to us by the ties of a common kindred; we have, also, learned from the Rev. Dr. Coleman's excellent address, many interesting and valuable facts, concerning the characteristics and history of the family, of which we might, otherwise, have remained uninformed. I speak, I am sure, the sentiments of all present when I add that we never can be too grateful to the Doctor, for his willingness to continue the work of publishing the book containing the history of the family, notwithstanding the great affliction under which he is suffering, from the recent death of his wife and child, in which he has our most profound sympathy.

And now the time has come, when we are called upon to separate and return to our respective homes. perhaps, many of us, never more to meet again, on earth. But we shall carry away with us, renewed regard for our New England homes, for our New England ancestry, and for those great truths which had their American origin, in this section of our country.

In many respects, this family gathering and others of a similar character, serve to symbolize or typify the nation to which we belong, which is only an aggregation of numerous families. Many, and perhaps most of those who have gathered here, to-day, had their birth place, and have their present residence, outside of the boundaries of New England. Their social associations, their pecuniary interests, their local attachments, and all those natural and honorable feelings of state pride which are connected with the land of our birth place, unite us with other and perhaps distant states. Indeed, our union with New England, rests mainly upon that sentiment, wholly incapable of definition or analysis, which draws us with its silken and mysterious, but powerful bonds, to the home of our ancestors. And yet, I know that no unjust censures could be uttered in our presence against New England, nor any blow be aimed at her welfare, prosperity and happiness, that would not occasion emotions of grief, and be regarded by us all almost as a personal injury. (Much applause). And in such sentiments, everywhere prevailing, throughout our country, lies, I think, one of the secret sources of our national union, and its strength, cohesion and perpetuity.

We all remember, that at the commencement of our late civil war, there were those, among us, who claimed that it was the restless, meddling spirit of interference, in the affairs of others, which characterized the New Englander, that had caused the war, and the sovereign remedy recommended by these wise-acres for existing evils, was the formation of a new union with "New England left out in the cold." These shallow and superficial quacks were mainly those who sympathized with the rebellion. They wholly failed to comprehend the true nature, or the gigantic magnitude of the great contest, and it was not long, before the prompt, the patriotic, and the noble efforts made by New England to preserve our common country, silenced these senseless clamors.

It has been related of a prominent Ohio politician, who had, thoughtlessly, repeated the outcry against New England, that when he came to look around him, and consider the elements of which the community was composed, and when he came to take out from among the people those who were born in New England, or were the descendants of New Englanders, those who had married New England wives, or the children of New England parents, and, also, those who had been instructed by New England school masters, or school mistresses, he found that those who were left would not amount to much, and so he concluded to say no more about "leaving New England out in the cold." (Laughter and applause).

Indeed should that day ever come when a new union should be formed that did not embrace the territory of New England, the object sought to be accomplished, by her foes, would be only partially effected. It would still be necessary to annihilate those great political doctrines of liberty and equality which have been disseminated, throughout the length and breadth of the land, by the influence, the teachings, and the example of New England. You must then change the entire structure of your government, and undermine the great bulwarks of popular rights, which lie at the very foundation of our republican institutions.

When you shall have succeeded in destroying the system of local self-government by town meetings, which is the child of New England; when you shall have destroyed free schools, free churches, freedom of speech, and a free press; when you have subverted that inherent love of fair play, and of political and religious liberty that constitute the essential elements in the character of our people, then and not till then, will New England be really left out in the cold.

These great changes once wrought, and our boasted free institution would be like the play of Hamlet, with Hamlet's part omitted: the shell without the oyster, the body, without the soul.

True you might, then, have peace and order, but it would be the peace of the grave, the order that prevailed at Warsaw. Indifference on the part of the people as to public and political affairs, would take the place of that eternal vigilance which, we are taught, is the price of liberty.

True, we might, under the new order of things, allow the few to govern the many, and thus be relieved from a world of responsibility and care. We might sleep on, while corruption was destroying the very vitals of the nation. We might hear the pleasant signals of our sentinels declaring that all is well, at the moment when scheming and ambitious men were plotting the destruction of our liberties, or corruption, ignorance and vice had already fired the train which they had prepared, while the flames were ready to burst forth and destroy the government of our fathers.

True, we might, no longer, be disturbed by the strong and stimulating breezes that sometimes blow over the country, from the hills and mountains of New England, but these, I think, are far better than the nauseous odors that indicate incipient decay, and approaching dissolution.

For myself, I would not substitute that robust, and, if you please, rough spirit of New England equality, that declares one man to be as good as another, for the rule of the best king or queen that ever sat upon a throne. Give me that searching and restless spirit of investigation which is the attribute of an enlightened popular liberty, although it transgresses, at times, the ordinary rules of courtesy, rather than the popular indifference, bigotry, superstition and intolerance which, for so many years, have impeded the progress of human rights and Christian civilization.

The day has gone by, I trust forever, when we shall again hear the shameful proposal mooted to leave any part of our beloved country out in the cold. The union and every part of it has been cemented by the best blood of the American people.

Let us, then, not be ashamed of our New England origin or our New England ancestors. The soil that we find throughout that little cluster of commonwealths, which we call New England, may not be as rich as the prairie lands of the great northwest, or the fertile valley of the Mississippi, but it was in that soil that the seeds of liberty were planted on this continent, and there the roots have penetrated deep into the earth. Nor need we be disturbed by the ridicule which is sometimes uttered against the puritans of New England.

What if they do say, that those old fellows were accustomed to whip their beer barrels because the beer would work on Sundays. Better do that we answer, than to spend Sunday in guzzling down villainous bad whisky that will "kill at forty rods," that leads to rioting and drunkenness, and causes broken bones, bruised heads and bloody noses. (Laughter and applause).

Permit me, in conclusion, to say that the best advice I can give to the youth of the Lyman family is, that they may display, in their future career, those same sterling qualities of courage, patience, endurance and heroic devotion to the principles of civil and religious freedom, which were so honorably exemplified by their ancestors, in the early history of New England.
